Tessman unmoved by Foster menace

New York men attending the weekend workouts of Mark Tessman were inclined to play down the chances of the Texas challenger against light-heavyweight champion Bob Foster, but Tessman goes into tomorrow's (Saturday) title bout with a confidence that is truly amazing.

Smaller, less experience, outreached by several inches and wearing the face of a schoolboy, Tessman nevertheless gives the impression of being unmoved by the many physical advantages enjoyed by the hard-punching titleholder.

The AFRO has picked Foster to win by a knockout inside five rounds. When advised of this, Baltimore heavyweight Larry Middleton equipped "Well, that'll give the entire stable seven rounds Saturday night."

Middleton meets Mike Lanum in the warmup to the title scrap. He told the AFRO: ("I'll take him out in two." Lanum is a stablemate of Tessman's from Houston.

Foster has knocked out 35 in winning 41 bouts against four losses. All four of these defeats were suffered at the hands of moving boxers, the same style as that of Tessman according to promoter Eli Hanover.

* * *

The champion has gone ten rounds in his career only four times, and he hasn't had to travel that distance in any of his bouts of the last five years.

The Tessman camp feels that their man is fast enough to stay out of trouble through the early rounds, and the longer the bout goes, the better it will be for Mark.

The challenger is only 24 years old, Foster is 31. Tessman is unimpressed by the 35-4-2 record of the own dog of 33 victories against only one loss.

The remainder of the Civic Center card is as follow:

Bobo Renfrow of Washington, vs. George Hill of Philadelphia,

Elliott Miller, Brentwood, L.I., vs. Al Bolden, Piney Point, Md., six rounders;

Wild Bill Hardney, Washington, vs. Cannon Haynes, Baltimore, light-heavies;

Maurice Smith, D.C., vs. Lou Brooks, D.C., middleweights; and Alvin Anderson, Baltimore, vs. Candude Wade, D.C., welterweights, four rounds.

Bullets renew Civic lease

The Baltimore Bullets have exercised their option on the current lease at the Civic Center, extending the agreement through the 1972-73 season.

The lease currently in existence was originally a three-year option which was three-year pact between the Bullets and the city starting with the 1968-69 season. The coming season is the third year for the agreement, which contained a two-year option clause.

Bullet owner Abe Pollin informed Civic Center director Harold Jennifer by letter this week of the Bullets' intention of renewing the lease for the additional two years.

* * *

At the same time, the Bullets also announced the opening of the 1970-71 season ticket campaing.

Letters to last year's season ticket and partial plan holders have already been have until July 15 to retain mailed out and they will have until July 15 to retain their seatsfor next season.

A $25 deposit per ticket is required for season tickets, with a $10 down payment necessary for partial plan holders.

Old Taylor Presents:
6 Ingenious Americans.
These black men helped change the world!

Nearly all of these Ingenious Americans were poor and came up the hard way. Most had to work their way through school. Yet each, in his own way, made a lasting contribution to mankind.

These busts are available for just $5 each (that's what they cost us). They're 8" tall, made of antique bronze cast stone, and bear a complete history of the subject. To get them—just fill out the coupon below.

Norbert Rillieux developed a fast, inexpensive method of refining sugarcane in 1846. Before this time, it was a luxury for the very few. Because of Rillieux, sugar became inexpensive enough to make all our lives a little sweeter.

Lewis Howard Latimer, son of an escaped slave, became an electrical engineer and an inventor. He invented a method for making carbon filament in an incandescent lamp, which he patented. Eventually he became a noted aide to Thomas Edison and one of the Edison Pioneers. Today, a school in Brooklyn, New York, bears his name.

Benjamin Banneker became a prominent surveyor, mathematician and astronomer. When Major L'Enfant, the original architect of Washington, D.C., packed up and quit, the job was turned over to Banneker, who had transcribed the Major's plans. Banneker played a key role in putting the White House, the Treasury and the Capitol where they are today!

Matthew Henson was an assistant to Admiral Peary on his now-famous expeditions. On the final trip, when Peary lay exhausted and crippled with frostbite, it was Henson who pushed on and became the first man to locate and stand on the North Pole.

Dr. Charles Drew, an expert on blood and its components, introduced the idea of a blood bank. Today, when someone needs blood, the hospital makes a call to the local blood bank. Within minutes the proper type is there. Dr. Drew made it possible to save lives by storing blood.

Dr. Dan Williams worked as a barber to get through high school. Eight years after graduating from medical school, he opened a man's chest and sewed up a knife wound of the heart sac. Dr. Williams performed the world's first heart operation.

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy told church leaders last week, America is in danger because "an unfeeling power structure is responding to a social crisis with violence and repression instead of constructive change."

MARBLES CHAMPION — Thirteen-year-old George McKesson of the Carter Woodson Recreation Center, last week finished third in the national marbles championship at Wildwood, N.J., competing with youngsters from all over the U.S. He is shown with his counselor and coach, Charlie Moore. Young McKesson won the Baltimore title two weeks ago for the second time and qualified to represent the city in the national shootoff.

MUHAMMAD'S DREAM

S.C. 'sparring session' then Frazier in Detroit

CHARLESTON, S.C. (UPI) — Former heavyweight champion Cassius (Muhammad Ali) Clay, who has not fought since April, 1968, is scheduled to appear in a six-round charity "sparring session" here July 9.

Clay, whose draft conviction is pending in federal courts, will fight Jeff Merritt of New York City in an event sponsored by real estate broker Reginald Barrett.

* * *

South Carolina law prevents prize fights in the state, but Barrett has been given permission by the city of Charleston to hold the event in the 4,000 seat Charleston Auditorium. There are reports that the American Legion and other civic groups are planning to oppose the event.

Barrett is the founder of "Barrett's Bombers," a group which has worked with underprivileged children for five years, teaching them how to box and instructing them in other sports activities.

* * *

It is reported that Clay and Merritt, who will both wear sparring helmets, will box one or two rounds and then pause to allow Clay to explain what he has been doing and what punches he has been throwing.

Barrett said Clay will receive 2,000 in expense money for appearing in the event. It is not known how much Merritt will receive.

Clay's last fight was in Madison Square Garden against Zora Foley.

Barrett said he has signed a contract with Clay's manager, Chauncy Eskridge, for the sparring event.

A Detroit boxing promoter, with the help of Mayor Jerome Cavanagh, is attempting to arrange a championship fight between Clay and Joe Frazier Sept. 21st.

Michigan Gov. William Milliken has said he will not stand in the way of the fight, providing the state boxing commissioner, Chuck Davey, approves it.

Davey said Clay, who prefers the name Ali, was issued a license to box in Michigan in September, 1968, after he was indicted for refusal to be inducted into military service and his heavyweight title was stripped.

"I don't see how the situation has changed in that he is free and his case is still pending in the courts," Davey said.

Birdseed . . .

The return of relief pitcher Moe Drabowsky to the Orioles did not go unnoticed at Memorial Stadium. "Might Moe Is Back" in white paint "mysteriously" showed up in big block letters on the green canvas covering the outfield fence in left field.

* * *

Bullpen duty got a rise in status recently as Birds home games. Relief pitchers are driven into the field in a black-and-orange kart complete with a large (Orioles hat as a top. The roof is supported by four baseball bats.

Three more regular phase selections of the Free Agent draft have signed contracts. Outfielder Sylvester Caudle, a No 11 choice from Los Angeles, will join No. 39 pick Pete Miller, a 20-year-old shortstop from South Bend, Ind., at Aberdeen. The class-A Pheasants in the Northern League will start their season on Sunday, June 28.

Left-handed pitcher Mike Ivancin, the Birds' No 18 selection, has signed a contract with Bluefield the O's rookie Club in the Appalachian League. The 17-year-old, who stands 6'4" and weighs 200 pounds, starred at Bishop Barry High School in St Petersburg, Fla.

The Orioles now have 21 players from the draft under contract.

* * *

Two outfielders and one infielder signed Orioles' organization contracts after a weekend tryout camp at Miami Stadium, it was announced by Walter Shannon, the club's Director of scouting.

Shortstop Art Simon and outfielder Greg Steglin, both 19, have joined the Bluefield Orioles, the Birds' rookie team in the Appalachian League.

Another outfielder, Phil Saunders, will play for Bluefield during the 1971 season. The 20-yearold flew to Miami from his home in Nassau, The Bahamas, after learning about the tryout on a Florida radio station.
