Disagreed 'all the time,' wife wins freedom

Mrs. Millie Ann Ritter, 5500 block Cadillac Ave., a Public School No. 13 teacher won a divorce this week from her husband, Paul Ritter, a former local teacher, now a Detroit IBM employee. Judge James K. Cullen signed the decree Aug. 11.

The Ritters were married in Danville, Va. on Dec. 10, 1966 and separated on June 10, 1968 when Mrs. Ritter said she left their home in Petersburg, Va.

The wife told the court she and her husband disagreed "all the time" and when she left she went to reside with her sister in Atlantic City.

She said she feels there is no hope of reconciliation.

Mrs. Mary J. Parrott, co-owner of the Astonia Hotel in Atlantic City with her husband, testified that her sister came to reside with her after she left Petersburg.

She told the court Mrs. Ritter remained there until she came to Baltimore two years ago to teach.

Civic Center gets Clip exhibitions

For the first time in seven years, the Baltimore Clippers will play two pre-season exhibition games at their home Civic Center rink in Baltimore.

Announcement of the two games along with the rest of the exhibition slate was made by general manager Terry Reardon, while revealing that Hershey and the Providence Reds will furnish pre-season opposition for the Clippers as they prepare for the new 1970-71 American Hockey League campaign.

Arch-rival Hershey will meet the Clippers twice in Baltimore on September 25 and again on October 2.

Not since the fall of 1963 when the local club trained in Washington at the old Uline Arean, has Baltimore played a pre-season game here at the Civic Center.

Curt Flood and portrait of Pope Paul ex-baseball star's gallery has many notables

Curt Flood nor lawyers perturbed by reversal

The telephones at Curt Flood's Webster Grove home and at his St. Louis studio went unanswered late Wednesday night and early Thursday morning, giving credence to the report that the former baseball star is out of the country.

When Federal Judge Irving Ben Cooper ruled against him Wednesday afternoon in his anti-trust suit against baseball, efforts were made to contact Flood on both his private line and his business phone, but to no avail.

* * *

Later, United Press International reported that the one-time St. Louis Cardinal gold-glove centerfielder was in Copenhagen, Denmark, where he maintains an art gallery.

Flood is an accomplished painter, and operates a studio in St. Louis where he displays portraits he did on some of the world's most prominent personages. These include Pope Paul, the late President John F. Kennedy, his brother, the late Robert F. Kennedy, and emancipator Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

* * *

Although Flood was unavailable for comment to the AFRO, assurance was given by both lawyers representing him in the anti-trust suit, that he would not be dismayed by news of the first-inning reversal.

"Curt understood that there might be some unfavorable decisions in the initial stages," said former Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg, chief counsel for the plaintiff. "All of us were convinced that we would have to weather whatever disappointments that might be suffered. And I truly believe Curt would have been surprised had Judge Cooper ruled otherwise than he did."

Goldberg had previously told the news services: "Obviously this decision is not the last stage. The normal course of these cases is to appeal to the Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, which is in New York City."

* * *

Flood's other lawyer, Allen Zerman, who conducted the litigation before Judge Cooper, said he, too, was certain Flood was not "too greatly perturbed" by the setback.

"Otherwise, all I can say is that there will be an appeal."

Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn was extremely pleased with Cooper's decision and expressed hope that Flood would resume his career as a player.

"I am pleased that Judge Cooper has upheld the position of baseball in the Flood litigation and I am particularly pleased that the court has recognized the need for a reserve system," Kuhn said.

"I share Judge Cooper's decision that any changes necessary in the reserve system can be achieved by bargaining," Kuhn continued. "I hope that Curt Flood is prepared to resume his outstanding career as a player. I know the Phillies would welcome his return."

* * *

John Quinn, general manager of the Phillies, said that it was too early to speculate on his future dealings with Flood.

"I can't speculate about our plans concerning Flood because I don't know if his attorneys plan any further action," Quinn said.

* * *

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Baseball Players Association, said he held it "significant that Judge Cooper refused to decide on the reasonableness of the reserve system."

Miller said that "Judge Cooper only held that it is up to the Supreme Court to overrule the Supreme Court," (referring to the decision made by the Supreme Court in 1920)

Bullets face rugged pre-season schedule

Eleven pre-season games have been announced for the 1970-71 Baltimore Bullets — four of them in September and seven in October.

Coach Gene Shue's plans are to open his pre-season camp at Fort Meade on September 16 and before the pre-season schedule actually gets underway he will have had a chance to see his club in action during the annual intra-squad game, the date of which will be announced this week.

The complete 1970-71 pre-season schedule is as follows:

September
24th, Thursday — Phila. at Salisbury, Md.
26th, Saturday — New York at Louisville
29th, Tuesday — N.Y. at Civic Center
30th, Wednesday — Detroit at Grand Rapids

October
1st, Thursday — Atl. at Hampton Roads, Va.
3rd, Saturday — Atl. at College Park
4th, Sunday — Detroit at Norfolk
5th, Monday — Atl. at Salem, Va.
6th, Tuesday — Atl. at Madison Sq. Garden
8th, Thursday — Detroit at Madison Sq. Garden
10th, Saturday — Phila. at Rochester, N.Y.

Clay-Frazier 'near reality'

ATLANTA (UPI) — Promoters of a proposed fight between former heavyweight champion Cassius Clay and current titleholder Joe Frazier said Thursday they are "very close" to making it a reality here.

State Sen. Leroy Johnson, head of a local group known as House of Sports, Inc., told a news conference that all legal arrangements have been completed.

New York Attorney Robert Kassel, chairman of Tennis, Unlimited, Inc., which is underwriting the proposed match, said the only thing that remains is to complete contract negotiations with the fighters. "We are very close," Kassel said.

* * *

The bout would be staged on or about Oct. 26 in the City Auditorium for which permission has already been obtained.

Clay, who appeared 30 minutes late at the news conference, said he is ready to fight but is awaiting the final outcome of negotiations before going into training.

The former heavyweight champion who has adopted the name Muhammad Ali, lost his license in 1967 after being convicted of refusal to be inducted into the Army. That conviction is currently under appeal.

* * *

The promoters said they had promised to make "a sizeable donation" from the proceeds of the fight to help battle the Atlanta drug problem.

They did not say how much they would contribute but Kassel predicted the bout would gross between $5 million and $10 million from closed circuit television and other sources of income.

"We have every reason to believe that this fight will be the biggest in the history of sports," he said.

* * *

Clay said he knew nothing of the negotiations until the last minute but was willing to meet Frazier if it could be worked out.

Speaking in a soft voice, the former champion said he was particularly excited about "the possibility of doing something and having it said I could help in some little way with the drug problem, especially among our black brothers and sisters."

* * *

Asked if he could get in shape for the fight in less than three months, Clay noted he had been inactive for three years while Frazier is "active and youthful." Normally, it would take four months but he would make the effort to be in shape by the proposed date.

He said he was 26 pounds over his normal fighting weight of 210.

But he said he would get into training "only when everything is straight and we know everything is set."

Clay has been quoted several times as saying he would never fight again. Asked why he has changed his mind, he smiled and said "I'd rather not go into that" but added "many people just won't seem to let me retire."

25 years in the making.

We'd like to thank the makers of the other new economy cars for giving us such a nice head start.

It gave us time to develop an inspection system so ridiculously meticulous that it expects every VW to pass 16,000 examinations.

It allowed us to find out (at a reasonably scientific pace) how we could double our horsepower without doubling the cost of your horsepower. (The VW still gets about 26 miles to the gallon and requests only a smidgen of oil.)

It permitted us to work on things that didn't even have to do with the actual making of the car. Medi-car, the Volkswagen Diagnosis System, for example. Electronic equipment that can spot trouble in a car before it gets to be trouble. When you buy a new VW, you get 4 free Medi-car checkups.

Of course, it took great fortitude to resist squandering our time on phony styling improvements.

The beetle looks just as good (or bad) as it did 25 years ago.
