Frontiersmen Changing Image, Are No Longer 'Bunch for Lunch' Group

By ELIABETH M. OLIVER

Members and delegates of the Frontiers International organization have been involved all week in meetings and workshops of their 30th annual convention at the downtown Holiday Inn.

The session of both the main division and the women's auxiliary closes today (Friday) with the 8 p.m. President's Banquet.

Main speakers are Mayor William S. Hart Jr., of East Orange, N.J. and Frontiers' president, the Rev. Phale D. Hale of Columbus, Ohio.

* * *

Frontiers International was established in Columbus in 1936 and last met in Baltimore 22 years ago, in 1948.

Delegates from 97 cities nationwide include mostly businessmen and women, physicians, lawyers, educators, civic, church and community leaders.

Somehow, through the years the group was thought of as composed of upper and middle class black persons and dubbed as the "bunch for lunch" group as businessmen met at noon once a week to dine and chat.

However, the present convention, busy this week with problems of the poor, health, war, peace, housing juvenile delinquency and all people in general, belies the old image.

Highlighting all meetings, dinners and social get-togethers were plans to enroll more and younger members to help obtain full citizenship and bring about a better America for all.

* * *

Attracting most attention was the group's pet project, the second annual symposium on vitiligo, the mysterious color-changing skin disease.

Thinking of themselves as pioneers in every community endeavor in the past, the Frontiersmen are certainly pioneers in this field. Their Vitiligo Foundation was established in 1953 when the late Baltimore physician Dr. Bernard Harris was president.

The first of its kind, the foundation is devoted to finding causes and cures for the pigment which changes the color of the skin of white as well as black persons.

Present for the symposium Thursday were some of the nation's foremost dermatologists, Dr. John A. Kenney Jr., dermatology division chairman of Howard University Medical School and Freedmen's Hospital, Washington; Dr. Isreal Zeligman, Johns Hopkins Medical School associate professor and chief of Dermatology at Sinai and Lutheran Hospitals, Baltimore; Dr. Stanley N. Yaffee, University of Maryland professor of dermatology and Dr. Louis F. Harmon, Baltimore University of Maryland assistant professor of dermatology and chief of dermatology at Provident Hospital.

Nimrod B. Allen, Columbus, Ohio, is president emeritus of the Vitiligo Foundation and a founder of the Frontiers group. The Rev. Mr. Hale is president; Harold L. Pilgrim, Philadelphia, executive secretary and Emmer Martin Lancaster, Washington, national administrative derector.

* * *

Annual grants of $14,000 are awarded by Frontiersmen for research into the as yet unknown cause of color change which brings frightening milky white splotches that do not cause death but seriously affect the lives of the victims.

According to Mr. Lancaster, the director and a D.C. attorney, the disease has been known to cause personality damage to youngsters who are shunned by classmates and serious hinderances to adults in employment and normal living.

Mr. Lancaster also asserts that anxiety and fear of the unsightly change from the normal color can be avoided if the victim gets medical aid in time.

Complete cure can come if the disease is not too far gone. Its spread over the body can be halted if attention is obtained quickly.

Mr. Lancaster also reports that the Frontiers' project has discovered there is some relationship of vitiligo to skin cancer and the strange condition may be hereditary.

Members of the Medical Research Committee are Drs. Charles A. Moore, chairman; Garvall H. Booker and A. C. Terrence, the past president of the National Medical Association.

The 34-year-old organization's president, the Rev. Mr. Hale pointed out in his opening address, that the group is far more than a businessmen's lunch and social group.

He reports that various chapters across the nation are setting the pace as is the District of Columbia group which plans to break ground soon for a housing development.

The Rev. Mr. Hale also reports that Frontiersmen — are deeply concerned with people and problems in their communities and successfully take leadership in aiding the unemployed, the deprived, the neglected, the ill and the aged.

Many of the groups have as their main objectives to help black citizens acquire skills, better jobs, self respect, dignity and full citizenship.

Faced with continued loss of membership and even loss of whole chapters in important cities, the Rev. Mr. Hale placed accent on immediate effort to corral rising young leaders now on jobs in new business areas.

He urged delegates to return to their communities and find ways to sponsor non-profit, low-income housing and acquire franchises for business establishments and develop shopping centers.

Convention chairman of the Baltimore host chapter is Dr. T. Andre Pitts, who extended the town's welcome.

Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro and City Solicitor George Russell also gave greetings at the opening luncheon on Wednesday.

Baltimore's Andrew (Boots) Johnson is international second vice president while his wife, Mrs. Ernestine (Toots) Johnson is president of the coordinating council of the Women's Auxiliaries.

Mrs. Johnson accented the need for new members and organizations and asked each auxiliary to contribute in every way to the community.

Mrs. Beatrice Pitts, Baltimore auxiliary president, and Dr. Pitts were hosts to the ladies at a crab feast and outing at their Oyster Harbor summer home on the Chesapeake Bay.

Mrs. Maxine Jenkins, Philadelphia, is vice president; Mrs. Vera Cummins, Opelousas, La., recording secretary; Mrs. Althea Cornish, Baltimore, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sara Dickerson, Houston, Texas, treasurer; Mrs. Amy Williams, Harrisburg, Pa., historian and Mrs. Mary Chandler, Columbus, Ohio, chaplain.

The Baltimore Frontiersmen's executive committee is composed of Dr. Pitts, Arlington S. Phillips and Armstead Jenkins. Other officials are Vernon Sheffer, Ralph Holmes, vice-presidents; Samuel W. Marlow, secretary; Charles W. Fletcher, recording secretary and Franklin C. Fulton, treasurer.

Members are: Milton E. Branch Jr., George G. Brown, Allen H. Burke, John E. T. Camper, George A. Carroll, Joseph Chapman, Benjamin Claiborne, John A. Green Sr., Leslie W. Gundy Sr.

Pinkney A. Howell, Samuel D. Jackson, Charles W. Jones, Victor Julien, Earl Roger Sr., Robert C. Marshall, John M. Middleton, Parlett L. Moore, James E. Nix, Lester Norris,

We want you to buy a Plymouth Fury Gran Coupe. Maybe more than our competition wants you to buy a Ford LTD or a Chevrolet Caprice. Here's what we've done about it.
We matched all three cars as closely as possible. We matched the standard equipment on our Fury Gran Coupe with comparable options on the LTD and the Caprice*. All three cars compared have air conditioning, tinted glass, automatic transmission, a big V-8 engine, power brakes, power steering, wheel covers and a vinyl roof. Plus the other features we've listed in the box on the left.
It all adds up to the longest list of standards (for the Gran Coupe) in the class. And, yet, the Gran Coupe is priced $233 less than LTD and $348 less than Caprice. That's how much we want you to buy a car from us.
And in addition to the Fury Gran Coupe, Plymouth also has 27 models priced under $2000.

ON THE EASTSIDE:

Chander Pinder, good neighbor

By CHARLOTTE W. MASON
And
MARY V. DICKENS

Our good neighbor of the week is charming Miss Chander Pinder, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas (Nannie) Pinder, prominent business couple on our Eastside. (Oliver Street).

Our neighbor attends St. at Rutland Elementary School No. 149. Edward Spath is the principal.

She is a sixth grade pupil Phillip Lutheran Church. Her pastor is the Rev. Mr. Smith. She is a very active member of Camp Fire Girls Cluster No. 3, Mrs. Mary Dickens is her leader.

Incidentally, this group of "livewire" youngsters participates in many community activities. They are shaping up as future leaders. CONGRATS!

* * *

Our neighbor also belongs to the Oliver Street Modern Dance group, the unique organization with no instructor.

Other members of her family are her sister, Deborah, 12, a seventh grader at Lombard Junior High; brother, Elmer, 13.

Our neighbor's hobbies include dodgeball, baseball, tv, and movies. Her favorite color is yellow. Her favorite dish is mashed potatoes.

She likes to sing the Camp Fire song. Her favorite verse is the 23rd Psalm.

She celebrates her birthday Nov. 11. Cuff Note — Her dad is a Bethlehem Steel employee.

* * *

Eastside is putting its best foot forward, helping with the campaign of one of its favorite sons, Marshall W. Jones Jr., running in the coming primary election as state senator from the Second District.

Now, neighbors, let's get behind him. This young man has done much to make our Eastside a better place in which to live for a long time.

For example, he is president of Monumental Housing Corporation; chairman, Model Cities Community Council Area B; co-chairman, Board of Technical Advisors, Afro-American Cultural Committee, board member, Baltimore Urban Coalition.

In addition, he belongs to the Baltimore Urban League, Citizens' Planning and Housing Association, advisory board, Advance Federal Savings and Loan Assoc., and Eastern Police Relations Committee.

More interesting recent happenings on our Eastside include the grand opening of the Well Baby Clinic for Model Cities Council "B."

The dedication was held Tuesday, July 14 at Seventh Baptist Church.

Seen in the audience were Councilman Jacob Edelman, William G. Sykes, Dr. Robert W. Farber, city health commissioner; the Rev. Mr. Dorr, pastor of Seventh Baptist Church; Mrs. Ester Vines, Mrs. Ruth Slaughter, and Mrs. Marie Smallwood.

Also Mesdames Inez Spicer, Laura White Margret Todd, Brenda Young, Shirley Fulwood, Miss Bertha Spreggs Irving Conway, and Lee Douglas, and many residents of the council B area.

Neighbors, I must thank my guest columnist Mrs. Mary V. Dickens, prominent Eastside leader, for assisting yours truly with this column while I am tucked in Lutheran Hospital for a spell. Keep mailing any news to my home, 2411 Montebello Ter. 21214, and the head of my household will see that I get it.

Thanks for your past cooperation, and remember me in your prayers.

Some of the kind, and dedicated staff members who have helped make my stay at Lutheran a pleasant one include: Cele M. Turner, Wanda Coates, Juanita Draughn, Johnny Minter, Allegra Simmons Gertrude Doughtry, Marie Kelly, and Elizabeth Jones. See yo Tuesday.
