Speed kills four on state highways

Six persons were killed on Maryland highways last week, according to the weekly survey published by the State Police.

Two of those killed were drivers, three were passengers, and one was a pedestrian.

Alcohol was a contributing factor in two of the deaths, speed in four, and "driver error" in all but one.

"Even though the total number of accidents was comparatively small last week, speed was a major contributing factor in two-thirds of them," noted Lt. Col. W. H. Conroy, Deputy Superintendent of the State Police.

FASHION NOTE — What the basketball spectator set is wearing for the now games are versions of this short pants ensemble. The bold plaid cape and knee high pants costume is by Tiffeau-Busch, in a golden brown and beige. The cape has a mole lining. The overblouse of beige suede is highlighted by a gold link necklace and belt, and underpining the whole are sheer "Little Somethings," a sheer hose in a sophisticated teak shade.

Light Housekeeping

By LULA MACKAY

If you are a bug who swears by wigs, you will be interested to know that the billion dollar wig and hair fashion business is coming up with a batch of improved modacrylics. This year design developments will make it possible to part a wig, even to comb it back off the face. If your hairdresser is up to scratch her salon will be a fashion shopping center in addition to the regular services of from hair coloring to styling. She will add, to wigs, ornaments for the hair, many made of hair; as well as scarves, jewelty hosiery and even dresses.

Other Beauty Bits: Anent perfume. Since a fragrance can turn you on or turn others off as effectively as something a person says, does or looks like, it behooves one to learn a little about how to wear scents.

In the first place, select a scent to suit the season, place and occasion. Use a light scent for summer, a subtle, not overwhelming one for office where others have to bear with it, and a heavier one for winter, you do not restrict yours to a signature scent. Your nose develops an immunity evenings out and outdoors.

Keep a tiny spray flagon of your perfume in your cosmetic case for tuch up during the day. And you will enjoy perfume more if to fragrances and will respond less to one that it is exposed to day in and day out.

Put a drop of your perfume on a light bulb before you turn it on. The heat will diffuse it throughout the room.

Press your lingerie on an ironing board that's sprayed with your scent. The lingerie will pick up a delicate hint of it.

Recipe of the week. This recipe for Baked Stuffed French Loaf comes from a collection by the American CowBelles, auxiliary to the American National Cattlemen's Association.

This is an especially good way to use leftover bits of beef. (if you want to begin from scratch use ground beef instead of left-overs).

Baked Stuffed French Loaf is made from a small loaf of French bread, five tablespoons butter or margerine, three tablespoons flour, a half teaspoon salt, one and a half cups milk, a half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one egg, two cups American cheese, grated; a cup ground or finely chopped cooked beef, a cup rice olives, chopped and one garlic clove.

Break open loaf of bread along seam. Remove soft center and crumble. Melt three of the five tablespoons of butter or margarine. Sift flour with salt and blend into hot butter.

Add milk slowly, stirring and cooking until smooth and thick. Remove from heat. Add, Worcestershire sauce, egg, cheese, beef, olives and crumbled bread crumbs. Mix well. Refill loaf and press edges together. Rub outside of loaf with garlic and brush with remaining two tablespoons of butter, melted. Bake in moderate oven (375 F.) for 25 to 30 minutes. Slice before serving.

What's new? Now you can get for him undergarments made from the same materials designed for wear by Apollo astronauts on their journey to the moon.

The briefs and shorts is the newest consumer product born of space technology. The undergarments dry in two-and-a-half minutes, about four times as fast as nylon say the Larson Company of McLean, Va. manufacturers.

Social work school includes community

The University of Maryland Board of Regents today approved a change in name of the university's present School of Social Work to the "School of Social Work and Community Planning."

The new name, according to Dr. Daniel Thursz, dean of the school, reflects a broadening of the school's scope of instruction that has been taking place ever since the school was created.

"The traditional social work curriculum prepared students for service as clinical case workers," he said, "But the old stereotype of the social worker as a professional altruist handing out of checks has been inaccurate and misleading for many years. Today, a third of our students are enrolled in courses relating-to-social strategy, community organization, and social planning."

The necessity of planning for the future is well recognized today, Dean Thursz notes, and planning is no longer thought of only in physical terms but as involving ability to analyze social problems and to recommend solutions.

The school's faculty includes specialists who have been involved in planning for health and welfare, manpower, housing and transportation, schools, and community action.
