Senator asks MTA service to UMBC

Senator Verda F. Welcome, D-4th, asked University of Maryland Baltimore County campus Chancellor Martin Kuhn to help her get better public transportation for inner city students to the county campus.

Noting that less than 50 black students are among the more than 2,000 students on the campus, Mrs. Welcome reminded Kuhn that "many students feel that the campus was given its present location to avoid too numerous attendance by black, inner city students."

The way to "disabuse this idea," the Senator said, is to have the "State's Massive Transportation Authority institute efficient and cheap transportation to and from the campus to strategic points in Baltimore City."

"I intend to press for this in the next legislature and before, and I ask your help, cooperation and advice," she said.

Chancellor Kuhn has previously made it known that he desires to have more black students on the Baltimore County campus, and has indicated that difficulties in transportation may account for some of their non-attendance there.

Mrs. Welcome also reminded the Chancellor that she was able to help Morgan students secure a bridge across the Cold Spring Lane divide on that campus.

She called for attention to the UMBC transportation matter as a corollary to the Supreme Bench Judge Richard I. H. Hammerman's call for free transportation of indigent parents to see children in distantly located institutions.

AT HAGERSTOWN

Howard Lyles promoted to security assistant

Joseph G. Gannon, commissioner of correction, today announced the appointment of Howard N. Lyles as assistant superintendent of security at the Maryland Correctional Training Center, Hagerstown.

Prior to his appointment, Mr. Lyles, 35, held the rank of captain at the Penitentiary, where he was awarded special commendations for his part in putting down major rioting there in 1966 and 1968.

He joined the Maryland Department of Correctional Services in 1958, after his discharge from the U.S. Army, where he was a military policeman and confinement specialist at the Fort Gordon Military prison.

Mr. Lyles was the first black uniformed correctional officer ever to be promoted in the State corrections system, and was the first black American to hold the rank of sergeant, lieutenant or captain.

He has participated actively in the middle-management classes and in-service training sessions sponsored by the department at the Center for Adult Education, at the University of Maryland's College Park campus.

Mr. Lyles recently completed a narcotics program sponsored by the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, and is currently attending Catonsville Community College, where he is majoring in criminal psychology, juvenile delinquency, and personnel management.

Pearl Street Reds will get new trial

The 3-day trial of Pearl Street Reds ended Tuesday night with a hung jury after the panel stayed out from 4:45 p.m. to 7:15 p.m.

The well-known redheaded, stout man, a longtime Avenue figure, will get a new trial later this year.

A co-defendant was found not guilty.

Both were charged with narcotics violations on Feb. 20 when at 10:15 a.m. narcotics agents raided a house in the 4200 block Penhurst Ave.

Also arrested by police was Miss Theresa Lee, who they testified, was a dope addict. She and Pearl Street Reds were asleep in a bedroom, police testified.

Through testimony brought out by defense attorney Fred Z. Grant, the jury was told Pearl Street Reds was not a resident of the house but a visitor.

The defendant was quoted as saying to police after they woke him up, "Why are you putting all this on me. This is not my place."

Raiding officers testified they found large quantities of narcotics, cutting materials and paraphanalia in the apartment where Perl Street and the woman were in bed.

They termed the residence as a "cutting house" where drugs are prepared for sale on the street.

The jury was composed of nine black jurists, six of them men and three women. The remaining white jurists were two men and a woman.

Gadabouting in Baltimore

Mrs. Miles Connor married to Dr. Robert L. Jackson

with Lula Mackay

It was to have been a very quiet ceremony with about four persons present... but then the "was-to-have-been" exploded, and it turned out to be quite a party by the time the champagne was fizzing. Speaking, of course, of the marriage, Wednesday at noon, of Dr. Robert L. Jackson, veteran and distinguished physician of Baltimore, and Mrs. Miles Conner, retired teacher and widow of the former president of Coppin State College.

Mrs. Connor (Mattie) doing the proper thing of informing her family, at a late day, of the impending event, did not take into account that they would turn on their motors and hop into planes to be on hand for the ceremony. But come they did: Dr. James H. Williams and Fred D. Williams, nephews, from Selma, Ala.; John Henry Ferry and Prince Deyampert, friends, also from Selma, who flew here; Dr. and Mrs. Henry S. Martin, nephew and niece, and son, Anthony, from Washington; and Dr. Bertha Martin Smith, niece, and daughter, Beryl, also from Washington. And no sooner than the ceremony was over than the bride's sister, Fannie Martin Jones, was phoning from Salina, Calif. Mrs. Elmer Deans, the brides' niece, and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Barksdale, the bridegroom's son-in-law and daughter, were among Baltimoreans present.

Mrs. Connor and Dr. Jackson were married in the home of his next door neighbor and her long time friends, Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Adams, of Morgan Park. The Adamses were their attendants and the Rev. James L. Moore of Sharon Baptist Church read an original marriage ritual.

The bride chose a grey and white sheer print jacket dress and white hat, bag and shoes for her marriage. Her corsage was a white orchid. Mrs. Adams wore the dress of a blue-green silk ensemble.

Now on an undisclosed wedding trip, Dr. and Mrs. Jackson will be at home on Overland Avenue in Morgan Park.

One does best not what has to be done, but what one likes to do. And since Theresa Weaver enjoys every moment of her parties, from the moment of their birth in her thought to the moment the last guest departs, it's a cinch that her affairs will be expertly executed and delightfully staged.

Needless to say this was the case, Saturday, when Mrs. Weaver was hostess to the Bon Ton Club and augmented the guest list with some scores of chic town women for a bridge luncheon in the Sheraton-Baltimore Inn.

The Bon Ton Club, which has been, for some years, one of the established social clubs of the city, includes in its membership Lillian Berry, Mattie Connor Jackson, Audrey Norris, Flavia Thomas, Anita Turner and Theresa.

Alice Hayes of Buffalo, N.Y., who could not get here for the party sent the hostess a most beautiful orchid to wear with the delicately printed silk costume frock in pale pink that Theresa chose for that afternoon.

Out-of-towners who did make the party included Alice Hyman of Rockville, Md., Cornelia Hutchins of Philadelphia, Madge Hurst and Ione Lane of Washington, Hortense Poindexter of Dayton, Ohio and Eloise Richardson of Annapolis, Md.

Mrs. Mattie Connor Jackson took the first club prize; and Flavia Thomas, the second. Guest winners were Agnese Brown, Louise Perrin, Eunice Hall, Madge Hurst, Fannie Howard, Mae Peck, Hortense Poindexter, Eliza Robinson, Gladys Derry and Bertie West... from first to tenth in that order.

Keeping the scores were Constantia Jackson (who were the palest of grey suit that exactly matched her platinum hair); Ione Collins in a brilliant orange with a matching hat that caught all eyes) and Ione Lane. Assisting hostess were Ada Weaver, in a new hair-do and a chic grey frock; Dorothy Wood, Roslyn Wood and Eliza Robinson, each in her own way adding to the party's umph. They, along with the expert players took home beautiful gifts.

Town folks at the affair included:

Agnese Brown, Helen Burwell, Ida Berry, Augusta Chissell, Iona Collins, Gladys Derry, Eunice Hall, Mabel Friday, Salome Fuller, Ethel Henry, Callie Harris, Ethel Hucles,

Dora Hutchinson, Fannie Howard, Connie Jackson, Ethel Hodges, Lillian Jones, Emma Kelly, Emma Michael, Yvette Murphy, Lillian Murphy, Lula Mackay, Lydia Mussenden, Vivian Pendleton, Louise Robinson, Eliza Robinson, Mollie Taliaferro, Allegra Taylor, Dorothy Wilson, Virgie Waters, Jennie Wilson, Verda Welcome, Hermione Wharton, Roslyn Wood, Bertie West, Ada Weaver, Dorothy Wood, Louise Perrin and Mae Peck.

The most glamorous Grandma in ten counties will be (come July) Margaret Driver. She has already acquired her rocking chair and is knitting away like mad. Up to Saturday when she and Ruth Jennifer hosted the Baltimore Girl Friends at her Cold Spring Lane home she had accomplished a baby's cap, was working on a jacket and had stashed away two knitted blankets. The prospective parents are her daughter, Carol, and son-in-law, Roger Jones.

Margaret may have been acting Grandma-ish, but she certainly wasn't looking third-generation.

Wearing a skinny pants dress in a magnificent print, she and Ruth Jennifer (in a soft version of colorful silk print pants and tunic top) made as IN-ish a

Graduates help inspire Mosher little leaguers

The accomplishments of former members of the association will provide inspiration for the nearly 200 youngsters who are expected to participate in opening day ceremonies of the James Mosher Little League tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon.

It is inevitable that speakers at the inaugural exercises at Mosher St., and Wheeler Ave., will refer to the nearly 40 young alumni who have left the Mosher Association ranks to attend colleges and universities throughout the country on athletic and academic scholarships.

Included in this number are the likes of Charlie Pittman of Edmondson High and Penn State, Tom Gatewood of City College and Notre Dame; Kurt Schmoke, also of City, who starred in football at Yale, and Albert Johnson, who played quarterback at University of Cincinnati but has never forgotten his Mosher League foundation.

Some 35 others also are performing with credit in collegiate varsity ranks.

Tomorrow's parade will originate at Dukeland Street and Edmondson Avenue at one o'clock.

It will proceed East on Edmondson Avenue to Bentalou Street, North on Bentalou Street to Mosher Street and West on Mosher street to the playing field.

The parade will include three bands, four marching units, plus fourteen baseball teams of the James Mosher Association. Along with these the sponsors of the various teams will have colorful cars in the parade.

At 2:30 following brief speeches by city officials and the playing of the Star Spangled Banner, the Twins, last year's champions, will play the Cardinals who were the runners-up.

Both of these teams should be very strong since they have fourteen players returning from last year's squad.

Other little league teams of James Mosher are the Braves, Orioles, Doggers, Yankees, Cubs, Indians, Athletics, Tigers, and the Pirates. The Pirates with a complete new team could well be the surprise of the 1970 season.
