Oldest living Morganite succumbs in Los Angeles

The oldest living graduate of Morgan State College, The Rev. Martin Jennings, 97, died in Los Angeles Tuesday.

Rev. Jennings graduated from the Morgan Academy in 1895 and received his A.B. degree in 1897.

A native of Baltimore, he is the uncle of Daniel T. skinner, a professor of Modern Languages at Morgan State College.

The Rev. Jennings has been living in California for the last 15 years with his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Jennings. They resided at 2455 St. Andrews Pl., Los Angeles.

Other than his wife, he is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Grace Bell of Washington, D.C., and one son, John Jennings of Baltimore.

Funeral services will be held in Los Angeles.

Adair urges support for Peter Parker

Carl M. Adair, prominent black community leader and recently appointed dean of Coppin State College, urged Thursday community support in the Sept. 15 primary of Peter Parker, Republican candidate for Congress in the 7th District.

Mr. Adair, who is also chairman of the 7th Congressional Committee of the Republican State Central Committee, stated:

"The entire community, both black and white, as well as the leadership of the Republican party both within and outside the district has united behind Mr. Parker in the 7th Congressional primary.

"The reasons for this are obvious. Mr. Parker has repeatedly shown that he can work effectively with all segments of the community, and his record for fairness as president of the Baltimore City Elections Board and as people's counsel (Public Service Commission) amply support this."

In a prepared statement, Mr. Adair said further:

"Mr. Parker's demonstrated ability and sensitivity, coupled with his progressive thinking and aggresive campaigning, mark him as the one Republican who can win this Congressional seat in November.

"We need a united voice as never before."

Butcherer teacher case September

A preview of Criminal Court cases set for this fall reveals the July, 1969 murder dubbed "The Butchered Teacher Case" has been scheduled for mid-September.

Records on file in Criminal Court state that the trial of Theodore Daniels, 30, a Baltimore County teacher, will open before Judge Anselm Sodaro in Part III on Sept. 15.

The trial of Frank (Jodie) Early, 22, will follow on Sept. 21.

Both Daniels and Early out on $5,000 bail are charged with the July 19, 1969 knife slaying of Hubert Johnson, 29, a local teacher.

Records of the medical examiner show that Johnson, five feet 9 inches, weighing 148 lbs., was pronounced dead in his blood-drenched bed in a swank Atholgate La. apartment. He was the victim of over 150 stab wounds from the soles of his feet to the top of his head.

Another suspect, Herbert Jones, 30, was tried May 6 before Judge Solomon Liss and released on $5,000 bail, pending a verdict as to conspiracy to murder.

Malcolm's Sister Arrested

LOS ANGELES — After having warned a crowd of 4,000 youths at the Watts Festival against drug use, Mrs. Ella Collins, 56-year-old sister of Malcolm X was arrested and charged with possession of dangerous drugs

Mrs. Collins, of New York was later released, but two companions were charged with possession of 25 balloons of heroin and with possession of two firearms allegedly found on the floor of the car they were riding in at the time of the arrest.

Boy is drowning victim on crabbing, fishing trip

JOANN PATRICIA FREE, 15, of the 1000 block Hillman St., has been missing from her home since June. Any person with information concerning her whereabouts should contact her mothe rthrough the AFRO-AMERICAN.

The body of a 14-year-old South Baltimore boy was dragged from the harbor 150 feet from the water's edge by police officers this week after he had slipped from the corner of a barge and failed to surface.

Two other 14-year-old youths, Roosevelt Gunther, 1000 block S. Hanover St., and Herman Webb, 100 block W. Hamburg St. told police officers that Easton Carlton had gone with them to the harbor to crab.

The boys had perched themselves on a sunken barge out over the water and Easton dived in for a swim. When he came up he about to pull himself up on the barge and slipped under the water and disappeared.

The body was recovered from between two sunken barges by a police boat.

Family Fare

THE AFRO-AMERICAN, AUGUST 29, 1970

Food, Fashions and Homemaking

Economy meals for good eating

You discard the outside and eat the inside. Or to view the matter another way, you throw away the inside and eat the outside.

A corny way of putting it, perhaps, but that's corn-on-the-cob. And August is a perfect time to enjoy juicy sweet corn-on-the-cob, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service, because corn and other fresh summer vegetables are seasonally plentiful, delicious, and attractively priced.

For just-right corn, look for husks — the outside of the corn — that are dark green and fresh in appearance, and tightly wound around the bottom of the ear. The silk should have a dark brown color and a shiny, silky appearance, not dry. The break on the stem should be green, indicating freshness.

The golden treasure inside is the kernels, which should be bright, plump-looking, just firm enough to offer slight resistence to pressure, full of milky juice, and white to medium yellow in color. Thus you eat the inside. But, as the kernels are outside of the cob, you eat the outside, not the inside.

Outside or inside, fresh corn is a never-fail family favorite. There's a simple secret for preparing it — cook it quick, eat it soon. Corn-on-the-cob can be stemmed, boiled, baked in the husk, or grilled on a broiler or over a grill. Or you can serve corn-off-the-cob. Use the freshly-cut kernels in fritters, cream-style corn, or corn pudding.

Here's a menu for a day's good eating, using fresh sweet corn and other foods that are plentiful and reasonably priced.

This recipe for Surprise Corn makes a superb vegetable dish at outdoor barbecue dinners:

Peel the husks like you'd peel a banana without detaching the husk from the cob, and remove the silk. Soak the ears in water for 30 minutes, then drain. Brush with melted butter or margarine, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and wrap with bacon strips. Roll the husks back over the kernels, smoothing down the ends, and wrap each ear in heavy-weight aluminum foil. Cook on the hot coals, turning once for 10 to 15 minutes until tender.

Everybody is carried away with Mrs. Roane's cucumbers

Mrs. Julia Roane, 1021 Homewood Ave., loves flowers so much she has her house and yard full of them. In fact, her neighbors and friends say her living room looks like a funeral parlor.

The truth of it is, Mrs. Roane has what is traditionally said of good gardners, "a green thumb."

Best proof is the 3-foot cucumber that grew on one of her vines this summer.

It simply has to be a case of "green thumb" because as Mrs. Roane says, "It came from a 25-cent pack of seeds I stuck in a hole in the ground. I didn't even work my cucumber patch.

"The vines grew and grew and one day I yanked some of them up and threw them away or else they would have run all up the street."

Mrs. Roane was asked, "From the back yard and all the way up the street? Now, Mrs. Roane."

"Yes," she replied, "That's the way those vines grew, like crazy. And, everybody says its the largest cucumber they have ever seen. Everybody is simply carried away with my cucumbers."

MRS. JULIA ROANE

THE LADY with the green thumb and one of her big green cucumbers.

The cucumber vine has lots of normal ones growing and late as it is in the season, there are plenty of blossoms in full bloom signaling more cucumbers to come.

Modest about her "green thumb," Mrs. Roane offered a solution which could account for the huge cucumber other than her good fortune with plants.

She ventured, "Last year I stuck in some egg plants on that very spot where the cucumber came from and the egg plant vine grew and grew until it went over the fense."

Chuckling to herself as she went on to talk about the runaway egg plant vine, Mrs. Roane said, "It had the most beautiful egg plants you've ever seen and plenty of them were larger than anyone had ever seen before."

Mrs. Roane has been home from work three years because of a disability and tends her garden when she feels like it. Except for the tomatoes "the bugs got into," she has myriads of flowers of all kinds, even mint plants.

She used to belong to the Hallelujah Chorus of the Turner Station St. Johns Church but now she attends a church around the corner from her home.

She and her brother, James Payne, reside in the Homewood residence — the two of them, the cucumbers and the flowers, that is.

TASTY AND NUTRITIOUS dishes like Orange-y Peek-A-Boo Pudding aren't just for kids. They are great for people of all ages, especially spry senior citizens.

BEST BUYS

Broiler-Fryers

By VIRGINIA McLUCKIE, food economist

One of the most dramatic developments in agricultural food production during recent years has been the growth of the commercial broiler-fryer industry.

Behind the tremendous growth of the broiler industry is a story of scientific progress. Improved breeding has resulted in fast growing, early maturing birds which are especially efficient in turning feed into meat. Improved methods of management, feeding and disease control all have added their share to the expansion and improvement of the industry.

This combination of know-how in production plus a product readily accepted by consumers has helped to bring today's high-quality broilers at today's low prices. Shop-ping for broilers is not any difference in broiler and fryer chickens from a practical standpoint. Most retailers call them fryers, while producers and dealers call them broilers. The name is virtually used interchangably by consumers.

These chickens are young, between six and ten weeks old and weigh one and a half to three and a half pounds. For broiling or serving a half chicken you probably would purchase the smaller sized chicken.

For parts to fry or a whole bird to roast the larger more meaty chicken is more desirable. This young chicken contains high quality protein, minerals and vitamins. Though all chicken parts are high in nutritive value, the dark meat is substantially higher in iron and B vitamins than the white meat.

There is a host of things that can be done with broilers. They may be roasted, broiled, stewed, barbecued, fried or rotesserie. They can be frozen before or after cooking and still retain goof fresh flavor.

Chicken requires exacting care in the kitchen.

Remove the original wrapping from the bird, prepare it for cooking by removing any pin feathers and spot cleaning it. Rewrap loosely in a different wrapper to allow air circulation. The air has a slight drying of the skin surface and slows bacterial growth which has an objectionable odor.

Use this chicken within one or two days. You may rewrap the cleaned chicken with moisture-vapor proof paper and freeze at 0 degrees F. In a 0 degrees F. freezer you may keep chicken up to six months. Buy only the amount you can sonsume or store properly as sales on chicken are frequent in the markets.

Produce counter suggestions are sweet corn, peppers, tomatoes, new potatoes, cabbage, cantaloupe, honeydew and watermelons and peaches. Other in season vegetables and fruits of your choice will make variety in your menu.

Recipe for this week is for Chicken Barbecued in a Skillet.

Use 3 lb. ready to cook chicken cut for frying, ¼ cup shortening, one-third cup sliced onion, one-third cup chopped green pepper, 1 small garlic clove, minced 10½ oz. can tomato soup.

2 tbs. brown sugar, 2 tbs. Worcestershire sauce, 2 tbs. lemon juice, 2 teas. prepared mustard, and Dash Tabasco sauce.

Brown chicken on all sides in hot shortening in a heavy skillet; remove chicken and saute onion, green pepper and garlic for 5 min. Mix in remaining ingredients and simmer until thoroughly blended. Return chicken to the skillet and spoon sauce over. Cover and simmer 30 min. until done.
