Court told of Spot Bar's Ave. role

Assistant States Attorney Joseph Harlan said in Criminal Court Tuesday that the "Top of the Avenue" (the 1500 block Pennsylvania Ave.) is noted for "high drug traffic" and asserted that the Spot Bar is one of the "major centers" for drug dealers in the city.

The assistant states attarney who was speaking before Judge J. Gilbert Prendergast, also said for the record that drug dealers get drug supplies at the Spot Bar location.

Judge Prendergast also commented that "it is common for persons to transfer things in that part of town at that time of night."

The remarks of Judge Prendergast and Harlan came at the trial for Robert Turner, 2400 block Callow Ave., a Maryland Drydock welder who was on trial for possession and sale of narcotics.

Arresting officers testified Turner was observed "dealing" in the 1500 block Pennsylvania Ave. after 9:30 p.m. and sold a $5-bag (mickle bag) of dope to an undercover police department informer.

However, Turner said he was "talking with friends" in the area and no one approached him to buy anything.

He testified he and a friend watched a fight around Smithson St. and he was on the way back to the Spot Bar when he was arrested.

Final disposition awaits reports on Turner's record of cooperation at the Provident Hospital ADAPT drug addiction clinic which he has been enrolled about a year.
