ever, that much of the support for Young, who resigned as a vice president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference to make the race, came from within the Atlanta City limits where the black-white ratio is almost 50-50.

However, the total regsitration in the district is about 70 per cent white.

Young, whose campaign was aided by out-of-state benefits featuring "name" entertainers, drawing charges of "outside" interference in Georgia affairs from Lowe, had campaigned on a wide range of issues — from getting American troops out of Vietnam to urban crime.

Young was a key strategist for King during much of the slain civil rights leader's non-violent campaign in Georgia and Alabama, taking part in marches and demonstrations, but otherwise playing a primarily behind-the-scenes role.

Agnew in TV rap with students

The campus dissidents who will confront the Vice President have been selected from colleges throughout the country in order to provide a well-balanced representation if student voices. The panel was chosen by the Frost Show staff acting upon suggestions made by the editors of college newspapers as well as various student organizations. The students are considered to be well-informed, articulate leaders of campus activity and opinion from their schools

This open debate will mark the Vice President's second appearance on "The David Frost Show." His first appearance was recorded and aired early in May.

"The David Frost Show" is produced by Group W Productions for syndication by Group W Program Sales, wholly owned subsidiaries of Westinghouse Broadcasting Company.

18 and 20 years old.

According to Mrs. Hoyte, the boy asked Linwood to go with him to see if he was the one who beat up his brother earlier that day. The boys said they waited while he went off with the older boy. When he never returned, they went home to tell his mother.

The body of young Hoyte was discovered floating in the harbor near Central Ave. and Lancaster St. by a passer-by who reported his discovery to the police.

The preliminary autopsy report of assistant medical examiner, Ronald Kornblum, attributed the death of the 14-year-old Harlem Park Jr. High School student to drowning.

"When the body was recovered the legs and hands had been tied," Dr. Kornblum reported.

"Decomposition made it beyond visual identification except for the clothing and the scar on the neck.

"There was no evidence of beating."

A police spokesman declined to comment on whether or not a homicide is suspected. He stated that the case is still under investigation.

Funeral services for Linwood Hoyte will be held tomorrow (Saturday) at 1 p.m. in South Baltimore Memorial Methodist Church, 1100 block West Saratoga St. Burial will be in Mt. Calvary Cemetery. Williams Funeral Home, 300 block Schroeder St., is handling the arrangements.

Linwood Hoyte is survived by his mother, Mrs. Thelma D. Hoyte; two brothers, Winston Hoyte and Reginald Brown; three sisters, Mrs. Cassandra Fletcher, Patricia and Geneva Hoyte; his grandmother, Mrs. Florence Grimer; three aunts and four uncles.

Towson State must bcome more black

DR. JAMES FISHER

"Because we have been and continued to be a predominantly white institution, Towson State must become more sensitive to the special needs of Black students, Dr. James L. Fisher, president of Towson State College told 300 faculty members this week at their first meeting of the academic year.

"To most black students, ours is a foreign land, one that is at best uncomfortable and sometimes hostile. The black student at Towson State often feels he is acceptable only on our terms and that we would really rather not have him on campus," he noted.

While he understands and sometimes accepts our invitation to enroll, he often believes our motives are legal rather than moral and he cities personal experience to prove his position. Towson State must have black students because both black and white can become so much more as we capitalize on the special strengths and characteristics of one another," he concluded.

In other academic matters, Dr. Fisher told the interracial faculty, "I believe that our state is good."

"We are attending to our main purpose of bringing nourishment to the starving undergraduate instead of becoming a foolish imitation of a Harvard or a Hopkins or a Michigan institution whose undergraduate education is all but dead."

Dr. Fisher prefaced his cautious words about the fall political activities planned on campuses with, "the activation of last May will have a residual effect on our campus.

"Students will be more sensitive politically, more determined to take part in the affairs of the college and general society, and more of them will feel deeply about social issues."

At the top of Dr. Fisher's priorities for the new year at Towson State is "The recruitment of additional black faculty and administration and the introduction of additional courses which relate to the black experience.

On the controversial topic of institutional neutrality, Dr. Fisher said, "I believe that institutional neutrality is not only essential to the intellectual freedom of the university but it is also a practical necessity if we are to survive as our society's forum for the combat of ideas.

"As for me, I will do all in my power to protect the right of all men to hold any idea and to advocate any position within the law at Towson State College. I propose then that Towson be a neutrual institution which invites and encourages its members, in their roles as citizens, to become unneutral."

Forecasting the coming of State-wide coordination in public higher education, the Towson President said, "I believe that the next decade will see a dramatic increase in power for central educational agencies in the United States and Maryland.

"In Maryland the 1970's will see an expanded role for system-wide planners. In addition to equitable formula budgeting and expansion of the capital of higher education, the system will become deeply involvent in overhauling the educational missions of the educational institutions of Maryland.

"The key to Towson's future in Maryland will be the recruitment and retention of leaders and involvement of faculty members, all of whom understand education and the political process, who appreciate human values, and who fully recognize higher educations potential contribution to the total welfare of society."

'Challenge of Change' Morgan confab theme

The Annual Morgan State College Faculty Institute opened recently in Holmes Hall 100 with the theme "The Challenge of Change — Focus on the Teacher and the Taught." Dr. Percy C. Baker, dean of the college, presided.

Dr. Edmond Gordon, the Department of Guidance, Teachers College of Columbia, spoke at the opening session on "The Evolution — Myths and Realities." A discussion followed on the perspectives on human liberties in American Society and Morgan's response to the possible demand that the school become a center of "black activism."

From 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., Dr. Haywood Harrison, chairman of the Department of Education, presided over a panel discussion on the profile of the Morgan College student from the view of the student. Student strategies, and student rights will also come in for discussion.

On the panel were Edward Smith, president of the Morgan State Student Government Association; Jerry Lymas, vice president of Student Government Harry C. R. Williams, III, immediate past president of the Student Government Association; Samuel Lloyd, president of Student Government 1963-1969 and Walter Fisher, director of the Library, Interlocutor.

At the 10 a.m. Saturday Institute, Dr. James Fisher, president of Towson State College, spoke on "The Changing College Teacher." Dr. John Richardson, president of the Faculty Senate presided. On the reaction panel were Dr. Gladyce Bradley Jones, Department of Education; Miss Vickie Allen, editor-in-chief, the student paper, and Craig McEwen, Department of Sociology.

The 1:30 p.m. Saturday session was a colloquim on "Imperatives for 1970-1971: The panel was drawn from both faculty and students. The panel also proposed position papers on issues as were developed in the course of the Institute.

On the panel were Dr. Ruthe Sheffey, chairman of the Department of English; Dr. Benjamin Quarles, Department of History; Neal Janey, chief justice, Student Court; Dr. Ronald Bloom, Department of Education and Mrs. Rosalyn T. Penn, Department of History.

Matron held on narcolics charge

Mrs. Dolly Mae Hemthill of the 1000 block N. Carrollton Ave. was arrested Sunday afternoon for illegal possession of heroin in a surprise raid by the city police tactical squad.

She was being held pending the posting of $3,000 bail.

Her trial has been postponed until Oct. 13 for analysis.

With her children and other relatives gathered around, Mrs. Hemhill was surprised in her home.

Literally piles of money lay scattered about the house.

Police officials found various notes which they interpreted as "lists" for the supply of pushers and addicts in the area. Mrs. Hemthill's purse contained packages of uncut heroin, an analysis determined.

This raid was the only "paydirt" hit of the afternoon. Police raided another home in the 1300 block N. Whatcoat St., but no incriminating evidence was found.

After circling the Pennsylvania Ave. area, the squad made a surprise hit at a bar in the 100 block of Poppleton St.

Again nothing was found in the building or the nearby parked truck where a group had been gathered before the police arrived.
