MRS. RICHARD BOND, widow of North Carolina Central University's first law school graduate, was recognized by NCCU law students during Law Day on May 1. Pinning the corsage on Mrs. Bond is Mrs. Cecelia Cook, chairman of the Law Day committee.

Black women push drive against dope

The National Council of Negro Women has urged the nearly 4 million members and girls it reaches to map plans and mount programs on May 24, to prevent drug abuse.

Miss Dorothy I. Height, NCNW's National President, urged 50 Local Sections of NCNW to mobilize their local communities in block-by-block or neighborhood meetings, parties or luncheons to "take a hard look at the drug abuse situation and develop plans to combat it."

• •

Other NCNW units which could not be reached in time to develop activities for May 24 were asked to mount programs as early as possible thereafter.

May 24-30 is Drug Abuse Prevention Week, recently designated by President Nixon. Miss Height, in a letter to NCNW units across the country, said: "It is my hope that the activity you undertake on May 24, though extremely significant in itself, will represent but just the first phase of a sustained, intensive programmed attack against drug abuse."

• •

The battle against drug abuse, she said, is not the type that can be mounted for a week, "no matter how diligently," and then forgotten.

The block or neighborhood meetings, parties and luncheons will mark the kickoff of a nationwide effort to combat drug abuse, a problem which has "reached epidemic proportions in communities all across the country" said Miss Height.

"Our aim," she continued, "is to close the communications gap and to build bridges of understanding with our communities through communication and education."

During the course of the May 24 activities, some Local Sections of NCNW will distribute posters provided by the National Institute of Mental Health. NIMH is also making available for later use some drug abuse pamphlets, fliers, films and recordings aimed especially at black youth.

Daughters host

CLOVER, S.C. — Mrs. Mary L. Currence of this city was honored at a surprise Mother's Day dinner on May 10, by her daughters.

The hostesses were Mrs. Haddassa Bryson of Philadelphia, Pa.; Mrs. Wilma Walker of Charlotte, N.C.; Mrs. Thelma Caldwell of this city; Mrs. Sarah A. Stowe of Salisbury, N.C.; Mrs. Mary C. Moore of Charlotte and Mrs. Gwendolyn Plummer of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Eight of Mrs. Currence's grandchildren were at the affair. They included Miss DeQuilla Walker of Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., and George B. Stowe of Rock Hill, S.C. A sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary B. Jackson of Clover, S.C., also attended.
