June is for bridegrooms brides and bridal cakes

"And the bride cut only the first slice, with the groom's help. Then, she and the groom shared it." No matter how small, one "must" of a wedding is a reception, where a beverage to toast the bride and the wedding cake are served.

What better gift to present the bridegroom and his bride than a bridal cake, made especially for them. Here is a recipe that makes a fender three-tiered cake from white cake mix. It's so attractive when decorated with the Lemon-Orange Frosting.

A noted social authority has outlined six other "ingredients" for any sentimental wedding in addition to the reception. They are: a ceremony, a male relative to give the bride away, a best man for the groom, at least one attendant for the bride, a bouquet for the bride, and a ring for the bride.

• • •

Small informal weddings are becoming increasingly more popular. And they can be as beautiful and romantic as any big elaborate ceremony. When the bride and groom cut the first slice of cake this June, make it a slice of this Wedding Cake with Lemon-Orange Frosting.

To Cut. Begin cutting cake at the bottom with a sharp, thin knife. Cut all the way around the base of the middle tier. Slice this detached "collar" into 24 pieces, 6 servings, per side.

Lift the top tier off the cake. (This may be saved for the bride or cut last). A rectangular 2-layer cake remains. Cut off 1-inch slices; then cut each slice into thirds.

If the top tier is served, cut the length into thirds and the width into fourths. Makes 60 to 72 servings.

WEDDING CAKE

4 packages white cake mix
2 teaspoons almond extract

Lemon-Orange Wedding Cake Frosting

Prepare two packages of the cake mix as directed on the packages, blending in 1 teaspoon of the almond extract. Pour batter into two greased and floured 13 x 9-inch pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes. Cool.

Prepare the other two packages of cake mix as directed on packages, blending in the remaining 1 teaspoon almond extract. Pour batter into one greased and floured 13 x 9-inch pan and one greased and floured 9-inch square pan, dividing batter so as to have the same depth in each pan. Bake at 350 degrees for about 30 minutes for the 9-inch cake, and 35 to 40 minutes for the 13 x 9-inch cake.

• • •

To Frost. Reserve about 2 cups Lemon-Orange Wedding Cake Frosting for decorating. Arrange two of the 13 x 9-inch cakes, 13-inch sides together, on cardboard underliner on serving tray or board; then frost with 4 cups frosting.

Place remaining 13 x 9-inch cake lengthwise on first tier and frost with 3 cups frosting. For third tier, cut and remove a 1-inch strip from opposite ends of the 9-inch square cake to make a 9 x 7-inch cake. Place on second tier and frost with 1½ cups frosting.

To Decorate. With a cake decorator, use reserved frosting to make roses, leaves, floral garlands, or other desired decorations on cake top and sides. Top with wedding bell, flowers, or desired decoration.

Note: While frosting cakes, keep bowl of frosting covered with damp cloth to prevent drying.

Lemon-Orange Wedding Cake Frosting

½ cups shortening
½ teaspoon salt
4 pounds sifted confectioners' sugar
1½ cups (about) light cream
1½ teaspoons lemon extract
1 teaspoons orange extract

Cream shortening; add salt and part of sugar gradually, blending after each addition. Add remaining sugar, alternately with cream, beating vigorously after each addition until smooth and creamy. Blend in lemon and orange extract. Makes about 11 cups.

Note: While frosting cake, keep bowl of frosting covered with a damp cloth to prevent drying.

Broadcasting scheduled at Morgan Coll.

One of the new courses scheduled for the summer session at Morgan State College is Speech 217 (TV Broadcasting). This three-credit course is designed to provide training and practice in both before-the-camera communication skills and behind-the-camera production techniques.

All exercises will be written, performed, produced and videotaped by the students themselves in the videorecording laboratory.

In order to afford each student ample opportunity for studio practice before and behind the camera, enrollment will be limited to twelve.

The class will meet nightly from 7:30 to 8:50 p.m.

Other offerings in Speech include Fundamentals of Speech and Oral Interpretation.

Courses are available in other fields as art, biology, business administration, business education, chemistry, geography, health and physical education, history, mathematics, modern languages, home economics, music, physics, political science, psychology, science education, and sociology.

Stroke training offered nurses

Eight Maryland nurses are receiving special training in stroke nursing geared to the facilities in their hospitals through a workshop at the School of Nursing, University of Maryland in Baltimore.

The course, which is also sponsored by the department of neurology at the university's School of Medicine and the Maryland Regional Medical Program, includes four weeks of courses with a two-week break in the middle. During this two-week interval, nurses return to the hospitals where they work to see how they can apply what they have learned.

Two similar workshops are planned for the fall.

Nurses participating in this workshop are: Misses Ruth Amick, Frederick Memorial; Barbara Andrews, Provident; Jamie Harrison, University; Isabelle Kotowski, City; Helen Reier, Franklin Square; Joan Russell, St. Joseph's; Carole Smith, Good Samaritan; and Sally Tipmongkol, Bon Secours.

Additional information and application forms for future workshops are available from Miss Linda Wadian, School of Nursing, University of Maryland at Baltimore, 624 W. Lombard St., Baltimore 21201.

Civic Center's new room now in operation

The Baltimore Civic Center has opened the new Galaxy Room.

Financed by the ARC Berlin Vending Company, which is the official Civic Center Concessionaire, at a cost of $35,000 as a part of its agreement with the Commission, it provides an attractive, additional lounge and meeting room for 150 people. In addition, it is a concession location for the sale of foods and beverages, according to Harold J. Jennifer, executive director of the center.

Built by the Goodman Construction Co., the Galaxy Room is 25 by 27 feet containing 16 tables for two, two large service counters, a steam table, a modern stainless steel kitchen containing a two-door refrigerator and four large ovens, a specially designed ceiling with high-hat hidden lights, and full length sliding glass doors across its entire front, overlooking the Civic Center's main lobby on Baltimore Street.

It includes the latest in bar equipment with red wall-to-wall carpeting extending beyond its entrance doors to cover the balcony approach area.

The Galaxy Room complements the Civic Center's Constellation Room lounge as a bright accompanying room for multi-purposes — as a fast service carry-out facility during stage shows and athletic events, a hospitality room for conventions, and a room for business and social meetings or for press conferences, Mr. Jennifer said.
