MUSICAL MOMENTS

Beauty and vigor mark Douglass choral concert

By ADAH K. JENKINS

Of the monumental achievements in music, the levements in music, the massive choral works, season after season, attract large and appreciative audiences.

One such attended the performance at Douglas Memorial Community Church, of Brahms' "German Requiem," by the choirs of the church under the direction of J. Spenser Hammond, minister of music.

Although this Requiem (may they rest) is not a mass for the dead, the text, from the Protestant Bible deals with "comfort for the living and cheerful faith."

It is a vast, complex work of challenging difficulties, since Brahms combines the stntiment of a romanticist with the polyphony (many themes) of the classicist.

• • •

Under the decisive command of Mr. Hammond the choristers evidenced the studious, dtdicated work they have applied to details of tone quality, voice leading and phrasing.

There were passages of exquisite beauty and intimate apptal as well as triumphant vigor in climaxes.

Well placed tones in the high reaches of their assignments were heard from the sopranos and altos. The very abit assemblage of tenoes and basses, with additional numbers, could achieve an affective balance, especially in the cruelly intricate fugue of Section Six.

Entrusted with the solo roles, Catherine Neal, soprano and James Younger, bass, handled their responsibilities with artistry.

Donald King, at the organ, Faith Carman, harpist and Richard James, tympanist, lent impressive accompaniment to the work, which was originally scored for orchestra and choir.

• • •

This marks the second presentation of the German Requiem by the Douglas Memorial Church choirs, for which they deserve high commendation and anticipation of future performances.

The Rev. Marion C. Bascom, minister, and officers of the church were hosts at an informal reception in the church parlor following the concert.

AT PEABODY

Choral conductors, singers as well, as patrons, should enjoy a highly rtwarding experience by attending the concert by Peabody Chorus, under the direction of Gregg Smith, Tuesday, May 19 at 8:30 p.m. in Peabody Concert Hall. (No chargt). nationally noted for his work with modern and avant garde music, affording a hearing that stretches the mind and imagination. Assistant conductor is Nathan Carter.

Leontyne Price, world famed soprano, is in Europe for opera, rtcitals and recordings, making her debut at the Hamburg Opera in "Aida" in November. Her London appearance at Convent Garden is in "Il Trovatore" in October.

The soprano will return to this country for a four month coast to coast concert tour, beginning January, 1971.

Miss Price's publicity manager is Elizabeth Winston, 119 W. 59th St. New York 10019; Judson 6-0057-88.
