Mrs. King graduation speaker

Mrs. Martin Luther King will give the commencement address at Morgan State College 6 p.m., Sunday, May 31 in Hughes Memorial Stadium on the north campus.

In case of inclement weather, the exercises will be held in Hurt gymnasium. Admission will then be by ticket only.

Mrs. King who was selected by graduates to address them, will speak immediately following the academic procession, the invocation by the Rev. Howard Cornish and the singing of the hymn, "God of Our Fathers" by the college choir and audience.

Some 537 students will be awarded degrees by Dr. Elaine C. Davis, a 1943 Morgan graduate and a member of the Board of Trustees of the state colleges.

Honorary degrees will be awarded Mrs. King, President Martin Jenkins who retires after 22 years at Morgan and Coach Edward P. Hurt, athletic director, who is retiring after 40 years of service.

The alumnus of the year award will be presented to Paul Cockrell, '53, vice president of the Morgan Alumni Association.

Graduating with highest honors are Thelma Jane Bryan, and Rosemary Lee Swan, both of Baltimore; and Irene Mansfield, District Heights, Md.

The Sunday commencement will close the 103rd session of the college. Morgan, until this year, has always held commencement on Monday but by a vote of the students, faculty and administration, baccalaureate services were discontinued this year and commencement was moved to Sunday.

Commencement activities will begin on Saturday May 30 with Alumni Day. Some 15 classes beginning with 1895 will hold their 5-year reunion at 1 p.m. in the McKeldin Student Union.

Class reunions and guided campus tours are set at 3 p.m., hospitality hour at 4 p.m.

The classes of 1935, 40, 45, 50, 60 and 65 have slated their own reunion activities from yacht parties to dinner dances.

will be doing exactly the same things that graduates from any other college will be doing.

"I also am reminded that when I came to Morgan, there were hardly any anticipation that students would have a part in the governance of the institution.

"Today, unless that expectation is provided for, many institutions will find themselves in trouble," Dr. Jenkins emphasized.

He was leaving the AFRO conference at that moment to hold a joint press conference with Dr. Homer Favor, new director of Morgan State College's Center for Urban Studies.

"You know, the Ford Foundation has put up $600,000 for Morgan's effort in this area, and this is the largest sum given to any college . . . as distinguished from university, for the purpose of helping in the response to the new expectations of students," Dr. Jenkins explained.

As the retiring president awards 1970 degrees to the record 650 graduates in Hughes Stadium, South Campus, on Sunday, May 31 at 6 p.m., he will sense the far cry in the tenor of the times and the contemporary concerns from what they were when he took the helm two decades ago.

The state and the city have come through many hills and valleys of social progress during Dr. Jenkins administration.

Because of student demands for relevancy and the elimination of the baccalaureate sermon last year, this year's graduates will be addressed by the widow of the century's most famed rights leader, Dr. Martin Luther King, and many will be wearing armbands in mourning for Jackson State students killed earlier this month by Mississippi police.

President Jenkins will be awarded an honorary degree along with Coach Edward P. Hurt, athletic director for 40 years and Mrs. King. Some 100 graduate students and 550 undergraduates will also receive degrees.

During the commencement, President Jenkins will be cited as a "peerless administrator, educational architect and innovator, public servant and scholar" whose real monument is "of your own construction . . . Morgan State College."

"As this outstanding scholar and leader participates in this last graduation commencement as president, he, along with many others, will no doubt recall all the other graduation ceremonies with mixed emotions.

He came in July 1948 to replace Dr. D. O. W. Holmes. Inaugurated as President at Douglass High School, Dr. Jenkins spent most of that year getting acquainted with his new position.

Then came June 1949 his first commencement as president. Hughes Stadium was the setting for 234 undergraduates to receive their degrees. The guest speaker for that year was Dr. Merze Tate of Howard University.

An honorary degree was given in 1949.

1950 marked the beginning of not only a new decade but the beginning of the black revolution that would no doubt affect the black college campus.

In June of that year 300 degrees were issued to undergraduates with two honorary degrees—The guest speaker of that year was Dr. Percy L. Julian, world-renowned chemist.

In 1951, Dr. Ralph Bunche, United Nations leader, made his first appearance in Baltimore to deliver the commencement address to 290 Morgan State graduates. Held in the familiar Hughes Stadium, Governor Theodore R. McKeldin was on hand to award diplomas.

That year, four honorary degrees of Doctor of Law were given to Dr. Bunche, senior director of U.N. Trusteeship Council, Theodore R. McKeldin, Governor of Maryland, Congressman William L. Dawson of Chicago and Carrington L. Davis, a retired school principal and a Morgan College trustee.

The class of 290 included 51 from the 1950 summer school with 106 graduates receiving the Bachelor of Arts Degree and 184 receiving the Bachelor of Science degree. Twenty-five members of the class were honor graduates with five receiving highest honors, six high honors and 14 honors. These were 134 men and 156 women.

On hand to deliver the baccalaureate sermon was Rev. Joshua O. Williams, pastor of the Sharp St. Memorial Church.

At the same time, the State of Maryland was being confronted with the Ft. Smallwood Park crisis. During this crisis, this is just one of a many comments made by the AFRO pertaining to Ft. Smallwood.

"A beach with no bathers marked the Memorial Day opening at Ft. Smallwood Park when Wednesday had been set aside for the exclusive swimming of colored citizens."

On the same day of that comment, the AFRO reported that the NAACP attorneys were arguing in federal court against the legality of the segregation schedules set up by the Park Board for bathing.

Federal Court Judge Calvin Chesnut ruled that the city could not discriminate against colored citizens, and as a result of his ruling, the Park Board set up these segregated schedules.

Racial disturbances were plaguing the nation still and blacks were picketing the steel plants in the Baltimore area. Nearly 12,000 black steel workers went out on strike in the area following the Supreme Court decision voiding President Truman's steel seizure.

This was 1952 and President Jenkins marked his fourth year as president of Morgan State College. Most of the 223 June graduates entered Morgan at the same time as Dr. Jenkins in '48.

Before a crowd of over 3,000, Dr. D. O. W. Holmes, president 'emeritus,' returned to the campus to the commencement speaker for that class. Dr. Holmes spoke about the Achilles' heel of America, racial hatred.

"Racial discrimination is America's Achilles heel and is embarrassing us out of our role as world leader," he said.

Of the 223 graduates, 104 were men and 119 were women. Nine class members were cited for honors at this commencement exercise.

Four honorary doctorates were conferred with three of them being given to Dr. John W. Davis, W. Virginia; Sen. Herbert R. O'Conor and Dr. D. O. W. Holmes. All four doctorates were honorary law degrees.

With this class, the favorite areas of study were sociology, English, Physical Education, Biology and Home Economics.

In 1953 Morgan saluted a local citizen whose entire life was spent in raising the condition of black citizens, Furman L. Templeton, who died early this year.

While Dr. Templeton received the Doctor of Laws degree, Governor Theodore McKeldin delivered the commencement address.

In addition to the 130 undergraduates of that year, Maryland Ex-Governor Preston Lane, Jr., Houston R. Jackson and Judge Morris A. Soper received degrees.

During that same year, black citizens sued in court to gain admission to Merganthaler Technical High School.

In 1957, world famed singer Marian Anderson was honored along with the Johns Hopkins President Milton Eisenhower.

In 1959, A. Philip Randolph received an honorary degree.

Dr. W. E. B. DuBois was main honoree of 1960, when three others received honorary degrees and a then record 299 students received undergraduate degrees.

The other three honorees were Dr. John Hope Franklin, New York Judge Harold A. Stevens and Baltimore businessmen Willard W. Allen.

That was the same year Dr. Jenkins traveled to Liberia to witness the inauguration of Liberian President William V. S. Tubman, and was awarded an honorary degree from the University of Liberia.

By 1965, when seven persons were honored with degrees, the school had not only built Hughes Stadium, but had sufficient space in the Hurt Gymnasium to accommodate the graduation exercises and the Carl Murphy Auditorium had been dedicated.

Those honored that year were: the Rt. Rev. Cedric E. Mills, Whitney M. Young, Jr., Dr. William E. Henry, Dr. Stephen J. Wright, Dr. William L. Hansberry, Jack Greenberg and Mrs. Mary N. Brooks.

In 1967 Morgan celebrated its 100th anniversary with formal services at which Dr. Samuel Narbrit then member of the Atomic Energy Commission, spoke.

At the commencement that year, Honorable Patricia Harris, Ambassador to Luxembourg, spoke.

Through the years, since Dr. Jenkins came to Morgan, more than 8,000 students have earned degrees there, and more than 70 persons have received honorary degrees.

In addition, the college has made staggering progress in plant, curriculum and staff, and is on the threshold of becoming a fully integrated, urban university with the many departments of such an institution.
