"We know that many people share our interest in this community activity and also that there is a pressing need for this type program.

"Many of today's young people will be our community leaders tomorrow, that is one of the main reasons why this campaign is conducted each year for the purpose of helping young people assume civic pride in his or her neighborhood."

* * *

She further stated, she is hopeful that adults will encourage their neighborhood youngsters to sign up for the program and lend their support.

Can we count on you to play an important part in this year's drive by making your contribution? All money sent in is used only to award youngsters, all the cost of running the campaign is furnished by the AFRO-AMERICAN.

Please make checks payable to AFRO Charities Clean Block Fund, a tax deductible contribution.

Tribune publisher E.W. Rhodes dies

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — E. Washington Rhodes, editor-publisher of the Philadelphia Tribune, died in the Mercy-Douglass Hospital had been ill for two weeks.

Rhodes had suffered a heart attack within a week after his recent return from a six-week overseas trip during which he visited several countries in Africa and Europe.

Funeral services for the prominent newspaper man and civic leader are scheduled for Sunday.

Rhodes first became editor of the Tribune in 1922. The next year he married the former Miss Bertha Perry, daughter of the late Chris J. Perry, who founded the Tribune in 1884. She died several years ago.

* * *

Rhodes served as editor of the paper until 1941, when he was named publisher. He became editor-publisher in 1953.

An attorney who was admitted to the Philadelphia Bar in 1926, Rhodes held many civic posts in his long career of public service, including assistant U.S. attorney (1926-1933), member of the state legislature (1939-1940), president of the National Bar Association (1933-1934), a trustee of Lincoln University (1939-1941), member of the County Board of Law Examiners (1947-1953).

Long interested in helping the underprivileged, Rhodes founded the Philadelphia Tribune Charities, Inc. and served as its treasurer.

He was awarded honorary degrees from Morris College and Lincoln University.

In 1953, Rhodes was named by the Pennsylvania Gov. John Fine as the first black member of the State Board of Parole. At the time, it was the highest administrative position held by a black man in the entire state.

Rhodes married his second wife, the former Mrs. Jeanne Simmons Scott of Pittsburgh, in 1965.

Frank W. Mitchell, 65, Argus editor-publisher

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Funeral services for Frank W. Mitchell Sr., editor-publisher of the St. Louis Argus, were held at the Berea Presbyterian Church. Rev. Carl Dudley delivered the eulogy.

Mr. Mitchell, 65, died of cancer June 11 in St. Mary's Hospital after being ill for nearly a year. He was described as "man with a zest for living — a man in a hurry."

The church was filled to capacity and as mourners and friends viewed the remains in a bronze steel casket, the St. Louis Argus Little Leaguers marched in full uniform.

Fourteen candles were lit, seven on each side of the altar. A golden coverlet, trimmed in royal purple was drawn gently over the casket. Then the organ swelled with the hymn, "What a Friend We Have With Jesus . . ."

Mr. Mitchell, a native of St. Louis, was born April 18, 1905. As a youth, he worked for the Argus, a family newspaper. He graduated from Sumner High School and attended the University of Chicago.

In 1943, the editor was elected a trustee of Berea and also served on the boards of the American Cancer Society and the Annie Malone Children's Home. Gov. James T. Blair appointed him to the Missouri State Board of Education.

* * *

Mr. Mitchell, who lived with his family at 7337 Balsam Ave., University City, is survived by his wife, Bettye and his mother, Mrs. Nannie Mitchell Turner, president of the Argus.

Also, three sons, Frank of Chicago; Eugene, medical director at the Horner G. Philips Hospital and Kenneth. There are also two daughters, Chrl Nan and Soroya.

The A. L. Beal Undertaking Co. was in charge of arrangements.
