Formed 41 years ago, as the Independent National Directors Association in Chicago, Ill., is a merger of the original group and other such organizations States. It was incorporated under the Laws of the State of Illinois.

The association has become the official representative body of funeral directors and is so recognized by the U.S. Dept. of Commerce.

The members meet yearly to discuss new technical skills and improved methods of funeral service.

* * *

The Women's auxillary of the nation-wide organization will also meet during the week.

They have planned a fashion show, a luncheon and a cruise to Annapolis while in Baltimore.

Officers of the women's group are: president, Mrs. Naomi Beckett, Pa.; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Mary McRae, Fla.; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Dorothea Crawford, Washington, D.C.; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. Doryce Brown, New York; treasurer, Mrs. C. J. Clark, Texas; financial secretary, Mrs. Courtney Couch, Ill.; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Gloria Miller, N.J.;

Also, recording secretary, Mrs. Marjorie Barlowe, Tenn.; chaplain, Mrs. Ruth Cummings, Ohio; assistant chaplain, Mrs. Louise Jeffries, New York; parliamentarian, Mrs. Eloise Thompson, Alabama reporter, Mrs. Louise Mack, New York; and Board of Directors chairman, Mrs. Hallie H. Wilson, La.

Special programs are planned for children of delegates.

Record hops will be held in the Florentine Room of the hotel each evening.

There will also be a luncheon, a tour of Annapolis and at the Glenwood Country Club in West Friendship.

A baby sitting service will be provided for smaller children. Those old enough will visit the Druid Hill Park Children's Zoo and Fantasyland and Enchanted Forest.

OLDEST living licensed mortician in Maryland is John M. Johnson of Baltimore. In his eighties, Mr. Johnson is still active as a funeral director and as an advisor to the local morticians. He gained his apprenticeship in 1897 under Alexander Hensley and John Bishop of Baltimore.

You can do something about smog

Smog is tiny particles of d irron and dusk, which form large clouds of gas, which in turn blankets entire areas.

Industry plays a predominant role in polluting the air with the fumes of gas waste it sends into the atmosphete.

Baltimore is an industrial city. Many industries impair the health of its citizens with careless practices of disposing wastes.

Yet the citizens also help to pollute the atmosphere by letting garbage and other trash materials accumulated; by letting fires burn uncovered for long periods of time, and by their lack of concern for the environment by polluting rivers and streams.

The belch of gases from the exhausts of cars and buses helps to round out the large amount of dangerous pollutants deposited every day hour by hour into the same air which we all must re-use again and again.

* * *

Smog warnings for the Baltimore metropolitan area will be issued every hours until the high preponderance of air pollutants has lowered in number, says Jean J. Schueneman, chief of the Air Quality Division the State Department of Health and Mental Hygiene.

On Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Schueneman said the level of air pollutants for that day was below the two-day average for the week.

The smog blanket which hangs over the Baltimore area is the same one which dominates the eastern seaboard from New York to Atlanta.

There have been protests in Congress during this past week that because of the urgency of the smog and air pollution problem a separate government agency be divised to handle the problem on a federal basis.

Mr. Schueneman noted that further study will be conducted of the Baltimore area, and if necessary future preventive measures should be anticipated.

* * *

So do your part. Remember the only good air is cleaan air.

Encourage your family and friends not to throw garbage onto the highways. Encourage them not to burn trash as often on extremely foggy days. Encourage the industries in Maryland to lead the fight in controlling the gases and smoke from their chimneys.

The crisis we have all feared for a long time is on its way unless all citizens help. We all breathe the same air. If that air is not of the right quality for consumption, EVERYONE suffers.

Help stamp out smog and pollution!

Dixon won't leave 7th District race

Walter T. Dixon, former 4th District city councilman, will not withdraw from the 7th District Democratic primary for Congress, and sees no reason why he should, despite urgings to do so.

He will ignore the 9 p.m. withdrawal deadline today (Friday) for candidates who have had a change of heart, and continue with his campaign plans.

Mr. Dixon thur remains steadfast to earlier statements to the AFRO that he is in the primary campaign to stay.

This means that he and Parren J. Mitchell, Morgan State College professor and former head of the city's Community Action Agency, will be two black candidates among five bidding for the Democratic nomination in the 7th Congressional District.

* * *

Many leaders and politically-minded members of the black community have charged that the Dixon late entry in the race will split the blakc vote, dimming what could be very good chances for initial black representation in that district.

Reports are that Mr. Dixon has been under pressure to withdraw in favor of Mr. Mitchell, who has long been an announced candidate.

He denied this late Tuesday.

"Only two people have asked me to get out," he told the AFRO. "One was a white woman and the other a black man. I told them I couldn't do that, because I would be going back on my many friends who have encouraged me to run."

* * *

Mr. Mitchell reacted sharply when advised that Mr. Dixon pledged to stay in the Congressional race.

"Mr. Dixon is afraid to withdraw," he said, "because the same crooked machine politicians who lured him into the race would probably try to ruin him if he dared to do what is honorable and right by withdrawing."

He dismissed the Dixon statement that only two people had asked him to withdraw with these comments:

"I personally know of more than 70 people who have urged Mr. Dixon to withdraw in the strongest possible terms.

"But in any case, whatever Mr. Dixon does is irrelevant to the outcome of this election. Nobody in the black community is going to fall for the old 'divide and conquer' con game."

Mr. Mitchell then added this final comment:

"If Mr. Dixon and his masters were not so completely removed from the people, they would know that they cannot damage the tremendous support which this campaign has accumulated throughout the district.

"Dixon and Pollack will be buried under the Mitchell landslide."

* * *

Mr. Dixon also has some ideas of his own about his campaign.

"I guess you might call me an independent," he said. "I'm in this on my own. I have no financial support other than my own and whatever contributions come it.

"But I think all of those other fellows (candidates) are vulnerable, and any one of them can be taken," he said.

"I feel I have as much chance of winning as any of them. I see no reason why I should be asked to withdraw."

When reminded that a lot of people are charging that his entry and stay in the race is certain to hurt the chances of Mr. Mitchell, he commented quickly:

"He (Mitchell) would be hurting my own chances also by staying in. What special credentials does he offer that I don't have?

"I've had 12 years in the City Council. I'm out for four years, and I feel it's time I got back in office."

So, Mr. Dixon will remain in the 7th Distric Congress race for the Democratic nomination Sept. 15.

Others in addition to Mr. Mitchell are Samuel N. Friedel, who has held the seat since its creation back in 1953; State Senator Carl L. Friedler, and Louis H. Fried, attorney.

The 7th District has a near 45 per cent black voter registration, located almost wholly in the city area.

This district includes much of West and northwest Baltimore, Catonville, Pikesville and Arbutus in Baltimore County. — MAX JOHNSON
