If YOU Ask ME

People, places and things

In Springfield, Ohio, yesterday, (Thursday), the whole town stood still to watch the funeral procession of John W. Patterson.

The five-block long procession to Fernecliff Cemeter, was something to behold. Impressive: the way the police escorts facilitated the traffic . . . and how the traffic all along the main thoroughfare was stilled.

John Patterson was the beloved mortician, fraternal and civic leader. A 12-inch long editorial in the Springfield Daily Sun called him 'an absolutely fear less and incorruptible man . . . with a dogged devotion to the human community . . . to human welfare . . .'

John died suddenly in church on Sunday. He was 66.

I'll always remember him as the one who was among first to extend a warm welcome to Springfield when the head of our house took me to visit his hometown.

A number of out-of towners were there for the funeral, including another Baltimorean, W. Paul Roller.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Jackson (Alice), flew in from Sacramento Calif., and Mrs. Nancy Anderson came from Monrovia Liberia.

Mr. Patterson was awarded one of Liberia's highest decorations for organizing a national law on embalming and embalming school in Monrovia.

Thoughtful program: Members of Baltimore Chapter of Jack and Jill of America made plans for celebration of Jack and Jill Day which takes a new twist this year.

Instead of a picnic or social, members and youngsters will worship this Sunday 11 a.m. at Heritage Church of God, Liberty Heights and Dennlyn Rd. where the Rev. Wendell Phillips is minister.

After service, there will be a coffee hour. The money they might have used to entertain themselves will be given to the church.

Heritage, you know has long been meeting place for Jack and Jill and other youth groups because as one parent put it, the pastor 'relates' to young people.

Good news about a hometown lady: Miss Bernice Doris Ferguson, who now is a registered nurse in Chicago, has won the coveted Mary Mahoney award.

This is the citation given the outstanding nurse of the year who has made the "most significant contribution to integration in nursing."

It is named for Mary Eliza Mahoney, the first black nurse graduated in the U.S.

The award was presented at the American Nurses Association meeting in Miami earlier this month.

Miss Ferguson is the daughter of Mrs. Clarence C. Ferguson Sr. of Sequoia Ave., here in Baltimore.

She is a graduate of Douglass High and formerly taught at Clifton Park Junior High and in the practical nurses program at Hopkins Hospital.

In Chicago, Miss Fequson is chief nurse of the Westside Veterans Administration Hospital.

Cuff Note: This month has been a busy one for Mrs. Clarence C. Ferguson Sr., mentioned above. She was in Miami to see her nurse daughter get the award.

Earlier, she had been in Washington at the reception honoring her son, Carence Clyde, who is the new ambassador to Uganda.

Former law dean at Howard University, he assumes his new duties next month.

Cuff note: The Fergusons' dead was the late Rev. C. Ferguson, longtime AME minister in our town.

People being kind to others: Orchids to Mrs. Alethia McCrimmon, the mortician.

She has such love for children she had only a nominal funeral bill for the Hill infants, after their father said he had nowhere to turn for money.

The Hill children, Bobby Jo, 21 months; and his sister, Robbie Jo, 9 months, were tossed to their deaths from an eleven-story apartment in the Lafayette Courts a week back.

Also due orchids: residents of the Lafayette Courts and surrounding neighborhood who raised money, and you and you and you and you who sent contributions towards the burial fund after reading the story in this newspaper.

Overheard conversation between two 14-year-olders: No. 1 — Why is it 'they' are protesters, but 'we' are rioters? No. 2-It happens all the time. You know why. 'They' are white.

Cuff Note: Newspaper clipping Gary, Ind., reports that one of the contestants in the Miss Indiana Pageant had Baltimore connections.

She is 18-year-old Gloria Chisholm, senior at Gary's Roosevelt High.

Her Baltimore tie is Mrs. Maggie (Mildred Quille), an aunt. Newspaper clipping reports Mrs. Quille sponsored her in the contest.

Many know Mrs. Quille as the government worker, who is active with the Provident Hospital mental health program and the Prince Hall Order of Eastern Star.

About This And That

Army note: Pvt. William T. Bryant now on duty as a Medic at Madigan General Hospital, Tacoma, Wash.

His native Baltimorean is the son of Mrs. Helen L. Bryant. Pvt. Bryant attended Douglass High School.

He entered the Army in November 14, 1969, completed basic training at Fort Gordon, Ga. and Medical Field Service School at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Get-well-in-a-hurry cards to Mrs. Elaine Howard, manager of Gilmor Homes.

She had surgery Wednesday in Sinai Hospital.

Cards will reach her if addressed to Room 373A, Blaustein Building at Sinai.

Out of the hospital today, thank goodness, is Mrs. Carl Norwood (Sarah), wife of the florist (Sum mers-Norwood). She had surgery at Greater Baltimore.

Doing oh so much better, also, is Mrs. Frederick Howard (Odessa), the school secretary and wife of the AFRO director. She's in City.

More ailing: Get well cards, please, to Miss Myrtle Burgess, who is confined to Montebello State Hospital recovering from a stroke suffered last month.

Her brother Elmer A. Burgess of 2400 Montebello Terrace, is up and about following surgery two weeks ago. Many know him as the retired physical education teacher.

Cuff note: Neighborhood Club of the 1900 block Druid Hill Ave. presented the new Provident Hospital Fund with $200 at its meeting last week.

Mrs. Kathleen Simmons is president; Mrs. Elizabeth Booth, vice president; Mrs. Marguerite M. Saunders, secretary.

Mrs. Mildred Qill, the treasurer, is chairman of the hospital drive committee.

Jail note: The calls about city jail persist. Here is what one caller said this week:

'Yes there is general rioting at City Jail. Prisoners are dumping the food out on the tiers. The food is so bad no more than garbage, that's all it is.

'There are water bugs, cockroaches in the oatmeal, it's so bad. Plus, visiting is limited to one day a week. It is terrible.'

The caller was one who spent 90 days in Baltimore City Jail awaiting trial and who was later found innocent.

He deplored not only the food but the general conditions under which men awaiting court hearings are confined to the M.N.O.P.E. and north wing sections of the jail (Court side), for long periods of time.

He cited in particular, the case of one man who has been confined to C section for over 10 months. Honest!

More people doing meaningful things: Mrs. Olivia Spriggs and other volunteers who serve with the Crownsville State Hospital Women's Auxiliary.

Last month, they held an auction to raise funds for a chapel. So far, profit is $630, and donations are still coming in.

Last week, the ladies sponsored a very successful family day and parade at the hospital. Orchids to them.

More orchids: Don't you feel good when a good neighbor puts out something diffirent, interesting?

Then, you'll join with me in offering orchids to Mrs. Thelma Cox, the teacher and Delta Sigman Theta Soror. Her 'tribute to Mother From Daughter,' in verse and prose, is unique.

It was shared with other sorors at the Deltas' annual mother-daughter luncheon a week back.

Cuff note: John Curlett, the McCormick Co. executive, was honored Thursday evening when the Baltimore Committee of the National Jewish Hospital Fund held its banquet at Eastwind.

Gibson cops run-off spot in race for Newark mayor

By STEPHANIE ROUMELL

NEWARK, N. J. (UPI) — Kenneth A. Gibson, a black moderate, ran far ahead of the six-man field in Newark's mayoral race Tuesday, but failed to garner enough votes to avoid a run-off against Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio.

Gibson, 37, a city engineer, received about 42 per cent of the total 88,153 votes cast, better than a 2-to1 margin over Addonizio but short of the absolute majority needed for victory.

He now faces Addonizio, who is under federal indictment for extortion and tax evasion, in the June 16 run-off. Addonizio's trial begins June 2 in Trenton.

The Gibson campaign had the backing of the powerful militant Black-Puerto Rican Convention, an organization led by poet-playwright Leroi Jones.

Jones engineered Gibson's first mayoral campaign in 1966, when Addonizio won his second term and Gibson came in third with a respectable 18 per cent of the vote.

Jones used his professional connections to bring such well known figures as comics Bill Cosby and Nipsy Russell and actor Dustin Hoffman to Newark to campaign for Gibson.

The Gibson campaign drew barbs from both Richardson and Wheeler who said it was "extremist backed." The Gibson forces retaliated with charges those two candidates were "diluting the black vote."

In third place in Tuesday's balloting was city councilman-at-large Anthony Imperiale, a tough talking law and order candidate who drew 13,904 votes. Addonizio should pick up most of Imperiale's strength in the runoff.

In his victory speech in his headquarters, Gibson said that in the runoff "we're going to run the most decent campaign this city has ever seen. Not with corrupt power, or white power or black power. But with people power."

The Newark contest was one of several elections across the country.

Votes in Nebraska renominated veteran Sen. Roman L. Hruska, a Republican, to seek another term. In West Virginia, incumbent Sen. Robert C. Byrd, a Democrat, and the state's five U.S. representatives, also Democrats, all won renomination.

West Virginia's Byrd, the No. 2 man in the Senate's Democratic hierarchy buried his opponent, political novice John G. McGovern, to take the Democratic Senatorial nomination. He will seek a third term this fall against an as yet unnamed Republican.

Sam Huff, a middle linebacker for the Washington Redskins, lost by a 2 to 1 margin to incumbent Democratic Rep. Robert H. Mollohan.

In Nebraska, Hruska, in the Senate since 1954, won the right to seek another term by overwhelming Otis Glebe of Lincoln.

In the Democratic Senatorial primary, former three-term Gov. Frank B. Morrison of Omaha easily beat out two opponents, Wallace Peterson and David Thomas.

showed police cars stationed at Loyola Northway and Park Heights Terrace; Loyola Southway and Roland View Ave. and Loyola Southway and Hampton Rd.

Police stationed at the airport testified they recognized Walter Westcott as he got off the 1:45 a.m. last flight from New York and trailed him to a taxi.

Before he obtained a cab, the officers told the court, Walter Westcott made a phone call to Loyola Northway unknowingly in earshot of an officer who pretended to be fumbling through a phone book.

Further testimony of the arresting officers revealed that all police cars staked out around the Loyola Northway area were alerted as the ones at airport followed the Walter Westcott cab.

The diagram produced by Mr. Harlan disclosed that the route by which Walter Westcott directed the cab, followed Coldspring Lane, followed Coldspring Lane, the SW corner of Greenspring.

Sgt. Tomlin testified that the cab was halted near Hampton Rd. and when he asked Walter Westcott to step out, the defendant said, as he left the right rear seat, "How the (blank) did you know my name?"

The court was told that Officer August W. Burkheit's search of Westcott produced a small tinfoil package of cocaine and two small sections of a plastic drinking straw used to "snort" cocaine (so that a user can inhale it into the nostrils).

Testimony before the court also revealed the 150 grams (5.08 ounces) of 90 per cent pure cocaine in the large plastic "baggie" was found after officers made a "strip-search" at the Narcotics Unit room.

Judge Prendergast offered, "Obviously no 'strip-search' could be made in the open air in January's cold weather."

Under defense attorney Huddles' cross examination, Sgt. Tomlin said he felt he had sufficient probable cause to arrest, search and sieze whatever Walter Westcott had on him. "Because I was absolutly positive he had in his possession a large amount of prohibitive narcotic drug."

Over Mr. Huddles challenge and objection, Judge Prendergast ruled the search and seizure was lawfully and legal for all.

Walter Westcott refused to take the stand in his own defense.

For his courtroom appearance he wore gold trousers, a white knit sport shirt with matching trimming; white and brown spectator loafers with side buckles.

His goatee was neatly clipped and he held his gold bill cap in his hand throughout the day-long trial.

Among those recognized in the courtroom were his brother, James Westcott; Moses Mills whom Assistant States Attorney Harlan described as the "No. 1 syrup dealer" in Baltimore and Pearl Street Reds (Robert Lee Thompson) who was awaiting his own narcotics violations trial to be called.

Although Mr. Huddles pleaded with the court to retain the same $15,000 bail Walter Westcott had been under since his arrest in January and allow him to return to Norfolk to his short-order cook job, Judge Prendergast refused.

The jurist stated, "He has now been found guilty. The customary procedure is to double the bail which I will do. He will also be required to remain in Baltimore. I guess the people in Norfolk will just have to go hungry."

Photographs produced by Assistant States Attorney Harlan showed Walter Westcott in group pictures along with "Little Melvin" Williams, convicted and serving a 12-year narcotics violation term at the Penitentiary; Charles Dixon, bondsman; Charles Westcott, his brother; Miss Sally Bryant, described in testimony as James' girlfriend and Miss Inger Stevens of an apartment house in the 200 block St. Paul St.

of the ordinance that requires picketers to give

He concludes that the court ruling makes it clear that "a police officer must have good and sufficient reason, . . . to interrogate a person in a public place."

The solicitor adds that "it is important to understand that the proposed ordinance declares that certain acts are unlawful and does not attempt, by its terms to aid the investigatory powers of the police or other law enforcement agencies in connection with criminal activity.

The proposed ordinance among other things, bases the police officer's right to stop a person in the streets or picketing. It has been firmly established that peaceful picketing is lawful and protected by the First Amendment . . . it follows then that peaceful picketing, alone, does not give a police officer probable cause to accost persons so engaged."

'CHILLS'

Mr. Russell, continuing his careful research, pointed out that in 1952 the high court ruled that "legislation that 'chills' free expression is unconstitutional."

Russell, refferring to the Supreme Court's decision in the NAACP v. Alabama (1958) pointed out that it is unlawful to require that organizations publish the names and addresses of members.

Mr. Russell's opinion will probably stop the apparant legal effort to restrict picketing and the publication of controversial Police Forms. The publication and picketing ordance No. 1237 grew out of blockbusting protests and Black Panther activity.

Balloon ascension 'first' for city's Preakness Week

A balloon ascension on Preakness Day at Pimlico Race Course, Saturday, May 16, will highlight family-style entertainment at the Baltimore track during Preakness Festival Week, May 10 through 17.

Robert L. Waligunda, of Springfield, Mass. — "the most active balloonist in the East" — is scheduled to ascend in the wicker basket cockpit that dangles from his multi-colored, 60,000-cubic-foot, 8 stories tall, hot-air balloon that will be attached to a line anchored on the Pimlico grounds.

The balloon ascension will be "the first in living memory in the Baltimore area," according to Lloyd H. Denton, executive director of the Baltimore Area Convention and Visitors Council, co-sponsor of Preakness Festival Week.

The balloon will be a highlight of entertainment designed for family enjoyment at Pimlico on the day of the 1970 running of celebrated Preakness horse race, according to Kelso Sturgeon, public relations director at the 100-year-old track.

Al Hirt, the New Orleans trumpeter will lead a jazz band that will play among folk dancers who will perform among picnic tables in the Pimlico infield on Preakness Day, Mr. Sturgeon said.

Preakness Festival Week is sponsored by the Convention and Visitors Council in co-operation with the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan Baltimore, the Committee for Downtown, the Greater Baltimore Arts Council, the Junior Association of Commerce, the Retail Merchants Association and the Women's Civic League.

May 10 through 17 has been officially proclaimed Peakness Festival Week by Baltimore Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro III.

Police raided Snake's Tire Shop in the 900 bl. of Caroline St. last Thursday and recovered 283 capsules of heroin in what one officer described as a "whole operation for selling heroin."

Arrested in the afternoon raid were Joseph Willie Kennedy, 30, of the 1200 bl. H Court, otherwise known as "Snake," the owner of the tire shop, and Vernon Earl Taylor, 34, of the 2500 bl. Queenanne Rd.

Police entered the tire shop on a search and seizure warrant and recovered 183 capsules of heroin on the premises. They later found 100 caps in a '69 Mark III car belonging to Kennedy.

One of the 12 officers involved in the raid told the AFRO that in the back of the tire shop there was an entire set-up for selling dope. "There were double steel doors and a case set up to receive money for the heroin," reports Detective Sargent William Kearney." I really believe that they were more afraid of the addicts than the police."

The detective added that police had been investigating this case for about the last month.

Bail was set by Judge Howard Aaron at $4,000 for Kennedy and $3,000 for Taylor. The case was then postponed until May 20 at 3 p.m.

of the Civic Interest Group, stated that everyone at the meeting should contact churches, civic groups, neighborood groups for active participation in the war against dope addiction.

"We can no longer stand around and see our youth destroyed" said Mr. Conway.

Several persons in the audience volunteered to make posters saying Down With Dope, Dope Must Go, Pushers Get Out Now, etc., for the rally.

Belal of Afro-Heritage Culture Center voiced the opinion that he believed policemen are involved in the dope traffic and that the recent death of Donald Sager may have been a result of such an involvement.

He also charged that Project Adapt harbors pushers and that no drug abuse center should be within six miles of a high school.

"They (police) got enough information to arrest Panthers but not top pushers," said Mr. Conway.

Senator Clarence Mitchell came in later and stated that he was at a meeting with black elected officials and that Julian Bond of Atlanta said that pushers are being maimed in the drug fight in Atlanta.

"Pushers are enemies of the community" said State Senator Mitchell. "Come out in mass numbers for the rally."

Persons in the audience were cooperative even though some felt that "the cause of drug addiction is blight and the city doesn't care."

One elderly observer who recently lost a son, a Hampton Institute student, to an overdose of heroin, said: "when the going gets hot, the police leave."

Police officers left before the conclusion of the meeting.

Members on the WDCC at the meeting were, Mr. Paige, Mr. Conway, Belal, Kahlid, and Hassan of Afro-Heritage Culture Center and Father Mitter of St. Gregory's Rectory.

Mr. Carter complained that conditions at the jail are so bad that "there are water bugs, cockroaches in the oatmeal."

He said he deplored "not only the general conditions of the jail but especially those imposed on men waiting trial in sections M, N, O, F and E."

Jail officials would not discuss the specific charges, they said in deference to the current grand jury investigation on alleged conditions there.

At Pennsylvania Ave. and Biddle St., the young woman left the car to make a phone call.

Police report they then noted she went into hysterics all of a sudden.

Police also report they followed her eye across the street and caught sight of Bootie Green and Melvin Stanford in the Electra 225.

After the officers got the two suspects out the car, they were able to make the arrest.

Further information police obtained reveals that the young woman, a former girlfriend of Bootie, had been ducking him and according to informers, the suspect had been looking for her.

Lt. Watkins described the young woman as highly nervous when she recognized him on the Avenue and revealed her fears.

Narcotics authorities state Stanford had been under observation of their agents and informants and had been recorded as being frequently in the company of Bootie who is listed with the department as a known pusher.

Both suspects are also listed with agents as prominent in dope traffic "On the Bottom."
