REPORT FROM EUROPE

Eartha goes to jail voluntarily

By OLLIE STEWART

PARIS — "Eartha Kitt goes to jail."

This is not just a headline; it's the truth. And Eartha went of her own free will.

What's more, she smiled all the way, and the picture I saw had her smiling she was there.

It happened in Denmark, at Nyborg State Prison, and the whole thing started when a life prisoner wrote to Eartha while she was appearing at Copenhagen's Tivoli Gardens.

Said the prisoner: "It's a shame I can't get out of this place to hear you sing. I would love to attend one of your concerts."

Okay, said Eartha, no need to worry. If you can't

She went to the prison and gave the boys a private concert. And had herself a ball. And like I said earlier, the picture I saw showed her standing up there with a hand mike and a big smile — and the prisoners were clapping like crazy.

The caption called it a command performance, which wasn't exactly correct. Nobody made Eartha go to jail. She went voluntarily. All it took was that little note from the life prisoner.

And one thing is pretty sure. Hyborg prison will never be the same again — come to me, I'll come to you. And she did. . .

and the Danes will never forget Eartha.

Rome has taken the lead again in showing European cities how to make themselves more livable. For months a half-dozen popular squares have been barred to automobiles.

Now it's main streets. Beginning in October the Via del Corso, one of Rome's busiest streets, will be off-limits to cars. And another key street, Via Nazionale, will allow private traffic only in one direction, while buses and taxis will travel in both directions.

Other streets will probably have private cars forbidden in the near future as part of a plan to let buses roll freely with about 500,000 passengers each day.

In the past they've been blocked most of the time by private cars, and Via del Corso has become noted for having the worst traffic jams in the city.

When Aretha Franklin gave her first concert at the Odeon in London the first week in August, one reviewer called her the Queen of Soul, then went on:

"It all added up to an appalling din, yet Aretha, when she gets under way, soars triumphantly over the whole wretched conglomeration . . . Here is a fine voice, whether she's singing, shouting or wailing.

"One can, however, imagine Aretha without all the garish and gaudy trappings. All she needs is a piano with herself at the keyboard. And maybe a bass, lead guitar and drums. One might even be able to detect an intelligible syllable now and then."

87 desendents to honor 99-year-old Mrs. Thomas

with Lula Mackay

She is an incredible 99 years old, this week, and I should be as full of vigor and as agile on a stair step as is Mrs. Emma Hankins Thomas. Six of her 12 children, now living, will mark her birthday with a dinner party on Sunday, which will also be attended by 18 grandchildren, 42 great grandchildren and 21 great great grandchildren.

Missing will be two grandchildren, John W. Rose Jr. of Berkeley, Calif., and Sgt. Carl W. Hankins of Sacramento, Calif. But on hand will be a longtime friend, 86-year-old Mrs. Ann Henson.

Mrs. Thomas is the widow of the late Steven Thomas. She is a native of Magoby, Md., Anne Arundel County, where she spent most of her life.

At the age of 18 she joined St. John's Methodist Church, Patapsco Park, where she is the oldest living member, and which she attends regularly. In fact, Sunday is the high day of her week, when she enjoys being with friends which number young ones as well as mature ones.

The dinner party on Sunday will be given by the six living children:—Mrs. Florence Rose, James E. Hankins Sr., Mrs. Edith P. Jackson, Mrs. Harriett E. Hines, Frank Hankins and Alfred F. Hankins Sr., where the party will take place.

Add to coming weddings that of Janice E. Butler and Robert L. Ullson Jr. Their engagement was announced this week by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Butler. Mr. Wilson is the son of Mrs. Wilbur T. Price and Robert L. Wilson Sr.

But the cutest announcement of the week is that by Bernice Harper Lee of the engagement of her mother, Mrs. Henrietta E. Harper and Charles Franklin Mathews.

The wedding is scheduled for Sept. 12 and will take place in St. Cecilia's Catholic Church. Congratulations will be received in the Church Hall from three to five o'clock.

Peregrinators: The Arthur Lambs have spent the summer at their place at Freeport, Grand Bahamas. She (Louise) says that to many the fabulous casino is the attractions, but for her it's the sky, the beautiful blue green sea, the white sand and the tradewinds. From her window, says Mrs. Lamb, she sees the Venice-like waterways that lead into the ocean, and the boats provide an endless variety of scenes . . . to say nothing of the pool and garden over which her balcony looks.

Dr. Herbert Moseley and son, Herbert Jr. are off, this week, for Hawaii on a father-son vacation.

The Granville (Marian) Winbornes have been in Boston, Mass., while he attended the Shriners' Convention. The Tom Hawkinses (once of this town, now of Los Angeles, Calif.) there for the same sessions. But Mrs. Hawkins broke an ankle and is in a cast as of now.

Margaret Gassaway and her mother, Mrs. Lelia Cooper took a breather in Atlantic City, but this week went on to King's Lodge for the remainder of their vacation.

Maizie Rea and her daughter, Missy, who have been in San Francisco, Calif., are due in this week.

Dr. and Mrs. Martin D. Jenkins came in from their European jaunt, Monday. Dr. and Mrs. Simon Carter are back from Rome, Italy, and other spots on the continent.

Mrs. Juanita Gates president of town Jack and Jill, was home this week-end from the national convention in Dallas, Texas and a post convention trip to Acapulco, Mexico.

And Mrs. Sadie Miller returned, this week, from a five-day visit in Los Angeles, Calif. with her relatives, the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Steward.

Conyers asks more money for drug fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. John Conyers; Jr., D-Mich., said Friday he would offer legislation to authorize $400 million next year for expanded rehabilitation programs for drug users.

Conyers made the announcement at a news conference with Comedian Dick Gregory.

Gregory ended Saturday a 71-day fast he undertook "to dramatize the tragic and hypocritical nature of the narcotics problem in America."

Gregory said Friday that drug traffic could not continue without cooperation of police and politicians, and said authorities must begin putting more pressure on pushers "rather than continually harassing and humiliating the users."

Conyers said the Nixon administration was acting to combat the drug problem through repressive police measures that "won't attack the root of the problem, but will only make it worse."

He said the bill he plans to introduce in September would authorize community-based narcotics treatment programs at a level never before proposed.

The House Commerce Committee last week approved a bill to authorize $164 million over three years for expanded rehabilitation programs, but Conyers said that was not enough.

"We have only 16 treatment centers in the nation and we need 10 in every big city," he said.
