Lawmakers settle to drab routine

By MAX JOHNSON

ANNAPOLIS — Maryland's General Assembly rounds out today (Friday) the 13th working day of this regular 70-day session, with no major bills of significance passed or killed by either the House or Senate.

This Assembly, however, has settled down to the nitty gritty routine business of wading through in various committees the batch of bills at hand.

So far 259 bills have been introduced in the House [illegible] excluding [illegible]

[illegible] Mandel, who has sponsored reorganizational measures for the state's Executive Department, got into the act again today, with legislation which should please a lot of his constituents.

He has submitted legislation designed to protect Maryland consumers against excessive charges for credit life insurance on installment purchases.

The measure would empower the state insurance commissioner to approve in advance rates charged for such insurance in connection with a loan or other consumer credit transaction.

Under the Mandel measure, the insurance commissioner would be given broad powers to regulate the credit life insurance industry, including the authority to establish premium rates.

The proposed legislation would also permit the borrower a choice of whether he wants to buy such insurance when obtaining a loan or the alternative of assigning a portion of his own insurance to cover the loan.

Thursday Gov. Mandel presented another bill to have the state maintain control over prisoners released for good behavior prior to serving out their sentence.

The measure provides that such released prisoners remain under the Department of Parole until the completion of their sentence.

That bill requiring students in public schools to daily pledge allegiance and

MOST CHARGES DROPPED:

250 crowd courtroom for K-9 protest trial

At Criminal Court, Tuesday, approximately 250 people turned out in a chilling, windswept rain to hear the trial of 15 members of the SOUL school who were being tried on charges stemming from a demonstration at Western District Police Station, last summer, after a K-9 dog attacked a woman sitting on her steps.

The "Baltimore 15" were arrested during a period of heightened tensions between the black community and the police department, when one of its officers, Alvin Nachman, unleashed his dog which attacked Mrs. Hilda Betters, after he ordered her to move off the steps of her home in the 2000 block Edmondson Ave.

75 stitches were required before the gaping wound in her leg could be closed. Other residents of the block were also bitten, and Donald Best required 32 stitches to close wounds inflicted in his side and leg.

* * *

The trial, originally scheduled for Part 5 of the Criminal Court Annex had to be moved to the main courthouse because the large crowd of supporters overran the halls, elevators, and Judge Solomon Liss's 8th floor courtroom.

"They should have moved it to the Civic Center," stated Olugbala, one of the S.O.U.L. School directors, as court guards refused to admit anyone else to the jam packed courtroom.

Ougbala (Benjamin McMillan) appeared before Judge Liss wearing his Filaa (African Headpiece), and was told by Judge Liss: "I understand you wear the headpiece indoors for religious reasons. We (Jewish people) also wear ours. Under the circumstances, you can wear yours here. You have my permission to do so."

Interestingly enough, Olugbala was held in contempt of court by Judge Joseph Carter, last year, when he refused to remove his headpiece during arraignment in Judge Carter's court. He spent three days in jail before being released on $500 bail.

In addition, the S.O.U.L. school director, along with a member, Lee Uburu, were re-arraigned at Tuesday's trial on various riot charges, and pleaded not guilty through their attorneys Larry Gibson and Gerald Smith. Both men had their cases postponed until a later date and were continued on $2500 bail.

The bulk of the "Baltimore 15" however, were cleared of the charges against them, after the States Attorney, Luther C. West, did not prosecute their cases.

The eleven members who were freed are: Weusi (James Smiley), Kenya Kenya Kenyetta Kiongozi (Robert Harper), Guine Onyango (John Teagle), Victor Merritt, Ali (Purcell Christian), Zaka (Alvin Logan), Donald "California" Gaither, Shaka

Officer charged on reports

Officer David Walter Reed, 23, 2100 block Baker St., a member of the Internal Investigation Division, has been charged with giving false reports. He is free under $2,500 bail.

Accusations against Officer Reed arose from February 3 when he was on a secret investigation in Western District.

At the time he charged Joseph Boston, 32, 1800 block Lorman, with assault and robbing him of his .38 coll revolver.

However, on Thursday, when the case went to the grand jury the panel refused to indict Boston and threw the case out.

Later, after further investigation by Officer Reed's superior officers, he was placed under arrest and charged with lying on the citizen.

Stiffened prison bill re-submitted

AFRO BUREAU

ANNAPOLIS — Sen. Carl L. Friedler (D. 5th Balto.) reintroduced Thursday substantially the same crime bill which failed in the 1969 session of the General Assembly.

The bill will allow a judge to sentence a habitual criminal to prison for up to a term of 40 years and stiffen penalties for first and second offenders.

The proposed legislation would apply to such felonies as arson, robbery,

Militant leader acquitted in criminal assault charge

Norman Carroll, Prime Minister of the Black Concepts was acquitted of charges that he attempted to criminally assault a 15-year-old Forest Park student. Judge Solomon Liss presided at the trial Tuesday.

The 38-year-old community leader was given a direct verdict of "not guilty" as the jury didn't retire to consider the verdict.

The States Attorney attempted to build its case solely on the testimony of the girl. She testified in court that in October of last year, Carroll tried to assault her in the basement of his home, located in the 2600 block Coldspring Lane.

She further testified that the Prime Minister had forced her to go with him to his home, after accosting her in the 900 block Park Height Ave.

However, the defense attorney produced several witnesses who contradicted the girl's allegations, and stated that at no time was the girl forced into the house, nor was she molested.

Students prepare exhibits for city's vocational week

Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro recently issued a proclamation that the week of Feb. 8 would be known as Vocational Education Week.

Present for the signing of the proclamation were members of the newly organized Student Advisory Committee for Vocational Education. Also present were many prominent state and citywide educators.

In the proclamation, it was stated that a vocationally competent individual usually develops into a productive member of society.

Using this statement as a theme, all of the vocational schools in the city have opened their doors to the community for citizens to observe first hand the competency acquired by the thousands of the students pursuing the vocational curriculum.

Houston Woods junior senior high school No. 181, at 1601 N. Calhoun St. has planned a special school assembly on Tuesday, Feb. 10 at 9 a.m. Dr. Benjamin C. Whitten, assistant superintendent of Vocational education, will be the guest speaker. On Thursday, Feb. 12, at 7:30 p.m., the school will be open to the public. During the entire week, projects made in the various school shops will be on display at the Mondawmin Mall.

The Carrollton School No. 183, 1200 W. Lafayette Ave., will hold its "Annual Carrollton Exposition" during Vocational Education Week. There will be a vocational shop exhibit in the gymnasium and successfully employed graduates will speak to the job-training classes.

Woodrow Wilson junior-senior high schools No. 294, at Hollins and Monroe Sts. will hold an Open House on Thursday, Feb. 12, between the hours of 9 o'clock and 12 o'clock noon. Community and civic leaders, as well as the parents of the student body, have been invited to attend.

Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro, who recently awarded the school a citation for its work in many civic projects, has accepted an invitation to attend.

Samuel Gompers junior-senior high school No. 298 at North Avenue and Broadway has installed a display publicizing Vocational Education Week, in the windows of the Sears Roebuck Company located at North Avenue and Harford Rd.

Invitations have been sent to the many employers who hire pupils of the school who are participants in its work-study program.

On Wednesday, Feb. 11, the school will be open for interested citizens to view the many trades offered to the student body.

Mergenthaler Vocational Technical senior high school No. 410, at 3500 Hillen Rd. has opened its doors to the community to come and observe the hundreds of trades taught during both the day and evening classes. Also during this week, there will be a special assembly at which Dr. H. B. Kimmey, supervisor, Employee Relations Department, Baltimore Gas and Electric Company, will speak to the student body.

Mr. Kimmey, who is also chairman of the State Vocational Advisory Committee, and others who

NOT ONLY THE ROOM at School No. 145 shown in Tuesday's edition, but also this room on the third floor is in deplorable condition. Light fixtures are hanging from the walls as repairs are proceeding, however, many feel that what is needed is an entirely new school.

Leaky pipes, damaged ceilings mar atmosphere for young students

Dilapidated structures, limited space and facilities are the major causes for the deplorable conditions at school No. 145 at Lanvale and Poplar Grove Sts.

The collapse of one of the ceilings on the first floor last Monday prompted the decision to make a complete appraisal of all ceilings, and finally all defective areas in the building.

One of the teachers in the building said, "Not only are the rooms shodden, but the bathrooms are in so condition for children to use."

There is one bathroom for the girls on the second floor and one on the third floor for the boys. The second floor bathroom has water covering the part where the toilets are located, and the faucets are faulty.

The result is water overflow and leaky overhead pipes supply the rest of the damage.

The boy's bathroom is filled with stench, both are filthy.

"The building has a capacity for 500, but our current number is 1,000 pupils," says the principal Mrs. Charlotte Harper, since September, and have had to make several requests for improvements in the building. Quite a few of them have been answered."

Walking through the halls and into the bathrooms, one can see the obvious and forthcoming deteriorations.

HCD program names Govans as target area

Govans is the second area in a continuing program of neighborhood improvement under the direction of the Department of Housing and Community Development.

A team of seven HCD representatives has started visits which will reach the estimated 5,000 dwelling units in the 92-block area between Woodbourne Ave. on the north, The Alameda on the east, Argonne Dr. and 39th Sts. on the south, and York Rd. on the west.

The program, expected to last some five months, involved inspection of the exterior of all properties within the area, according to Robert C. Embry Jr., Commissioner of Housing and Community Development.

* * *

HCD was invited by various neighborhood associations to make Govans the second area in a series of external inspection programs designed to combat blight before it becomes a major problem in an area, Mr. Embry said.

The first, in Coldstream Park, is nearly completed.

The theme of the campaign, according to a folder HCD is distributing door-to-door, is that Govans is now a good place to live, and that all residents should cooperate to keep it that way.

* * *

The pamphlet urges residents to cooperate with the Housing Department's representatives, and suggests that they begin by taking a look at their own homes in regard to general neatness, painting, garbage containers, broken windows, weeds.

"Okay, maybe you don't own the house," the leaflet says. "You live here, don't you."

The Govans campaign will be conducted by veteran housing inspection personnel and community organization advisors. Support for the drive is being provided by the Mayor's Station at 5227 York Rd.

Robert Ayd, Mayor's representative at the station, is coordinating activities with neighborhood organizations, including schools, in which it is hoped a poster contest can be conducted.
