STOP Squad raids Block, nabs bevy of mini-skirted dolls

"They were like the 17-year locusts, all over the place."

This was the situation last Friday just before the Police Department raided "The Block" downtown on Baltimore St. to flush out an interracial group of female impersonators and suspected prostitutes, according to Lt. James Watkins.

Lt. Watkins, Officers Norman J. Parker and Vernon E. May led the raid by the entire 30-member STOP Squad that resulted in arrests of ten female impersonators and four suspected prostitutes.

The unexpected swoop-down came after Central District received complaints of numerous robberies, assaults, larcenies and false pretense cases (flimflam and rollings).

Raiding officers described the suspects as "all decked out in mini-mini frocks, beautiful wigs, hanging earrings and the whole bit."

Appearing before Judge Jerome Robinson in Municipal Court on June 27 were the 14 persons arrested on Friday night.

Those found guilty and fined identified themselves as follows: —

Md. Institute courses for inner city youths

For the fourth consecutive summer, the Maryland Institute is conducting a special program, largely in the visual arts, for young people, most of them inner city youths, with the cooperation of Community Action Agency.

The sessions are varied, involving a number of different instructors and subjects. The purpose of the program is to expose young people who have expressed an interest in the visual arts to (a) other art forms or (b) familiar forms perhaps approached in another way.

* * *

This year's "Explore '70" programs features Sam Gilliam, Sam Cornish, and Nat Johnson — all black artists.

Teaching three separate subject areas, these instructors are involved in roughly half of the four week (twenty session) long program.

Other individuals who have not participated in the last two years include Eugene W. Leake, president of the Maryland Institute, Theodore Klitzke, Dean of the Institute; Ronald Grow, sculptor; Richard Wagner, jewelry teacher at the Maryland Institute; Lucian Dixon, graduate student in photography; Bruce Teare and Jim Merrill, graduate students in printmaking.

In addition, young people have been engaged in a film experience each year, but this is the first time they will shoot a film with a camera.

'Explore' is loosely related to the Maryland Institute's curriculum throughout the year — instructors for the special summer program are largely drawn from the Institute's regular faculty.

For more detailed information, call Susan Katz at the Institute (669-9200, extension 24) 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m.

State Board delays action on integrated statement

HITS LACK OF BLACK PRINCIPLES

The State Board of Education, in its monthly meeting on Wednesday, postponed action on a resolution to restate its commitment to integration in Maryland schools and to reinforce this commitment by supporting new curricular programs about ethnic and cultural minorities.

Dr. Ramsay B. Thomas, Board member, opposed voting on the resolution at all; Mrs. William P. Robie then suggested to Jerome Framptom, Jr., president of the Board that public hearings be held on the resolution. Hearings were then scheduled for September 30th. Other details are not definite.

* * *

The Resolution would provide that: (1) "Local boards of education shall establish advisory committees to assist in planning and evaluating all substantive and public relations aspects of ethnic and cultural minorities' programs. (2) "The Maryland State Department of Education shall provide guidelines for the use of federal and State funds to assure that discriminatory practices are not used in employing personnel, selecting materials, and determining school populations.

"The Maryland State Department of Education shall require the local boards of education to develop and implement plans and procedures for, and submit reports on, desegregation of personnel."

* * *

In other action the Board released a report entitled: "A Comparison by Certificate, and Degree Status of Maryland Principals, By Race for the School Year 1968-1969."

It showed a decline in the number of black principals compared with the number of white principals during the period 1954-1968.

"The decline in black principals," says the report, "was noted as being consistent at both the elementary and secondary levels, and for groups of local school systems which had an increase, as well as a decrease in the number of schools during the above-mentioned period time."

The report further noted "a general reluctance" to promote black educators because of race.

After an in depth study of the relationship between degrees earned and positions held by white and black principals in the State, the report concluded:

"The data presented in the . . . charts support the idea that black educators in order to obtain or retain administrative positions must be at least as qualified or more qualified than white educators.

* * *

". . . the findings do suggest that one factor in determining the appointment of principals is the racial factor. Since black principals tend to be more qualified than white principals with respect to degree and certificate status, it is necessary for those who appoint principals to provide data that would explain why the discrepancy between black and white principals exist."

The final statement concludes that: "We are forced to conclude, on the basis of the data presented, that racial factors are operating which favor whites in the appointment of principals."

Denny McLain, who has won 55 games for the Tigers in the past two years, will almost certainly get a starting assignment against the Birds in the upcoming series at Memorial Stadium . . . His re-instatement is effective July 1, and, assuming he pitches that day, the Tiger right-hander would probably be due up again on Sunday the fifth which, incidentally, is the first of the O's four Sunday 5:30 games . . . McLain, who is 114-57 in the American League, is 11-11 lifetime vs Baltimore.
