—Kind man

kind to all of his children and grandchildren. He was loved by all of us."

Here Mr. Harrington noted that including the wife, a daughter, three sons, two sisters; four brothers; the 65 grand children and over 50 nieces and nephews, the deceased man is mourned by over 130 close relatives.

Another tragic coincidence is the fact that a year ago on Nov. 14, 1969, to the exact date of Mr. Napier's death, the family sustained the loss of one of his sons, Harvey Harrington, 47, who died of a heart condition.

The family attended the son's wake on Nov. 17 and funeral on Nov. 18, 1968 at the same Simmons Church, "at the same hour," of the elder Napier funeral, Thomas told the AFRO.

More than 1,000 persons were present at the last rites for Mr. Napier.

A police escort led the procession of nearly 100 cars to burial in Arbutus Memorial Park.

The Rev. C. C. Mills, pastor of Canaan Baptist Church, Washington, presided at the church rites.

—Won't play

Carolina game, so that it could legally (in the eyes of the NCAA) participate in the CIAA title affair.

With Thanksgiving Day the curtain-raiser of a game at the Charlotte Memorial Stadium, which already had been contracted for, Smith sought to put the championship contest in on that date.

However, Morgan coach Earl Banks and Virginia State's Walt Lovett balked. Both held, at the time, that they were unwilling to play Johnson C. Smith, or any other team, on Thanksgiving Day after having competed in a game the previous Saturday.

They pointed out that in all the years they had engaged in their traditional Thanksgiving classic, neither had scheduled a game on the prior Saturday.

Wednesday night, according to Banks, Virginia State changed its mind. The Petersburg athletic administration notified Morgan and the CIAA that the Trojans would so play on Thanksgiving Day, if they won the title by beating the Bears.

Advised of this action by Virginia State, Morgan officials went into a hurried meeting to reaffirm the school's position in opposing the contest.

The result of that meeting was couched in the Morgan president's message of Wednesday night.

300 members turn out at Sharon Baptist gala

Sharon Baptist Church climaxed a year of special events marking its 85th anniversary with a banquet recently at the Emerald Gardens. Over 300 members and friends of the church attended that gala affair.

Other 85th anniversary events during the year have included Youth Day, Men's Day, and Women's Family Day, Homecoming, Dav. These events have been made a permanent part of Sharon's history by their cinematographer, William Jessup, who records them on film.

Included also in Sharon's rich history is the fact that its founding pastor, the Rev. Dr. William Alexander, started the tabloid in 1892 that became the foundation for the AFRO-AMERICAN newspapers which he later sold to the late John H. Murphy Sr.

Dawson head of job center

Lumell H. Dawson Jr. has been named director of the Nassau County (New York) Job Development Center.

He succeeds James Rice, who resigned to become director of the Nassau County Human Rights Commission.

The Center, which was founded in 1964, is operated by the Human Rights Commission and places disadvantaged persons in jobs or training programs. A large part of the work of the Center is done by volunteers who canvass employers about job possibilities and send applicants to them.
