FASHION NOTE: In the realm of the fabulous is a myriad of bracelets by Kenneth Lane, newly shaped to wrap the wrist with their motifs crossing, not joining. Stone-studded, cabochon tipped and rhinestone-paved, they are glittering ribboning for the arms. In the same mood of exotica are giant-sized rings of animals or hugh stones set high.

Lady Rec director loved at APG

"It's a mighty big job Planning entertaining programs to help the thousands of servicemen stationed at Aberdeen Proving Ground unwind after their rigorous daily training schedule.

But Mrs. Edwina Y. Nickens, supervisory recreatio specialist of the special Service Club, takes it in stride by providing an agenda that continues to meet with the approval of participants in the organization's activities.

Mrs. Nickens came to APG in 1962 as assistant Service Club director. One of her duties was to arrange programs. It was about three years ago that she was appointed to her present position.

Operating with but a small staff, she supervised activities for enlisted men, dependents and guests.

These include planning dances, shows, picnics, indoor sports games, picnics and a host of others.

Actually, one micht say that Mrs. Nickens is on the "night shift," since her workday begins around noon and ends anywhere from 10 p.m. to midnight. The club opens at 10 a.m., but is utilized in these early hours principally by servicemen who attend night school for study purposes.

Mrs. Nickens can be found hovering in the background during anv club activity to make certain that all goes well. Her popularity with APG servicemen through supervision of events has aided her greatly in carrying out any program to a successful conclusion.

• • •

But, contrary to generl belief, there is usually a "girl shortage" here. This weekly feature draws from 300 to 400 servicemen, each of whom eagerly anticipate floating about the spacious dance floor with a lovely partner while a live band plays "dream" music.

The problem according to Mrs. Nickens is that an additional 90 to 100 girls are needed to bolster the volunter roster.

Cooperative organizations that aid in furnishing dance partners include the Aberdeen and Baltimore USO, the Baltimore YWCA, and local schools and hospitals.

Born in Roanoke, Va., Mrs. Nickens is the daughter of the late Edward H. Young and Mrs. Marie Green. Her mother resides in Rochester, N. Y.

A 1941 graduate of Lucy Addison High Scholl in Roanoke, she spent two years at Kentucky State College, Frankford, majoring in health and physical education with accompanying studies in physiology.

Following a stint at the University of Buffalo, N. Y., in which city she also worked as a playground director for the Bureau of Recreation, she later completed her education at Bluefield State Teachers College, W. Va., where she received her Bachelor of Science degree in 1950.

Prior to her coming to APG, she was senior recreation leader for the Baltimore Department of Recreation, supervising both indoor and outdoor activities for children and adults.

Her husband, Richard M. Nickens, is a retired Army sergeant with over 23 years of service. A recognized journalist, he is also a recreation specialist but is currently employed by a Harford county automobile dealer.

Mrs. Nickens consistently put her heart into the program planning she schedules for Proving Ground servicemen—and they're quick to take cognizance of this fact.

But, while she loves her work and the close association she maintains with military families here, she dreams of traveling with her husband at sometime the future.

At the moment, however, thousands of Army enlisted men are drawing on her talents to enjoy a home-away-from-home in the bright and cheerful atmosphere of the Service Club.

The Nickenses reside in Havre de Grace, Md.

Politics, pleasure theme at 'Scene

By EDITH HOUSE

Politics and pleasure were the theme of the Ghetto, Inc., "Extravaganza" given for Milton B. Allen, candidate for State's Attorney, at the "Scene," with an underlining emphasis on pleasure.

Under an array of purple, red, green and orange lights, the audience wined and dined to the music of the Chase Four and Tommy Vann and the Echoes.

It was an evening to remember as guests crowded the scene to let it "all hang out." And, it did just that when Mama Lou Parks and her Parkettes did their thing for the audience.

Dressed in black outfits, the three men and two girls were like snakes charming their audience. As this reporter eyed the men and women sitting at the tables, some of their eyes were bulging out.

Never had this reporter seen such flexibility. And from what I gathered neither did the audience. They were like rubber.

The group did the boogaloo and when they got tired of that they moved into the funky chicken and right on down the line.

But the highlight of the performance was when Sen. Clarence Mitchell, III did a bad funky chicken with one of the girls. Believe me, the audience was flabbergasted.

Mama Lou definitely did not let her Parkettes leave her out in the cold. She was right there doing her thing and there was much to do.

The audience was definitely not dull. Their souls were alive under the psychodelic lights and everyone was saying "right on."

Mama Lou asked the audience if it was black enough for them and they told her "Right On, Mama Lou."

Milton B. Allen, the guest of honor, came to the stage for a brief minute. He was just as pleased as his guests that the evening was filled with such soulful people.

He told his audience, "I feel very keenly about the state's attorney's job I think I should have it."

He said that with help from his friends, he hoped to be the next state's attorney.

If the thunderous applause of a full house is any sign of winning, then Mr. Allen will be Baltimore's next state's attorney.

Bernadette, from Baltimore came on stage and sang her heart out to the audience. With a dazzling white jump suit, she captivated the audience with the song, "I Gotta Be Me."

"Extravaganza" captured the essence of the evening and the only thing that anyone could tell Milton Allen and his supporters is "Right On."
