Slacks Back at 16 Below

CARLIN, NEV. — Schoolgirls sent home for violating a policy against wearing trousers or slacks have won their point on appeal.

The girls pointed out the usual miniskirts were a bit drafty during current temperatures, which hover as low as 16 degrees below zero. School officials conceded trousers would be premissible when the mercury reads 15 degrees or below.

EMBASSY ROW

A Diplomatic Farewell Dinner

By LILLIAN WIGGINS

WASHINGTON

It was jokes and more jokes at the farewell dinner party given at the Embassy residence of the Ghanaian Ambassador and Mrs. E. M. Debrah Monday.

The occasion for gathering to afford Sir John Carter, the Ambassador of Guyana and Lady Carter an opportunity to say farewell, before departing for London on posting, to many Latin American, African and Caribbean Ambassadors.

Ambassador John Akar, the Ambassador of Sierra Leone, who is famous on Embassy Row for his witty humor, was, as usual, in rare form. He certainly was the life of the party.

Mid way in the dinner program, Ambassador Akar invoked laughter over the beginning and the end of his "football" days. Seems as though when he came to college here he had remarked that he played "football." Naturally, the coach needed an able player but when the ball was in play in the direction of the Ambassador, who had been a soccer player, he kicked the ball, and as the story goes, his popularity on the field was soon ended.

* * *

Since coming to Washington, he had been great not only on Embassy Row but to the many residents here in Washington who have had the pleasure of meeting this tall stately gentleman.

I had the good fortune of having the Ambassador as my escort into the dining room. He sat next to Mrs. Dorothy McCardle and the wife of the Mexican Ambassador and to my pleasure I sat between the Ambassador of the Ivory Coast and Ofield Duke of Dukes and Associates. Of course, Ofield and I are old friends and a couple years ago traveled together with the then Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey to 13 countries in Africa.

Also reminiscing over that African trip was Ambassador T. Ahoua of the Ivory Coast. He remembered that the plane was late in arriving and that he had stayed up until 3 a.m. when the plane arrived.

* * *

During the course of the dinner conversation, it was interesting to learn that Ambassador Akar's wife, Connie, was once a teacher, public relations consultant in the Ivory Coast, and the mother of six girls. She radiates warmth. For the dinner, which was black tie, she chose a pink crepe gown with a buffanted hairdo.

Peanut soup was the first course. Mrs. Debrah, though she has a cook, supervised and prepared most of the meal which consisted of fish, roast beef, cauliflower, peas, jell ed rice, garden salad and a hot pudding dessert.

Sir John, who sat to the right of Mrs. Debrah, was toasted by Ambassador Debrah. The Ambassador spoke of how sad the occasion was because Sir John and Lady Carter would be leaving the diplomatic community.

Likewise, Sir John made a toast to the new government of Ghana and the Ambassador.

* * *

Sir John, in measuring his success in Washington, jokingly told of his delemna when he first arrived on the diplomatic row.

"My mail," he said, "was being addressed to the Ambassador of Ghana." He remarked that the Ghanian Ambassador would always forward the letters with his compliments.

Sir John said he would measure. by getting mail of the Ghanaian Ambassador at the Embassy of Guyana, the success of his stay here.

"Now in the past few weeks I have received two pieces of mail intended for the Ghana Ambassador ... I would say that I have had some measure of success as Ambassador here," he concluded.

Following dinner, the Jamaican, Mexican, Trinidad and Togago, Switzerland, Ivory Coast, Sierra Leonean and Guyanan Ambassadors along with the host and Mr. Dukes retired to the drawing room while the ladies chatted over coffee in the reception room.

The delightful dinner gathering ended at 11 p.m. when Sir John and Lady Carter departed.

* * *

Their is much to be said of the Ghanaian Ambassador who has really been in the forefront of things on and off the Embassy Row circuit. He is in demand as a speaker and unless otherwise occupied with government business rarely turns down an engagement.

Likewise, he is well known throughout all segments. of the Washington community having been the guest of honor at many formal and informal private gatherings.

I am reminded that Ambassador Ahoua, in dinner conversation, said that he was always willing to speak before church organizations, club groupings, etc. "We want to know the community in which we live," he said.

An addition for the well dressed man at the dinner party was a Kente bow tie and handkerchief for Ambassador Debrah. His wife, Mrs. Debrah, wore a two-piece, dark colored, traditional dress.

Nigeria 10 pt. bf caps

The report is that the Federal forces in Nigeria have reduced the rebel held territory by more than a half. The estimated square mileage yet held by the rebel regime is approximate 2,000 miles. only recently the federal forces captured the areas around Onitsha and Aka.

From Onitsha to Aka, it's approximately 24 miles ... from Owerri, which is not secure, the distance to Onitsha is approximately 45 miles, and from Aba, to the North of Owierri, to Orlu, present military headquarters of the rebel regime, is approximately 100 miles. In between Aba and Orlu is Owerri. This area, for the moment, is the center of concentration.

Once the Federal forces secure Orlu and the Uli airstrip, the rebel stronghold will no doubt collapse.

Informed sources have said that between the Nigerian Rehabilitation Commission, headed by Timothy Omo-Bare and the international Red Cross, plans are in motion to rehabilitate and feed the nearly additional 5,000 more refugees.

It is reported that Ambassador Clyde Ferguson and his team is scheduled to leave for Lagos to review and re-assess the situation with regard to American aid in the food line.

Informed sources have also reported that since the statement of Secretary of State William Rogers that the Federal government has agreed to accept daylight flights into the rebel-held territory, the rebel leader has yet to accept and agree that this would be an acceptable way ... getting food into the starving masses caught behind the lines.

Illegal flights are yet, according to informed sources, being carried out without the approval of the Federal Military Government will bring for the Nigerians meat. What the New Year is anybody' guess!
