Mrs. Hilda D. Brown, designer of unique diapers for baby

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

Mrs. Hilda Dry Brown of Fairview Ave., will be 62 on Dec. 4 and ranks as one of the most vivacious and interesting personaiities in town.

In addition, she is mother of seven sons, two daughters, 25 grand and eight great grandchildren and a retired beautician well-known by hundreds of Baltimoreans.

But most of all, Mrs. Brown is an inventor in a little known field, that of diapers for infants.

She recalls that her invention, a first, was demonstrated for mothers at the well-baby clinic as a church on Madison and Asquith Sts. in East Baltimore 45 years ago, in 1925.

She had gone there to take her baby who was born at John Hopkins Hospital for examination.

On Tuesday when interviewed by the AFRO, Mrs. Brown beamed as if that event of nearly 50 years ago happened only yesterday and said. "The nurse said look at that diaper you have on your baby. It's swell, it's different. Suppose you let all the mothers take a look at it."

Mrs. Brown explains that the diaper had four pins, two at the waist and two at the legs and served as a belly band, for boys, she put the thick part in front and for girls, the thick part in back.

Still beaming she went on, "I designed it and no one had ever seen anything like it. I would still patent it but that costs money.

"My cousin invented a stump-puller back in 1918. He sent it to Washington but it cost $100 to have it patented. $100 was lot of money in those days."

(A stump puller pulls up tree stumps and is used in land clearing).

There are innumerable interesting things Mrs. Brown can tell you but the one most likely to be mentioned is the huge Dresden china turkey platter she has among her heirloom.

She states that the dish she has warned her descendants to "treasurer forever" was given to her grandfather by Johns Hopkins the man for whom the famed East Baltimore hospital is named.

Mrs. Brown has a brother who is past 80 and he recalls the platter on the table when he was kid.

"Soooo," Mrs. Mrown estimates," the turkey dish is over 100 years old."

It came into the family way back there when Mr. Hopkins and other prominent Baltimoreans were patronizing her grandfathers eating place in Essex near the waterfront.

"Keep it as long as you live," Mr. Hopkins cautioned Mrs. Brown's grandfather, the chief cook.

Mrs. Brown also recalls her grandfather revealed that Mr. Hopkins told him he was going to see that the hospital would go down in history as a place for free treatment of needy black citizens and poor white citizens.

The huge statue with outstretched arms at the main entrance of Hopkins Hospital still reminds all in the inscription, "Give me your poor, etc."

Mrs. Brown also has a post card dated 1914 and an antique cup that is also precious.

Mrs. Brown's mother, the former Miss Melinda Price, was a full-blooded Cherokee Indian from Virginia and her father, Robert Scott, a black laborer. They settled in Essex.

Her brother, Ralph Scott, still resides in Essex. Two other brothers, Robert and Henry Scott, are Baltimore security guards and her sister, Mrs. Ethel Russell, resides on Harlem Ave.

Mrs. Brown is a 20-year member of the Gospel Tabernacle Baptist Church, Walbrook Ave. and Rosdale St. where she sings on the Gospel Choir.

Married twice, she is a "grass widow."

Her beauty shops were at various times on Oak Ave. in Turner Station, 1000 block Pennsylvania Ave. and other areas of Baltimore.

She was at one time manager of a beauty shop at Waverly Towers and then worked as an operator for Mr. Baker's on Liberty Heights a year before retiring.

The six surviving of her seven sons are Jarvis and William, both interior decorators; Charles, an auto mechanic; Carson who is ailing at home; Walter, with the Army in New Jersey and James, an electrician, all of Baltimore.

The two daughters are Mrs. Irene Thomas, a nurse's aide and cook at a nursing home and Mrs. Hilda Holmes wife of Williams Holmes a trucker, both of Baltimore.

FIRST to design new style diapers for infants, Mrs. Hilda Day Brown demonstrates how they work.

the little cookbook column

Hello, I'm Esther Coley, Home Economist for Hunt-Wesson Foods, Fullerton, California. Read my column every week. I'm sure you'll find something to interest you. I'll have tips and hints about buying and preparing food. And I'll answer any questions you may have about cooking. See you next week.

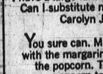
This week's tip:
Got some lumpy brown sugar? Sprinkle it very lightly with a few drops of water and heat it in a low oven for a few moments and it'll lose its wrinkles.

Hunt's Handy Hint:
For a more moist cake, add 2 tablespoons Wesson Oil when adding liquid to packaged cake mixes. Bake as directed. Cakes stay moist, too.

Dear Esther:
With the holidays coming can you give me a good recipe for monkey bread?
Mrs. Mary Kelly, New York, New York.

I'm delighted. Now you'll never be without it.
Monkey Bread.
2 cakes compressed yeast; ½ cup lukewarm water; 2 cups milk; ½ cup sugar; 2 teasp. salt; 1 cup margarine; 2 eggs, beaten; about 7 cups all-purpose flour. Dissolve yeast in water. Heat together milk, sugar, salt and ½ cup of margarine. When mixture has cooled, add eggs and stir in yeast and water. Add enough flour, about 7 cups, to make a stiff dough. Turn onto floured board and knead until smooth. Place in greased bowl, turning once to grease surface. Cover lightly, let rise until doubled. Punch down. Turn onto floured board and roll to ½-inch thickness. Cut into diamond-shaped pieces about 3 inches long. Place 1 layer in greased 10-inch tube pan. Brush with some of remaining margarine, melted. Repeat layers, brushing each with margarine. Cover and let rise til almost doubled. Bake at 375° for 55 to 60 minutes. Cover loosely with aluminum foil to prevent over browning.
Serve warm. Makes 1 (4 lb.) loaf.

Dear Esther:
I have a large family and my children like popcorn. Can I substitute margarine for butter to use on it?
Carolyn Juddine, Chicago, Ill.



You sure can. Mix a little garlic salt with the margarine and pour it over the popcorn. This mixture makes popcorn taste better than butter does.

Dear Esther:
What is the difference between ham and a picnic ham? Can ham be barbequed?
Mrs. Nettie Williams, Newark, N.J.

Smoked and cured leg of pork is marketed as ham—whole, shank or butt. When the shoulder of pork is smoked and cured it is called a picnic ham. You may barbeque ham, but it is especially good baked or sliced and fried.

Economy meals for good eating

Potatoes and onions. Onions and potatoes. It's a marriage of love.

If you haven't yet paired (pared?) these two faithful mealtime friends, now's a great time to start. Potatoes and onions have been made it onto the November Plentiful Foods List of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service. You may find them an even better buy than usual at your gorcery.

The marriage succeeds so well because each brings its own special asset. Onions provide sweet, zingy flavor just waiting to be released. Potatoes have a rich texture and mild taste that is open to seasoning suggestion.

Most potato dishes taste better when a bit of onion is used. Try Baked Stuffed Potatoes, for a delightful example. To prepare, cut large, hot from the oven baked potatoes in half lengthwise. Remove the inner portion and mash with a little salt, pepper, hot milk, and
