Fashion Group predicts mixed Spring mood

NEW YORK (UPI) — All you women still on the hemline see-saw, hear this:

"Never again will a woman of any age be told what length to wear."

That statement from the chairman of the prestigious Fashion Group's Ready-to-Wear Committee, Lee Hogan Cass, drew zesty applause from those assembled in the grand ballroom of a New York hotel the other day for a look at "Fashion, Spring '71."

* * *

Those applauding, members of The Fashion Group, are kingpins in the fashion industry. They included buyers, ad copy writers, designers, fabric firm executives, and others whose bread and butter business is getting the females of America to buy new togs.

The mark of fashion for the decade ahead will be shaped by what is going on in America, the audience was told. Since this is a Democracy, there are varied choices — a smorgasbord. If you will.

The influences and how they are expected to shape fashion:

* *

The external: Pollution. The American eye sees the decay of outside environment and seeks a personal environment of clean color. In fashion, this means you will have a choice of dresses, loungewear, pantsuits, rainwear of paintbox colors, some outfits featuring three and four colors.

The involvement: Handcrafts. In fashion this brings on the scene the applied art. The personal need of the handcraft arts reflects a reaction against technology and toward individualism. You will find outfits featuring hand-painted, embroidered, appliqued on embellishments to individualize them.

* * *

Freedom to move. The fashion: Pants today, tomorrow and next year. They give freedom of motion and mobility, be they knickers, pajamas, mantailored slacks or city shorts, which are bare knees and large part of thigh.

The vociferous majority. The fashion: Clothes for the conservative fashion literate. The conservative fashion literate vocalizes her taste and discretion. She wears blazer and reefer coats, pantsuits, and tweeds. Her dresses are conservative enough to go anywhere and are dressed up or down with the addition or substraction of accessories.

Escape to fantasy. The fashion to go with this desire includes mystic prints and cages of chiffon. Escape emerges as a means of survival from the hardening realities of the seventies; while the customers escape into the occult, the industry floats fashion around the bodies of the blithe spirits.

That is the spring, 1971 fashion picture, as reported at the Fashion Group breakfast.

TOP "SMOOCHERS" — Horace Francis, Kingston, Jamaica and Beverly Hall mark, Bellingham, Wash., are now holders of the world's record for continuous kissing. They took the title last week with a 12 hour smooch at Western Washington State College, Cheney, Wash., where they are both students. Previous record set by a Texas couple last month was nine hours and 12 minutes.
