'Greenes' reception marks 50th wedding anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin A. Greene, married on Oct. 25, 1969, had a wedding reception in their Dennlyn Road home, Dec. 13.

Mrs. Greene is the former Nerwillie Dellam.

The hostess wore a green velvet dress, decored with a rhinestone buckle on the belt. Her shoes were silver and rhinestone-trimmed.

She completed the ensemble with a wrist corsage of a white orchid.

The reception had been delayed until the golden anniversary day of his parents, Mr. and William Greene, so that a dual celebration could be had. The young Greenes were married in the home of the latter.

The senior Mrs. Green selected an ensemble in oyster white, gold accessories and an orchid corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. William Greene, who were married in Bethlehem Baptist Church in 1919, are parents of two sons, Irvin and Melvin; eight grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

The grandchildren are Misses Brenda, LaVerne, Paulette, and Janis Greene; and Kim, Michael, Melvin Jr., and William III.

Great grandchildren are: Lidia, Keith and Carolyn Greene.

Guests at the reception included:

Mes. Nerwillie R. Bailey of Onaeeck, Va., mother of Mrs. Melvin Greene; her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. James Cartwright of Teaneck, N.J., Mrs. Essie Wise of Onaeeck, Va.

TV special explores city's hunger problem

The problem of malnutrition in Baltimore and Maryland will be explored on a WMAR-TV color special, "The Hidden Hunger," which will be aired on 10 p.m. Tuesday, Jan 13 on Channel 2.

Although a recent White House conference on food and nutrition focused attention on the plight of the nation's hungry, Baltimore was alerted to its own problem as early as September, 1968, when Dr. Matthew Taybaek, then Deputy Commissioner of Health, expessed official concern over the nutritional status of the city's children in a letter to the Mayor.

Quoting studies conducted by Dr. Ray Hepner of the University of Maryland and Dr. Alexander Schaffer, Tayback points out that one of every six children in Baltimore suffers from some nutritional defect, especially in low-income areas where iron and protein-rich foods are often too highly-priced for the limited budgets.

As a result, according to Dr. Hepner, "each year, 700 children enter the Baltimore school system who because of poor nutrition will be denied the opportunity to achieve their full potential . . . and the differ- approximately one million ence between a dependent and independent person is dollars per individual that the rest of society must pay."

The documentary also explores the problem of high food prices in ghetto areas, and the inauguration of several possible solutions to the hunger problem, such as the Department of Agriculture's food stamp program, creation of the Baltimore Task Force on Nutrition, and various efforts to provide school children with adequate lunches.

"The Hidden Hunger" was filmed and edited by Charles Purcell, written by George Gipe, and produced by Bob Cochrane, Assistant General Manager of WMAR-TV.

Driving classes open

The Adult Education Division of the Baltimore City Public Schools will offer courses in Driver Education at four evening centers throughout the city.

The schools involved are the City College Adult Center, the Dolfglass Adult Center, the Hamrstead Hill Adult Center and the Pimlico Adult Center.

Registration will be held on Jan. 19-22 at 7 p.m.

A course consisting of ten hours of classroom instruction and twelve hours of in-the-car training will be offered at each school. A fee of $50 is charged for persons 21 years of age and over.

Classes for youth 15½ through 20 years of age, whether in or out of school, will include 30 hours of classroom instruction, 12 hours of driving observation and 6 hours of behind-the-wheel practice.

High school students unable to take the course during the normal school hours will be admitted to the program with the permission of their day school principal. The fee for city residents is $35. The fee for county residents is $50.

For further information telephone 110 7-4000, Ext. 739 or 2778.
