FASHION NOTE: Clothes that are "right on" inspired special confidence, as does this new double knit blazer by Cross Country Clothes which helps match the man with the occasion. In bold or more subdues patterns, this blazer has the appearance of fine wovens, yet offer the bonus of stretch-with-the-body wearing comfort.

Guys follow women into double knits

NEW YORK — The first collection of double-knit men's blazers at moderate prices is now appearing in stores, giving further substance to forecasts that double-knits are poised to take the men's wear market by storm.

Double knits offer multi-directional stretch and recovery which allows for new wearing comfort when compared with traditional woven fabrics. Double knits are also especially wrinkle resistant.

They have long been favorites with women, but until now have been available to men only in high-priced suits and sports jackets. At popular prices, they are expected to make a very strong impact on the men's wear market.

Pace-setting creator of the new line of $30-$40 double knit blazers is men's wear manufacturer Cross Country Clothes. The firm's "move-with you" double breasted blazers, which have the same appearance and feel as fine woven fabrics, are being carried by retailers under their own private labels.

The new blazers are fashioned from a 10½-ounce, year-round polyester double knit. Designers have given the garments moderately suppressed, shaped waist lines, 4½-inch-wide peaked lapels and high center vents. Tailoring details also include flapped hacking pockets, color-coordinated linings and brass buttons.

The basic blazer design is available in four different patterns, and in blue, green and brown color groupings. Pencil stripe, candy stripe and muted plaid patterns give each blazer a totally different "look," appealing to men of widely varying tastes and appropriate for business and social wear.

Women shoppers will be a major factor in the male move to double knits, Cross Country believes. They are present at some 80 per cent of all men's wear buying decisions, and are already familiar with double-knit comfort and performance qualities.

About Our Town

By DARRYL BROOKS

The Bureau of Recreation, in cooperation with the Maryland Commission on Physical Fitness is sponsoring the fifth annual Governor's Youth Track and Field Meet.

The event which will attract approximately 500 youths bttween the ages of 9 and 17, will be held this year at the U.S. Naval Academy on August 8 starting at 9 a.m.

Quite a long way to be traveling for a track meet but it may be worth it to see some of the top amateurs in the state.

They will be competing for gold, silver and bronze medals, depending on whether they come in first, second, or third.

Track and field events for the youngsters will consist of events such as running long jump, standing broad jump, shot put, relay races and 50, 75, and 100 yd. dash.

Participants will compete in five age groups, 9 yrs. and under, 10-11 yrs, 12-13 yrs., 14-15 yrs., and 16-17 yrs.

Team scores will be kept and awards will be made to the top three teams beside the individual awards.

Next Friday, the Furley Recreation Center will host the statewide Frisbee finals. Remember the frisbees, those brightly colored discs which fly through the air with the greatest of ease.

Those are those same things which look like the lid to a housewife's bowl set.

Finals will be held at the rec center located at Furley and Sipple Aves. Starting time is 2 p.m.

In the spotlight:

James Preston Grant has 3rd behind his name, which means thae there were two more before him.

"J.P., as he likes to be called, is a student at City College. This summer he is working at the Charley Rudo Sporting Goods store in the Mondawmin Shopping Center.

During the school year, J. P. is an honor society student and business manager of both the school yearbook and the school paper.

Being active academically, J. P. tried his hand at sports and succeeded as City's varsity baseball shortstop.

A mother of the class of '71 (or at least that's when he hopes to graduate, J. P. plans to attend Yale University's pre-med school.

Obviously, he intends to follow the footsteps on his father, prominent Baltimore physician, Dr. James Preston Grant II.

If you have someone you'd like spotlighted in this column, send his or her name to me in care of the AFRO or call me at 669-4006.

On trustee board

Mr. Joseph Brandon, former Dean of Students at Bowie State College, has been appointed Staff Specialist of the Board of Trustees for Maryland Colleges, to coordinate the integration efforts for the six state college's.

Mr. Brandon believes the ultimate aim of his office is to insure a racial balance to students, faculty, and staff in the College System.

Mr. Brandon said, "The colleges will pool the efforts in integration to enhance the entire State System."

When asked about the integration progress at Bowie State College, he stated, "Bowie definitely has the highest percentage of integration of any of the six state colleges." He attributes this to Bowie's location and its progressive integration plan.

Brandon, who began his new responsibilities in June, will supervise and coordinate the other colleges with the aim of attaining a racial balance that will be representative of the Maryland State College System.

Belafonte relents, ready now for more movies

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Harry Belafonte, balladeer and civil rights worker, is deciding to movies, after a decade of hesitation, during which he developed a sense of humor, showing "I stayed away from pictures for 10 years because I felt strongly about the kind of film I wanted to do," said handsome Harry.

"I didn't see too many people upset because of my decisions."

The black troubador stopped his band and jumped back into the world of show biz because he was in danger of being overpowered by the fact that the movie industry could struggle along without him.

"I was in danger of living in a vacuum 24 hours a day," Scott Brady, Joan Vohs. FRANK Fayles (1955).

"I waited for a script or a story to really turn me on. I felt for the first time there was an enormous potential for me in cinema. But the conditions had to be right. I wanted something that I could feel justifiable about: life, people, places, things."

Evidently the elements fell into place in Belafonte's mind when he read Bernard Malamud's "The Angel Levine."

"Sure, I liked it," the singer said. "I couldn't battle the movie business alone, so I went into the civil rights movement, the peace movement and the

"After 10 years of involvement I returned to Hollywood to find the movie business changed. It's been broadened. It's now big enough to meet with new ears."

Among the men who listened to Belafonte was Canadian-born Jan Kadar who won an Oscar for the script for his first motion picture, "Shop on Main Street."

Eventually Kadar directed the film which Belafonte finally decided to make. Also in the cast are Sidney Poitier, Gloria Foster. Belafonte is proud of the diversity of racial and cultural background in the cast of the film.

"We're just releasing the film," he said. "It's been two years in the making. We worked and almost every woman who sees it breaks into tears. So do some of the men."

Belafonte's image underwent some change in his new picture.

In perhaps a bowing to the times, he has grown a beard and has let his hair grow long. Asked if he was conscious of the fact that he looks like Sidney Poitier, he said, "Black and the Beautiful."

Pleased with the picture and himself, Belafonte said this year, he plans to work with Poitier and Sidney Poitier, "Black and the Beautiful."

From the sound of Belafonte's outline of the part it has the look of a Black Dutch Cousley and the Sunken Kid.
