Performance, Prices and Pollution.

A report on Gulf's new gasoline.

Within a few weeks, you will be seeing the 1971 cars. There will be something different about many of these models.

Most of them will have lower compression engines and may have less power. A lower compression car can burn a lower octane gasoline. This is another step toward the reduction of air pollution from automobiles.

By this fall, Gulf will have a new gasoline for these cars. It will also meet the requirements of some 20 million cars now on the road.

The gasoline: New Gulftane Low-Lead. It will contain no more than one-half gram of lead per gallon. No lead, we believe, could result in engine valve seat wear. New Gulftane Low-Lead will meet the automotive industry's announced requirements for most 1971 cars.

New gasoline, old price.

Since the car makers have indicated that the low-compression cars will run properly on low-leaded gasoline, we think it would be wrong to penalize new car owners by making them pay more for a higher octane fuel than their engines require. We will make the New Gulftane Low-Lead available to our dealers so that it can be retailed at least one cent per gallon below regular gasoline.

Our detergent additive.

Although millions of new and older cars will be able to use New Gulftane Low-Lead, many others won't. So we will continue to supply them with Good Gulf and No-Nox. But with a difference.

All three gasolines will have an anti-pollution detergent additive, Gulf Agent 724. Tests conducted at Gulf research facilities indicate Agent 724 is remarkably effective in keeping carburetors clean and, actually, cleaning up dirty carburetors. Result: lower exhaust emissions.

The future.

There can never be an overnight solution—or short cut to cleaner air. Looking to the future as emission control technology advances and new systems come into use, Gulf will make compatible and economical fuels to meet performance and anti-pollution needs of all cars on the road.

Suit Asks $6 Million For Boy, 12

MRS. MILDRED DOBSON

Milton Allen asks Rights unit probe of bribery offer

Milton B. Allen, Democratic candidate for Baltimore's state's attorney post in the Sept. 15 primary election, asked Thursday that the U.S. Civil Rights Commission investigates his charges that he had been offered and had rejected inducements to withdraw from the race.

In a telegram to the commission, Mr. Allen, lone black candidate in the five-man race, said his reason for this request was that:

"A fair and impartial investigation and resulting disclosure in the public interest cannot be entrusted to persons at the local and state level, who would be directly or indirectly affected thereby."

An investigation is needed to determine the "merits of made and the denials which the charges I have made and denials which have ensued therefrom."

Immediately after the AFRO disclosed the Allen charges in its past Tuesday edition, Howard L. Cardin, interim appointed state's attorney and also a candidate for election to the post, termed the wholething "cheap political publicity."

Mr. Cardin said in part in a prepared statement the same day:

"The insinuation that anyone would make tha proposal which Mr. Allen has alleged is utterly ridiculous.

"I, for one, state emphatically that I am not aware of such action and completely reject any notion that I was a part of such an alleged deal."

Mr. Cardin said at the time Mr. Allen should have given the names of the persons involved and suggested, without saying so directly, that the disclosure should have been made to the state's attorney office.

Mr. Allen's wire to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission Thursday stated his reason for rejecting the Cardin subbestions.

Here is the text of Mr. Allen's telegram to the commission:

Elevator firm, city both named

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

George Lawson, age 12, lost his right leg following an accident last Thanksiving Day in a self-service elevator in the Murphy Public Housing Development on George St.

Records show the youngster's leg was amputated below the knee after extended hospitalization.

On Aug. 18 the child and his mother, Mrs. Nettie Lawson, filed suit in the Court of Common Pleas asking that they be awarded a total of $6 million damages.

In the petition filed by William Smullian, attorney for the plaintiffs, young Lawson asks $5 million for the suffering he has undergone and will sustain in the future plus medical expenses and loss of time toward his education.

Mrs. Lawson asks to be awarded a sum of $1 million for the losses she has suffered and will suffer in the future because of the injury to her son.

Named as defendants in the suit are the Baltimore Housing and Community Development Agency and the General Elevator Co.

The petition placed before the court charges the defendants with control of the elevators, responsibility for proper maintenance and duty to see that they are in such working orders as not to injure passengers.

The plaintiffs claim that on Nov. 27, 1969 at about 7:15 p.m., 12-year old George Lawson was a passenger in an elevator going to his mother's 7th Floor apartment in the 725 George St. high-rise building.

The suit claims while the child was in the exercise of

He was blindfolded by attendants when it was discovered that his left leg was nearly severed in the crash. He was taken to Johns Hopkins where he is listed on the critical list. The injury required several hours of intense surgery. Doctors were not able to save the leg.

'The most horrible sight ever'

"It was the most horrible sight ever," was the gut reaction of a veteran news photographer covering the sensational truck-car accident at Preston St. and Greenmount Ave. Wednesday morning which crushed the legs of two Severna Park youths.

Police report some 300 spectators watched for more than 30 minutes while rescuers struggled to free Miss Mildred Wallace, Mrs. Beatrice Wallace, Eric Pearman and Leroy Williams who were trapped in a 1967 Rambler beneath a three-ton tractor-trailor.

Investigatons indicate that the accident occurred when the trailor, carring a full load of wood-pallets, crashed into the sedan driving it some 25 feet across the intersection and into a transit and traffic utility

Rev. and Mrs. Dobson take woes to court

REV. HAROLD DOBSON

The Rev. and Mrs. Harold L. Dobson were scheduled to appear in Northwestern Municipal Court this week, both to face charges of assult.

However, Judge Aaron Baer dismissed the charges represented of present because he said, "their attorneys were able to work out a satisfactory arrangement between the two and I also understand that divorce proceedings have been instituted."

The assult charges grew out of a domestic incident at the Dobsons' Ellamont Rd. home on July 27.

Although neither the defendants nor their lawyers appeared in court Wednesday morning Judge Baer said he had received a "phone call from the attorneys and I am convinced that they had worked out the problems."

Records in Circuit Court No. 2 show the Rev. Mr. Dobson through his attorney, Charles P. Howard, has filed for a divoice from his wife, Mildred Turner Dobson, whose address is listed at 3603 Elemont Rd.

The Rev. Mr. Dobson gives his address as in care of 1500 American Building, his attorney's office. The divoice petition was filed August 12.

In the certified document the minister states that he and Mrs. Dobson were married April 14, 1952, in Washington, D.C. and have voluntarily lived separatat and apart for more than 18 months prior to the institution of the case in divorce court.

The Rev. Mr. Dobson also asks for care and custody of the couple's three minor children, whose ages are 17, 16, and 13.

The Rev. Mr. Dobson is minister of St. Mark's Institutional Baptist Church and director of OIC (Opportunities Industrualization Center) with offices on Valley St. Mrs. Dobson, a former beautician, is now a post office clerk.

FBI puts Angela on '10' list

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Angela Davis, fired UCLA faculty member charged with murder in a San Rafael, Calif., courtroom shootout, became the second black woman placed on the FBI's list of 10-most wanted fugitives Tuesday.

Reported possibly headed for Cuba, the 26-year-old Communist is the third woman ever placed on the most-wanted list in its 20-year history.

In placing her on the list, the FBI said Miss Davis should be considered armed and extremely dangerous.

A federal warrant was issued in San Francisco Saturday charging Miss Davis with unlawful interstate flight to avoid prosecution for murder and kidnapping.

The FBI has hunted for her throughout the country after she apparently eluded police by minutes over the weekend in Birmingham, Ala., where she was born Jan. 26, 1944.

Miss Davis was described by the FBI as 5 feet, 8 inches tall, 140 pounds, with brown eyes, brown hair, and a thin build. She has a brown complexion, occasionally wears "granny-type" glasses and styles her hair in a natural "Afro" fashion.

A former instructor at the University of California at Los Angeles, she has been known by the nickname "Tamu," the FBI said.

Placing her on the top 10 means that wanted posters with her picture will be distributed throughout the United States and probably in neighboring Mexico as well.

Authorities in San Rafael said Monday a trip to Mexico with a teenage gunman had led in part to the While visiting a country school, the inspector from the board of education became angry because of the noise in the next room. He opened the door, grabbed one of the taller boys who seemed to be doing most of the talking, dragged him into the hall, and stood him in the corner.

"Now be silent and stand there," roared the inspector.

A few minutes later a small boy stuck his head out the door. "Please, sir," he asked, "may we have our teacher back?"

D.C. Mayor Washington dispels ouster rumor

Mayor Walter E. Washington dispelled all rumors of his ouster by the Nixon Administration in an impromptu news conference Tuesday.

Rumors stemming from a recent New York Times article speculating the Mayor's removal because of his "soft line" on crime in the city were quelled by the Mayor, who said "the White House says they are pleased to have me."

The Mayor was confronted by reporters on his return from a visit to the White House. The meeting, the Mayor explained, was held with John Erlichman and Budd Grog, two Administration advisors on District affairs.

He stated they talked on three matters: the downturn in District crime in the last six months, the non-voting delegate amendment and the New York Times report.

The Mayor said he was assured by the White House there was "no credence to the story." Besieged by wild-fire rumors, the Mayor said he will move swiftly "to put this (the rumors) to bed."

Asked his reaction to the conflict, City Council Chairman Gilbert Hahn said no one has ever hinted at such and that he admired the Mayor for "a fine job" he has done so far.

Philip Rutledge, human relations commissioner, defined the rumors as "ridiculous and garbage."

Dale Anderson talks to Commission; promises to build low-cost homes

By JOHNNY BOWLES

Baltimore County Executive Dale Anderson testified before the Civil Rights Commission Wednesday that low-cost housing was needed in Baltimore County, but added that it should be put into the "right places" and that much of it should be provided by the private sector.

Questioned by Commissioner Frankie Freeman, Anderson added that he believed government installations like the Social Security Administration, where the hearings were held, should have been placed where most employment help could be provided and where employees could find places to live.

He admitted Baltimore County was not such a place, though he added the county was happy to have the facility and the $100 million payroll. The Sicial Security Administration employs about 4,000 black people, most of whom are forced to live in Baltimore City. Total Social Security employees in the area, number 16,000.

The tremendous scope of housing problems for black and low-income people in Baltimore Co. was revealed by testimony here last

Taliaferro's new job aims to close the gap

GEORGE TALIAFERRO
New dean of students at Morgan State College

By SAM LACY

Whether or not is was so intended, the appointment of George Taliaferro to the office of Dean of Students at Morgan State College, is interpreted as a move by the administration to close the communications gap between the faculty and students.

Taliaferro, a former college All-American and All-Pro football player, has a reputation for being able to understand the younger generation at the same time that he appreciates the adult fears that are widely rampant.

His appointment is the first made by Morgan's new acting president, Dr. Thomas P. Fraser.

"It is impossible to go on any college or university campus in America today without concerning yourself with unrest and dissent, and the seeds from which they grow," said Taliaferro upon taking office this week.

"My main objective here will be to sell the idea to both teacher and student that this office desires to be a liaison between them.

"I want very much to function as a capable advisor to both the student government and the idividual student, and to win the confidence of Morgan"s youngsters is my ability to help solve their problems.

"In brief," Taliaferro concluded, "my primary aim is to impress upon Morgan's students the im-

Bam Bam in hospital Bonnie bites nails

BamBam and Bonnie still haven't been told their new names.

Rolanda Jenkins and Richard Thomas, winners in the AFRO Name the Monkey contest, visited the monkeys Tuesday at the Druid Park Children's Zoo to formally notify them of their new names.

At the time of the visit, 3am Bam, the male monkey, was in the hospital recovering from a slight illness.

Bonnie, still in the nursery, bites her nails and anxiously watches for Bam Bam's return.

It looks like it may be another week before the 11-month-old monkeys learn the AFRO zoo reporter has finally chosen two names from more than 500 entries in the contest which started July 17 ad ended Aug. 4.

The moneys smiled with delight three weeks ago when the zoo reporter visited them and told them some of the names AFRO readers, 16 years and under, had suggested.

BamBam and Bonnie will probably be so happy with their names they may just laugh with joy.
