Police investigate fight at Mercy Douglass Hospital

PHILADELPHIA — Nearly 240 employees, including two physicians at Mercy-Douglass Hospital, 50th St. and Woodland Ave., have signed a petition denouncing the police action regarding an incident in the hospital on March 16 as an "outrage."

The dispute involves police of the 65th St. and Woodland Ave. police station who responded to a call for assistance when a patient, Hilton James, 23, of 36th St. near Race, and a guard fought on the seventh floor of the institution.

During the melee, two orderlies, Claude Dangerfield, 23 and Donald Meacham, 13, were injured. They charged that police beat them while they were being arrested, charged with assault, disorderly conduct and breach of peace.

According to Chief Police Inspector Frank A. Scafidi, who questioned personnel at the hospital regarding the incident, his investigation has been "hampered somewhat" by lack of "complete cooperation" by some hospitals officials.

He said, "We have obtained contradictory statements up to this point, but we do know that there was some interference with police in performance of their duties, but we don't know yet to what extent."

In the petition addressed to Theodore Perkins, executive director of the hospital; Ragan Henry, president of the board of directors; Dr. Albert Gaskins, president of the medical staff, and Dr. Robert Hunt, medical director, the employes said:

"If and when the presence of the Philadelphia Police is required on our premises, the police must complement us in our duties and not in such a state of mind as to interfere with the orderly administration of this hospital."

Royal to go

is now and regardless of what will take its place, the real memory that will eventually become legend is of its glamorous days of long ago.

Scarcely any theatre in the nation has enjoyed greater fame than the Royal.

For example, during World War II, the Avenue witnessed a colorful, never-ending stream of persons from the Eastcoast arriving nightly to see the finest of stage shows.

Between acts, it was nothing to see the most famous of black stars of stage and screen strolling the main strip.

Youngsters of today can hardly imagine it, but the story is true.

Winter, summer, spring and fall, appearing live and on stage were Jackie Mabley, Pearl Bailey, Billy Eckstein, Ella Fitzgerald, Billy Holiday, Ethel Maters, Sunshine Sammy, and many, many others.

The Big Bands of the century, Chick Webb, Cab Calloway, Duke Ellington and all the rest counted the Royal as a "must."

Those who are still in the "Big Time" recall that a successful date at Baltimore's Royal Theatre assured them stardom.

Camp plan

"hard-core" hostilities in camps where they would supposedly be occupied by games and have the supervision of a strong male figure.

Dr. Hutchnecker claimed that children growing up in black "ghettoes" have hostile feelings toward persons in society they feel are oppressing them and grow up with the desire to strike out against them. That striking out is manifested in crime, he said.

The best way to deal with this hostility is to channel such impulses into other areas, he claimed.

At AFRO presstime, there was no word as to whether the President will accept Finch's recommendation that the plan be ignored.

tents; income tax records from 1965 through 1969 and times and places where he may have committed adultery and with whom.

On Feb. 23, Dr. Hughes' attorney entered into the court file interrogatories which asked the same questions of the wife.

On Feb. 25, Mrs. Hughes' lawyers asked for a hearing before a Circuit Court master on allimony to be paid during litigation and child support for the period while the case is before the court.

The court record shows an April 7 hearing before Master Lucy Ann Carvey was postponed.
