on the ground in front of the emergency Room about 4:45 a.m."

Further reports show he was found on the ground in front of Lutheran by hospital personnel.

Bleeding from a hole in the chest, the unconscious man was taken inside to emergency and treated. He was officially admitted in critical condition moments later, records show.

Subsequent investigation assumes that Stanford was taken from the apartment house, dumped into the snow nearby. Scooped up by unknown persons in a car he was then dragged out and left at the doorway of the hospital.

Other reports claim the incident came as the result of rukus over "bad dice."

Persons "in the know" on the Avenue speculate that the attempted murder came as the result of Stanford's inheriting "The big deal on the Bottom" and Poppleton St. around Fayette and Saratoga Sts."

Stanford's mother is Mrs. Rose Gardner, one of the licensees of Club 600 Calhoun St., which is according to Federal Court records, the place owned "de facto" by Walter "Gangster" Webster, and deceased "Butch" Stanford.

"Butch" was slain in a S. Wheeler St. tavern shortly after 10 p.m. Nov. 4 by a security guard who, the court determined, gunned him down in self defense over the door fee of 50 cents.

Before the accused slayer, Henry Fulton Purnell, was found not guilty and released without a trial, his life was threatened.

Judge Solomon Liss who presided at a habeas corpus hearing said the threats had come to Purnell at the Baltimore City Jail and phone calls revealed plans to murder him on the way to court or in the courtroom.

Word was that many persons wished to avenge the death of Butch Stanford and police predicted violence would come somewhere along the line.

"Butch" Stanford was slain within a few days after he had appeared in Criminal Court and all counterfeiting and dope charges against him were dropped by the state.

The charges revolved around a raid in December, 1968, at the Shields Place residence of dope peddler Charles "Bucky" Johnson. Bucky Johnson was slain less than a month later.

On Jan. 11 his body was found in a car parked in a Northwest Baltimore apartment complex. He was shot through the head.

Recent Federal court records connect Butch and Gangster Webster withthe incident.

Federal court records also connect "Butch," Webster, Walter "Kidd" Henderson, murdered in August, and Clarence "Egypt" Jones, killed in September inside Butch's place, a carryout in the 1000 block Pennsylvania Ave.

of $7,250 to institutions and individuals as follows:

$2,000 to the Board of Directors of the Druid Hill YMCA of which he was a longtime member;

$1,000 to the board of directors of the Greater Baltimore YMCA of which he was a member;

$500 to Madison Ave. Presbyterian Church of which he was a longtime member;

$500 to Provident Hospital, where he served on the board of trustees;

Plus, bequests of $500 to Mrs. Bennie J. Roey, administratrix of his estate; and $250 each to the following cousins: Mrs. Alice Hunter, Dr. Arthur Callis of Washington; Leon Callis, Arlington, Va.; Mrs. Mamie Kennard and Mrs. Carrie Gross.

And, $250 each to friends, Mrs. Beatrice T. Butler, Miss Dorothy J. Howard, Miss Ethel Wise, Mrs. Cornelia Briggs, Mrs. Alma S. Cornish and Mrs. Beulah Lee.

William I. Gosnell was attorney for the estate.

Mr. Callis was for 48 years a teacher in Baltimore. All of his time was spent at Douglass High, where he taught English, beginning in 1908, and later was the printing instructor.

Born in Matthews County, Va., he was the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Augustus Callis. When he came to Baltimore as a youngster, his father was pastor of Macedonia Baptist Church.

He joined Madison Ave. Presbyterian as a young man and for more than 50 years served as elder, trustee finance committee member and a member of the Session.

Mr. Callis and his wife, Mrs. Nellie M. Callis, also a longtime Douglass High teacher until her death in February 1962, lived at 2113 Druid Hill Ave.

News In Brief

Scott May Get Competition

WASHINGTON — Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott returns to the United States this week from a three-week Asian vacation, citing records to show he is in the mainstream of his party.

But a young Bryn Mawr, Pa., industrialist disagrees with Scott's record and says he may ask Apollo 12 astronaut Charles (Pete) Conrad or golfer Arnold Palmer to oppose the minority leader in the Pennsylvania Republican primary in May.

Hayakawa's Tam Not In Ring

SAN FRANCISCO — Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, semanticist, and college president this week declared himself out of races for the U.S. Senate and the post of state superintendent of public education.

Hayakawa, 63, said he would instead continue the fight for "academic freedom" as head of San Francisco State.

Sinatra Seeks Injunction

PHILADELPHIA — An attorney for Frank Sinatra asked a federal judge Wednesday to issue an injuction preventing New Jersey from forcing the singer to testify in an organized crime investigation. The arguments were heard behind closed doors. There was no indication when Judge William Hastie would rule.

Typhoid On Ocean Liner

VANCOUVER, B.C. — A luxury liner with an outbreak of typhoid among its crew, docked in Vancouver Wednesday night to undergo a thorough investigation.

The ship is the Oronsay of the Pacific and Orient line. Six of its 500 crewmen have been hit by typhoid, with another 18 suspected cases—three passengers and 15 crewmen—hospitalized as suspects.

Insured Satellite Checked

CAPE KENNEDY — Engineers tracked the first satellite insured against the risks of rocket flight this week and prepared to kick it into its final orbit above the Atlantic Friday.

The commercial communications satellite will remain covered by its $4.5 million insurance policy until the ultimate 22,300-mile high stationary orbit is achieved.

Students Score Final Points

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. — A group of students, protesting the suspension of two black cheerleaders, staged a sit-in Wednesday night at the Seton Hall-American University basketball game.

Only 10 seconds remained in the contest with Seton Hall leading by one point when the 20 students went onto the court.

Mrs. Nixon Christens Jetliners

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Richard M. Nixon christened aviation's biggest baby this week—the 700,000-pound, 490 passenger Boeing 747 jumbo jetliner.

With the press of a lever, Mrs. Nixon sprayed red, white and blue water over the Pan American Clipper "Young America" at Dulles airfield outside Washington.

Union Controls Sought

WASHINGTON — Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz., says union wage demands are the "great unmentioned factor in the whole inflation picture."

He said Congress must "develop some guts" during the next few years and act to put curbs on the labor movement.

Ban Lifted on Foreign Cars

BIRMINGHAM — The ban of foreign-made cars parking at U.S. Steel's Fairfield Works was lifted Wednesday by Haran Bullard, general superintendent of the plant. "My decision was intended to give emphasis to my belief that those whose livelihood is dependent on domestic steelmaking are served best by using American-made automobiles made of domestic steel," Haran Bullard, plant head said.

'Clean Engines Due by '80s

DETROIT — Edward Cole, president of General Motors said Wednesday he thought "essentially pollution-free" auto engines would be available by 1980.

In a speech before the Society of Automotive Engineers, Cole, said the quickest way to reduce auto emissions was to improve the internal combustion engine.

Credibility Gap Called Canyon

WASHINGTON — John W. Macy Sr., the nation's foremost advocate of public broadcasting said the "credibility gap" between Americans and their government officials has become "a veritable grand canyon of disbelief" that only noncommercial television can fill.

The gulf, in Macy's view, "stems from a growing feeling...that all public affairs are being stage-managed...that elected officials are images to be marketed, that social issues are bing orchestrated to produce the most potent impact on the media."
