New science courses at Baltimore Institute

Baltimore Institute and Junior College at 10 W. Chase St., is the only college in the Baltimore area offering a student a two-year degree program in Environmental Science. This program should have appeal to students from every section of the state of Maryland.

With the present student concern about pollution, population, consumer protection, etc., there is a growing need for graduates trained in this program. There are several options available to students:

1. Environmental Sanitary Technology
2. Environmental Technology (Pollution Control)
3. Community Planning and Development

Students who enroll in these courses will receive training in the cause and prevention of pollution, housing hygiene, sanitation principles, health law, consumer rights and legal resources, as well a some foundational courses in engineering.

At the end of the two year program graduates will find excellent employment opportunities open to them. The demand for such trained personnel in industry is accelerating rapidly.

Examples of employment opportunities are engineering firms, manufacturers, food processers and retailers, municipal and state regulatory agencies. Such employment opportunities cover the entire State of Maryland.

If a student oesires to continue toward advanced degrees, this program will serve as an excellent foundation.

There are colleges to which he can transfer his credits from Baltimore Institute and Junior College.

In most circumstances, salary scales will be higher for those with more academic preparation.

High school graduates interested in a career in Pollution Control or Environmental Science are invited to call the College office at 727-2886 or to write to the College at 10 West Chase Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21201. Classes will begin on September 21, 1970 and students are being accepted now.

"Anne of the Thousand Hats," as she is known, is the happiest thing that has happened to the millinery industry in London. Anne is the princess, whose penchant for wearing headgear of all shapes and styles has just about revolutionize the millinery scene. All the other Annes and Mary's and Victorias are copying what she wears. The styles the princess has worn recently range from her pink turban whose long floating scarf blew across her face when she was in Australia and provoked an expletive from Anne that was well publicized. The princess also loves cowboy Stetson copies, worn slantwise and trimmed with leather bands or gilt chains.

Designer Pauline Trigere is nothing if not basic in her approach to fashion. At her fall and winter opening in New York, Miss Trigere announced that she wasn't going to show anything called "cocktail" suits because they didn't mean anything as a late afternoon dressy outfit these days. "No," she said, "when people start drinking at noon."

All shades of purple and mauve come on strong for fall. If you're going in for a purple or mauve midi coat or dress, just match your hosiery and shoes to the soft shade and you've got one long line of unbroken color. That's the way the midi looks its best.

Gail Fisher, Emmy winner, had warm smile for two men

GAIL FISHER co-stars on Mannix, Saturday, June 13, at 10 p.m. on WMAR-TV Channel 2. Miss Fisher was Emmy award Sunday for best supporting actress of the year.

The National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences honored many of its television celebrities, but highest award went to Miss Fisher in dustry the Emmy.

Televised on both east and west coast, with comedian Jack Benny in Los Angeles, Central Plaza and Dick Cavett in New York, the Sunday night awards ceremonies was one of memorable and enjoyable occasions.

This year, several black stars were nominated for Emmy's but only one came through.

The attractive and talented Miss Gail Fisher of the popular TV detective story, Mannix, was the only supporting actress in a series. She plays part of comedian Mike Connors' secretary.

When she stepped on stage in the flowing evening gown, the elegant Miss Fisher was glowing as she accepted the award. It was possible for her presence. She had a warm and tender smile for a special gentleman in the audience, Mike Connors, star of the series.

A newcomer to TV, "Sesame Street" is a children's program which has been hailed by Emmys and educational television series and also for a single Emmy award.

It is an hour-long program which teaches while it entertains and it has been voted show of the year 1970 by American newspaper television critics.

Tee Collins, one of the few black cartoonists in the nation, has been appointed to the Children's Television Workshop, producers of the Emmy award winning series. Miss Collins, a mother of three children, has established that the commercial was the aspect of television which most pleased and most held their interests.

The two hosts in the two-hour Emmy show were Johnny Carson and Dick Cavett. Nominees for Emmys and Tony awards were announced.

Bill Cosby was a five-time nominee and five-time winner.

Although having two shows in the past, Cosby added this audience. "I'm a comedian," he said. "I am going home and dip my pen in ink."

In New York City, Dick Cavett told comedian Joe Namath, "I'm sorry we just weren't good enough."
