'UNIQUE ACHIEVEMENT':

CORE Target City approved to build homes

Milton Holmes, president, CORE Target City Project Inc., announced today that the Federal Housing Administration has approved CORE Target City Project Inc. as a nonprofit sponsor for housing development in Baltimore.

Target City Project Inc. is a subsidiary of CORE specifically formed to sponsor non profit housing development.

Mr. Holmes called this an "unique achievement" for a black nationalist organization and is "long overdue."

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 stated specifically that it needs to produce 600,000 houses annually for low and moderate income families.

Today, approximately 100,000 units are produced annually for federally assisted families which is a far cry from the total needed for progressive gains. The administration must place additional emphasis on housing development.

Target City Project Inc. worked with the Project Area Committee, headed by Mrs. Lucille Gorham, to initiate plans for the development of Lot No. 1 in Gay Street Urban Renewal Area.

The lot is bounded by Monument, Madison, Broadway and Bond Streets. The name of the project is CORE Community. CORE is emphasizing quality low cost housing for its people in this project.

CORE Community will consist of 98 housing units: 70 — 2 bedrooms, 3 story walkup; 18 — 3 bedrooms, 3 stry townhouse; and 10 — 4 bedrooms, 3 story townhouse.

All units will be equipped with air conditioning, range, refrigerator, garbage disposal, and access estimate cost is $1.5 million.

These units will be for rental and sale. Families who were dislocated out of the area will have first preference to either purchase or rent.

Rental cost will be based on income.

The project team consists of Weaver Bros. Inc., mortgagee: Collins and

Frontiers meet set for Tuesday

Delegates from across the country and the Bahamas will be converging on the Monumental City next weekend for the Frontiers International annual convention which is scheduled for July 21-25.

Local club president, Andrew "Boots" Johnson expects "anywhere from 250 to 300 delegates" in town for the organization's first National Convention in Baltimore.

The affair will be held at the Holiday Inn at Howard and Lombard Streets.

Scheduled events for the five-day convention include workshops on youth involvement, education, economics and health, with a list of speakers including Baltimore Police Lt. James Watkins, Mrs. Constance Tate of the Board of Education, Mrs. Loretta Wall, Donald Patterson and Dr. John A. Kenney.

The convention will close officially Saturday with the Board of Directors' meeting.

Students, profs help P. Mitchell

Candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives Parren J. Mitchell revealed this week that a New York-based organization of university and college professors has contributed more than $5,000 to his campaign against encumbent Samuel N. Friedel.

He is one of two black candidates so honored. The other, Ronald V. Dellums running in Los Angeles.

In addition to financial support from the professors, Mr. Mitchell expressed great pleasure at the fact that "black sisters" at Morgan State College had, through the collection of small change from fellow students and others, collected over $500 for his campaign.

Another student group, which contributed the costs of regular caps and gown normally used for graduation to a fund for progressive candidates, raised in excess of $70,000 in all.

They are distributing this sum, but not in equal amounts among all candidates of their choice.

While Mr. Mitchell does not expect to get 10 per cent of the sum, he has been listed among the 10 to be benefitted by this student group.

MISS AFRO-AMERICAN—Miss Rosalee Parker, top, of N. Chester St., left Saturday for an all expense paid trip for two to Nassau for a week. She competed with 100 others and won the AFRO-AMERICAN's "Miss Afro-American" contest which was held last year. She is accompanied by Miss Shirley Marshall, also of Baltimore.

Jackie Doped-up For Wedding Trip

Did you ever hear of a bridegroom being placed under heavy sedation before his wedding?

This is precisely what will happen Monday, when Jackie leaves Friendship Airport for Phoenix, Arizona, to wed Hazel.

Jackie is the 300-pound 18-year-old male gorilla who's spent the last 16 years in the Baltimore City Zoo.

He is a full-grown gorilla but he has never courted.

Although this is Jackie's first romantic endeavor, Hazel is a widow. Her former mate, Mongo, died 18 months ago of valley fever.

Since gorillas are facing extinction in Africa, Baltimore and Phoenix zoo officials agreed Hazel and Jackie should be mated to conserve the animals.

Jackie held a press conference Wednesday, at his Mammal House at which time he officially described his wedding trip.

On his airplane ride, Jackie will get VIP treatment.

After an injection of drugs to keep him asleep, he will ride to the airport in an ambulance with a police escort!

During the six hours in the air he will be monitored by three attendants, veterinarian Dr. Mitchell Bush, Baltimore Zoo assistant director John A. Moore and Baltimore Zoological Society president Ray Thompson.

Jackie will arrive at the Phoenix Zoo and meet Hazel at about midnight after another ambulance ride.

It is not known whether she will give him a cocktail party to welcome him to the Midwest.

Getting Jackie to meet his prospective bride wasn't easy.

Jackie was scheduled to fly to Phoenix on June 27, in an Arizona Air National Guard C-97 which was to refuel at Dover Air Force Base, Delaware en route from Germany to Arizona.

Secretary of the Air Force Robert C. Seamons, Jr. turned the request down to prevent any encroachment by the military on commercial air-cargo carriers.

There are no air-cargo flights from Baltimore to Phoenix.

Commercial airlines couldn't transport him in a cage in the cargo compartments which would have been too small. They wouldn't allow the gorilla to ride as a passenger, even though sedated and placed on a stretcher.

Independent air carriers would have taken him in an unsuitable unpressurized aircraft for $7,500 and an prop-jet for $12,500, an impossible figure for the Phoenix Zoo which had agreed to pay the transportation fees.

Finally, travel arrangements were made after Amanda Blake, of the Gunsmoke television series, appealed to the CBS News Service to use its contract with Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. to obtain a small Lear executive jet for $3,500.

Hazel and Jackie will make their home in the recently constructed $250,000 moated, unbarred complex, designed for housing and breeding gorillas.

The Phoenix Zoo, which is paying $5,000 for Jackie has agreed to give the couple's first offspring to the Baltimore Zoo.

The AFRO reporter and zoo officials are hoping Hazel wants a second mate and will be willing to spend [illegible] with Jackie. — BRENDA WRIGHT.

Blues singer George Craft was legendary figure in D.C.

A scrapbook kept by the late blues singer George Craft attests to the reason he was accorded the title in nightclub circles as "The President of the Blues."

An observation by nightlife columnist Ike Kendrick ten years ago said "George Craft is not just an entertainer, but a legendary figure in Washington whose name is synonymous with with show business. He is much a part of Dee Cee as the Washington Monument."

The article goes on to say "While George is satisfied to be referred to as 'The President of the Blues,' he is deserving of a much more pretentious title than that, something like 'Mr. Entertainment' or 'King George I of Entertainerdom.'"

(Mr. Craft was never known as a female impersonator as was mistakenly reported in an earlier AFRO story. The AFRO regrets the error).

Stricken last Saturday night while serving as weekend host at Rocky's Club in the 4400 block Benning Rd., NE, Mr. Craft was pronounced dead on arrival at D.C. General Hospital. In previous years he had emceed many a fabulous show at Rocky's.

GEORGE CRAFT

He was 63 years old and had made his home for 13 years in the household of Mrs. Grace Butler at 4833 Illinois Ave., NW.

His body will be on view Thursday at the Sam Butler Funeral Home at 3909 Georgia Ave., N.W.

Funeral services will be held at 12 noon Friday at Canaan Baptist Church, 16th and Newton Sts., NW, where Mr. Craft was a member of the Men's Club. The Rev. Browning J. Peyton, an associate minister at the church will officiate.

The entertainer's survivors include two brothers, Arthur Carpenter of Baltimore; Walter Carpenter of Augusta, Ga., and a sister, Mrs. Castina Stewart, also of Augusta, the family's hometown.

George Craft's specialty numbers were "Down on the farm," and "Up In Yale," both of which were guaranteed to "rock the house."

Migrating to Washington from Buffalo, N.Y., where he went at an early age, and from nite clubs in Harlem, N.Y., the entertainer became a star performer for years on the Washington-Baltimore scenes, and Richmond, Va. cabaret scenes.

He did personable singing and emcee performances at Rockys, the Club Caverns, the 20-11 Club, the Melody Room, and others.

His cabaret performances and birthday parties attracted admirers from all walks of life including professional people, fellow entertainers, socialites, cafe society, glamor girls and the town's best known sports figures.

As reported in one of his scrapbook treasures, the columnist said:

"I've seen George Craft walk into a smart formal affair in the Lincoln Colonade (where the atmosphere was a little stuffy due to the social prestige of the guests who were all trying to behave in their best Emily Post manner) get up on the stage and announce in that booming baritone voice of his 'This ain't no funeral, let's rock this joint.'

"And then George would burst out in one of his house-rocking numbers. Immediately everybody would get the message; they'd let their hair down, start clapping their hands or jump up and start to putting down their version of the popular dance of the day.

"You'd think you were at a rock 'n roll dance at the Capital Arena instead of a swank formal.

"George started in the bigtime when he played the old Cotton Club in Harlem. Dr. Charles (Buck) West

BUSY YOUNG CAREER WOMEN occasionally find it necessary to pack lunch for the office. These Individual Cinnamon Coffee Cakes are ideal to bake and freeze on the weekend and keep on hand for those busy workdays.

Career girl plans lunch needs ahead

Let's say her name is Sarah. And she's one of the increasing number of young women participating daily in the exciting world of business.

Sarah finds planning ahead a significant part of each day's responsibilities. And that includes such matters as lunch. After all, she recognizes that diet during the workday is extremely important and should not be taken lightly.

Occasionally, lunch at the desk is necessary for one of a dozen reasons: lunch hour crowds, limited time, low funds; you name it. On such days, a well-balanced lunch from home is the perfect answer.

It doesn't have to be a big chore the night before, especially when Sarah devotes a little time over the weekend to prepare hr lunch. That's possible with the aid of her favorite homemade cakes, such as Individual Cinnamon Coffee Cakes. She bakes them on the weekend, and freezes them in packets of two.

Individual Cinnamon Coffee Cakes require one and three-fourth cups unsifted cake flour, two and a half teaspoons double-acting baking powder, three-fourth teaspoons salt, a fourth cup granulated sugar, a third cup shortening, one well-beaten egg; three-fourth cup milk, a third cup firmly packed brown sugar, a teaspoon cinnamon and a tablespoon butter, melted.

Mix flour, baking powder and salt. Cream shortening, gradually add granulated sugar, and cream until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well.

Then add flour in three additions, alternately with milk in two additions, beginning and ending with flour. Stir only enough to dampen flour. Do not overbeat.

Spoon batter into greased medium muffin pans, filling each about two-thirds full. Combine brown sugar, cinnamon and butter. Sprinkle over muffin batter. Bake at 370 F. about 25 minutes. Bakes 12 muffins.

Tempting outdoor indoor menus

By VIRGINIA McLUCKIE
food economist

Rain or shine weekends mean extra planning for meals.

The same foods will make tempting menus for eating both indoors and outdoors.

Shop for specials at the meat counter. The usual selections generally are centered around broiler-fryer chicken which is in abundant supply at attractive prices. These are ideal for cooking anyway your family enjoys chicken.

Two other poultry items, turkey and eggs are highly recommended for good value for your food dollar. Ham is a popular meat for quick meals.

Fully cooked hams are recommended because they take less time for cooking and the cook-shrinkage is lower than that of regular smoked hams. Buy the size, whole, half or portion of ham, to suit your families' needs.

The popular ground beef and hot dogs are two recommended cook out meats because they appeal to all age groups, are economical and taste better cooked over charcoal.

Besides the meat course you will want to round out your menus with foods from the fruit and vegetable group, breads and cereals and certainly some of the milk group in milk to drink or dairy products. Plan well balanced meals for all occasions.

Local offerings of green beans and cabbage are in adequate supply. New potatoes are suggested for use in making potato salad because they hold their shape and are less mushy when cooked. In addition new potatoes are ideal for baking, frying or boiling.

Florida and Georgia sweet corn is in abundance. This corn is succulent and tender when properly handled after hydrocooling at the point of production. Iceberg lettuce is the best salad green buy. Add some touches of finger food vegetables like carrot strips, onion rings, green pepper strips and radishes since these are in the moderate cost bracket.

The supply of fruits is increasing. Peaches from Georgia and South Carolina are moving in volume. Select your peaches by the deep yellow ground color instead of the red cheeks to insure ripeness. Other available small fruits are apricots, nectarines, plums and blueberries.

Watermelons, picnics and weekends are allaspoken of in one breath. Florida and Georgia watermelons are coming in volume. Select a firm, symmetrical shaped melon with a bloom over the entire rind, and yellowish color to the lower side that has been in the ground during growth. Nothing beats an icy cold watermelon for instant refreshment.

Cut it anyway you like — into juicy wedges, chunks or cubes. Iced watermelon cut into balls or cubes and flavored with just a touch of fresh lemon juice or ground ginger is a wonderful appetizer. A fruitcup made with tangy pineapple wedges, blue berries and icy watermelon balls is enticing. Just slices to eat out of hand are ideal for picnics and outdoor eating.

The only test of ripeness that can be depended upon one hundred per cent is the cutting and tasting test. If a few melons chosen at random in various parts of the field pass the ripeness test, it is a reasonable presumption that others of similar outside appearance will do so.

Generally this is true but if your market will plug the melon you actually are sure of inside ripeness. Remember it takes a long time to chill through a whole 20-27 pound watermelon.

Small onions are best for boiling whole, stewing or creaming, medium ones for serving stuffed, and large ones for thick slices to top off hamburgers and for fried onion rings. All sizes of onions are equally good for grating, chopping, mince or slicing.

Economy meals for good eating

Little Miss Muffet — sitting on a tuffet and eating her curds and whey — has probably puzzled countless youngsters, who had no idea of what she was actually eating.

Curds and whey are simply the components of coagulated milk. When the watery whey is removed, the remainder is the basis for all the world's cheeses.

And the varieties are nearly endless — over 400 are known. By varying the length of time the cheese is aged, the temperature and humidity at which it is processed, the method of ripening, and added ingredients, a host of textures and flavors is obtained.

If you've never developed a sophisticated taste for cheese now's the time to find out what you've been missing. Cheese, like all dairy products, is especially plentiful and reasonably priced at that time of year, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service.

For a palate-stretching adventure, have a cheese-sampling party. Start with soft, unripened, mild tasting cheeses, like Neufchatel, Ricotta, and Mysost.

Forge ahead to ripened varieties — with a flavor range from mellow to robust — such as Muenster, Port du Salut, Camembert, Limburger, and Roquefort. Although many cheeses are now made in this country, their foreign names hint at their origins around the world.

The traditional American favorite is Cheddar, or American cheese — accounting for almost 80 per cent of cheese production in the United States. With color from white to deep yellow, taste from mild to very sharp, and packaging in every shape and form, Cheddar offers something for everyone. And like nuggets of gold, Cheddar offers a concentrated wealth — of nutrients. Five ounces supply all the calcium and protein of a quart of milk!

Eating green cheese may not give you a taste of the moon, but sampling cheese varieties will certainly give you a taste of the world!

Here's a menu for a day's good eating using cheese and other foods that are plentiful and moderate in price:

BREAKFAST
Tomato Juice
Scrambled Eggs
English Muffin

This recipe for potato-cheese surprise makes a colorful and tempting dinner vegetable.

Use three cups mashed potatoes, one egg, well-beaten, three fourth teaspoon salt, one half teaspoon finely chopped onion, one half cup shredded cheese, 6 tomato slices, one fourth cup dry bread crumbs, two tablespoons melted butter or margarine and one half teaspoon salt.

Combine potatoes, eggs, salt, onion. Mix well. Shape into 6 patties and place on a greased baking pan. Make a depression in each pattie and fill with cheese. Cover with a slice of tomato.

Mix bread crumbs with the fat and salt and sprinkle over tomato. Bake at 350 degrees. (moderate oven) for 30 minutes.

Six servings.
