THE REV. MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR BROWN marked the anniversary of their golden wedding at a garden party in Baltimore, Saturday.

Whirlwind romance spans half century

It was 1919. World War I had ended. Arthur Brown, just out of the Army, with time on his hands, strolled leisurely through Lafayette Market. That's how the story begins.

For it was there that Mr. Brown spied a pretty little maid, busily working in a market stall. Even before he left the market that day, he had learned that she was Margaret Augusta Nunnally, and that the stall in which she worked belonged to her uncle, Everett Jones.

A year later Miss Nunnally was Mrs. Arthur Brown, and last week the Browns' first-sight love affair had chalked up 50 years of happy marriage.

They, six children, 20 grandchildren, and nine great grandchildren marked the occasion with a garden reception at their home on Elderon Ave.

The Rev. Mr. Brown, who has been pastor of the Walbrook Community Baptist Church for the past 21 years, has a workable recipe for successful marriage. Concentrate, says he, on "raising" the children and not trying to "raise" each other. Learn to give and take. Pray for guidance.

"Love is the key," says Mrs. Brown. Of course, she adds, couples will disagree, but they must "disagree agreeably. She says, too, that children must be taught to honor their parents.

The Rev. Mr. Brown is proud of the fact that none of his children have ever been in trouble. "I didn't believe in sparring the rod," he smiles.

During the years the children were growing up, Mrs. Brown remained a homemaker. Later she tried job holding, and worked at 100 W. University Parkway until a recent illness.

Their children include:

Arthur Brown Jr., a worker at B and O Station; Mrs. Rosina Norman of New York, a government worker; Marcellus Brown of Philadelphia, a hospital worker; Ronald Brown, Baltimore postal worker; Grafton Brown, of U.P.S. service; and Mrs. Gwendolyn Townes, government worker.

Guests came from six cities in addition to Baltimore, to congratulate the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Brown. Mrs. Brown wore a gold colored dress on the golden anniversary.

Out-of-town guests included:

Mrs. Alice Campbell, Miss Dorothy Nunnally, Miss Nellie Nunnally, Mrs. Margaret Johnson, Austin Lewis, Mrs. Martha Tucker, Ronald Tucker, and Miss Rosina Norman of New York;

Hints For Homemakers

INEZ KAISER

A few weeks ago, my husband and I were preparing to go on a two-week trip abroad.

Two nights before our departure, some friends dropped by to bid us "bon voyage," which called for a little entertaining on our part.

Well, wouldn't you know, one of the "strong men" in the party broke a glass and cut his hand. He grabbed the closest thing he could find to put around it—one of my best linen napkins.

After the excitement died down, his wife apologized to me, saying she was very sorry that her husband had ruined one of my linen set.

"Oh, don't worry," I said. "Don't give it another thought. The blood stains will come out easily. I'll just soak the napkin in a gallon of cold water and ¼ cup of DRIVE for a couple of hours, then drop it in the machine with the rest of my wash."

She looked at me in astonishment and exclaimed: "I can never get blood stains out of anything!"

I told her that DRIVE takes care of all my stains—"It contains a professional stain remover that removes stubborn stains without damaging fabrics or fading colors."

"I'm so glad you told me about DRIVE," she responded. "Now, I don't feel so badly about your napkin. And, I'm going to try DRIVE myself the next time I do the laundry."

"You'll surely be pleased," I assured her.

PACKING FOR PROTECTION

The day after our impromptu gathering was really a busy one. As usual, I was running behind schedule with my packing.

So when one of my friends volunteered to give me a hand, I asked her if she would pack my toilet-ries and be sure not to forget LIFEBUOY soap.

"Why are you taking your own soap?" she inquired.

"Oh, I always take some with me," I replied. A bath with mild-scented LIFEBUOY leaves me feeling so refreshed I feel ready for every exciting activity the trip offers.

"Actually, LIFEBUOY is a household word with us. Both Richard and my son like it because it has long-lasting deodorant protection. It's also my favorite because of its mint-refreshing, pick-me-up qualities.

"In fact, that's what makes LIFEBUOY such an all-round top choice for the whole family. Everyone likes it for different reasons—for shaver or bath.

"You know," my friend said, "I have been looking for a long time for a single brand that would satisfy my entire family's needs and, at long last, LIFEBUOY sounds like it."

"I also see that you're a PEPSODENT user," my friend commented.

"Oh yes," I responded, "we have been using PEPSODENT for many years and have never found a better toothpaste.

"We especially like PEPSODENT because it keeps teeth so white and sparkling. You know how important that is in my line of work," I said.

"With PEPSODENT on my team, I never have to worry about a dingy smile. I take a tube with me everywhere I go, no matter how short the trip."

My friend laughed. "You're just a wealth of information," she said, "like a walking encyclopedia. Do you brush your teeth in any special way?"

"Yes, I really do," I said. "The PEPSODENT people say we should brush down on the outside and inside of our upper teeth and brush up on the inside and outside of our lower teeth. After I do this, I squeeze some PEPSODENT on my brush and scrub the chewing surfaces of my teeth. If possible, I brush them at least two minutes each time. Then my mouth feels so wonderful and fresh and my teeth look so white that I feel like smiling at everyone, even strangers."

"I'll just have to try it," my friend said.

Once she does, I know she'll be toting her brush and PEPSODENT with her, too, wherever she goes.

IMPERIAL ADVICE

The morning of departure, we were so busy rushing around doing our last-minute checking that we almost decided not to bother with breakfast.

But we had a long trip to the airport ahead of us and I know we would be sorry if we didn't take time out to eat something. So I made some toast and coffee and Richard got the IMPERIAL margarine out of the refrigerator.

We use BOP-SPREAD IMPERIAL because there's never any need to wait for it to get soft enough to spread. It took only a few minutes to prepare our simple breakfast, but the golden toast spread with IMPERIAL tasted wonderful and we both felt so much better after we had it.

As it turned out, we didn't have another chance to eat until several hours later, on the plane. So we were especially grateful for IMPERIAL's nutritious "staying power."

We missed IMPERIAL when we were in Europe—but our son kept our refrigerator at home well stocked with it while we were away. He loves the IMPERIAL flavor, too.

We had a wonderful trip and now we're back home again, enjoying beautiful memories of far-away places and interesting new friends we met.
