Should U. S. Underwrite Housing Segregation?

Supreme Court Refuses To Review Charges Federal Money Used To Support Bias

By LOUIS LAUTIER (NNPA)

The United States Supreme Court refused Monday to review a Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals ruling that private developers are not barred by the Constitution from excluding colored persons from urban renewal projects.

The Court of Appeals had ruled that private builders, in disposing of housing built by them in Gadsden, Ala., redevelopment area are not subject to Constitutional provisions forbidding states to engage in racial discrimination or segregation.

Four colored property owners sued the city of Gadsden for declaratory judgement and an injunction to bar the city from carrying out its redevelopment plan.

(pick up at 3rd paragraph: "The property owners sued the city of Gadsden.")

The property owners sued the City of Gadsden in the Federal District Court for a declaratory judgment and an injunction against the carrying out of the urban redevelopment plans of the city. They attacked the plans on the ground that they foster enforced racial segregation.

The plans were approved for federal financial assistance by the Urban Renewal Administration, a component of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and a contract for financial aid was entered into between the Federal Government and the Greater Gadsden Housing Authority on Aug. 28, 1957.

The District Court found that the plans were not intended to and did not have the effect of segregating colored and white people and held that the private developers, in disposing of the housing constructed by them in the redeveloped areas in accordance with the city's plans, would not be subject to the constitutional prohibitions on state action.

The Court of Appeals, by a 2-to-1 decision, affirmed. Circuit Judge Richard T. Rives, an Alabaman, the third member of the court, affirmed in part and dissented in part.

Judges Rives found that the plans contemplated actual segregation but affirmed the denial of an injunction which would have prevented construction.

Judges Rives dissented on the ground that the District Court was clearly erroneous with respect to the acts of private redevelopers in the light of several applicable decisions of the Supreme Court.

He held that the private redevelopers in this case are not free to discriminate since the plans, which are "governmentally conceived, governmentally aided and governmentally regulated," will not be completed until the property passes out of the hands of the relevelopers.

He held that the colored property owners are now entitled to a judgment declaring their rights.

Each of the four persons who sued owns a house in which he resides in the Birmingham street area, one of the sites to be redeveloped. Each of the 50 other colored persons, on whose behalf the suit was brought, owns a house in one of the areas planned for redevelopment.

The agreements between the city and the Housing Authority disclosed that for the Authority to carry out the plans the assistance of both the Federal Government and the City is required.

Loans are needed from the Federal Government to defray the cost of the project. Upon completion of the project and repayment of the loans, the Federal Government would contribute two-thirds of the net cost of the project.

The city would make certain grants-in-aid in a total amount equal to at least one-third of the net cost

Johnnie Moore, 45, dies suddenly; Point worker

Johnnie Moore, 45, 225 E. Pratt St., a worker and an employee of the Sparrows Point plant of Bethlehem Steel Co., was taken suddenly ill at work on Sunday, and was dead shortly after arrival at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

His wife, Mrs. Frances Moore, told the AFRO her husband had not been previously ill, although he had complained of shortness of breath three days before his death.

Funeral services were held on Thursday afternoon at Charity Baptist Church where Mr. Moore was a deacon and formerly sang on the choir.

The pastor, the Rev. J. J. Moore, officiated. Burial was in Garden of Memories Memorial Park.

A NATIVE of Blunt's Creek, N.C., Mr. Moore was the son of Mr. Nance Moore and the late Bradley Moore.

Before he began work at the Point, Mr. Moore sang with the Elk Christian Quartet.

He was also a member of Hiram Grand Lodge of Masons.

BESIDES HIS wife and mother, Mr. Moore is survived by two daughters and a son.

They are Mrs. Essie M. James, and Mrs. Nancy V. Bryant; and Johnnie Moore Jr., Carver High student.

Also surviving are: Four sisters: Mrs. Elizabeth Williams, Arnett Nichols, Farella, Mariorah and Lelerenne Battle of the home in N.C., and a twin brother, Willie. Also, two other brothers, Brandis Jr., and Earl.

Miss Margaret Monroe buried on Thursday

Miss Margaret Monroe, 56, 1301 Poplar Grove St., member of an old Baltimore family, was buried on Thursday in Mt. Auburn Cemetery following funeral services at A. N. Fremont Funeral Home.

Miss Monroe died on Sunday after a lingering illness. She attended Shiloh Baptist church for years.

Miss Monroe was the last surviving daughter of the late Robert and Arrena Monroe. The family resided for years at 614 N. Carrollton Ave. Her father was one of the city's first egg candlers.

OF THE ten children four boys and five girls, only two survive: Mrs. Hubert and Mrs. Zo Monroe, both of Baltimore, survive.

Older Baltimoreans may remember Miss Monroe's half brother, Clifton Seeney, who conducted a store in the 800 block Druid Hill Ave. for 38 years before his death in 1943.

Besides the two brothers Miss Monroe is survived by an aunt, Mrs. Edna Thomas; two newphews, George and Clifton Seeney, and four nieces, Miss Evelyn Brooks, and Mesdames Hilda Whitsuntt, Ann and Cecelia and Regina Fox.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY
By MILTON E. ELICKSON
"WE CANNOT DO ALL THINGS. . . ." Virgil
Although many people are blessed with more than a modicum of versatility and give an outward show of being able to cope with any task or situation that may arise, there are times when they must face problems beyond their abilities.
Actually, the majority of us are probably capable of handling much more than we might first imagine; having strength and skills which lie dormant until jostled into activity when the chips are down.
However, capable and versatile as we might be, it is foolhardy to take unto ourselves personal attention to every detail of every task that confronts us. If we look about us we will usually find that there are many skills and strong hands eager to help us if they are but called into play.
When one close to you is lost, ELLIOTT FUNERAL HOME stands ready to aid you with a complete and comprehensive funeral service that attends to all details. Many extra services are to be expected at ELLIOTT FUNERAL HOME, 1128 N. Caroline St. Phone EAstern 7-6590.
