Safe toys Suit

WASHINGTON — Two private consumer groups filed suit Wednesday in an effort to assure Christmas toys are safe. At the same time, the federal government acted to see that three toys are not misleadingly advertised.

Consumers Union and the Children's Foundation went into federal district court asking an order that eight allegedly unsafe toys be removed from the market.

In the other action, the Federal Trade Commission announced it will issue complaints against two big manufacturers charging misleading advertising for toy cars and a dancing doll.

Rock scene on TV-67 Sunday

The unique San Francisco Rock scene is the subject of two "Fanfare" shows on Channel 67. The first, San Francisco Rock: Go Ride the Music, shown at 10 p.m., Sunday, December 6, is a documentary-performance featuring the Jefferson Airplane and Quicksilver Messenger Service at a recording session.

The second, San Francisco Rock at the Family Dog, presented Sunday, December 13 at the same time, features the Jefferson Airplane along with the Grateful Dead and Santana, at a rock party.

Rock flowered in the San Francisco area and became an underground youth culture united by music with rock musicians often regarded as cultural leaders rather than entertainers. The Jefferson Airplane, the Grateful Dead and other rock groups take their roles as a cultural unit first seriously.

The Airplane, behind Marty Balin's and Grace Slick's bust political vocals, is hard-edged and complex. The Dead, with Jerry Garcia's incredible guitar playing, is more spiritual, and Santana's rhythms build up hypnotic tensions.

To be heard in this dual rock festival are you and Me and Poonell and Eskimo Blue Day by the Jefferson Airplane; Too Hard to Handle, China Cats Sunflower and I know You Rider, by the Grateful Dead; and Incident in Nishapur and Soul Sacrifice, by Santana, as well as other hit songs from the best albums of the groups.

The programs convey the sights, sounds, moods and vibrations of the San Francisco Rock scene.

WEEKEND ATTRACTION — Exciting Damita Jo is the featured artist at the James Brown Motor Inn, Paca and Franklin Sts., through Sunday. Also appearing is the Earl Wilson Trio, with Charles Covington at the organ and Earline Wilson as vocalist.

TV-67 examines Ga. since Talmadge

A one-hour documentary entitled If Eugene Talmadge were alive today, he'd turn over in his grave . . . focuses on social and economic change in the State of Georgia. This unusual picture of the new South will appear on Channel 67, Monday, December 7, at 9 p.m. The program will be repeated Saturday Dec. 12 at 5:30 p.m.

Pat Watters, former city editor of the Atlanta Journal, and author of two books about the south, presents highlights of his recent 3000-mile tour of the state where he has lived most of his life. Watters interviews a cross-section of inhabitants, black and white, and reports their views and attitudes toward recent change.

Although the gradual enfranchisement of blacks in the South has resulted in solid gains with blacks elected to city and state offices, a black city councilman in Augusta comments that "until we can get a coalition of poor whites and blacks, we'll never get anything done in this city or anywhere in the United States."

Topics of peculiar relevancy to the south including the decline in agriculture, the flight to the cities and the growth of large industrial plants and their attendant problems, are explored. The state of school integration also undergoes a searching review.

Among persons interviewed by Watters are: James W. (Taxi) Smith, a one-time segregationist and appointment secretary under former Governor Eugene Talmadge; Georgia legislator, Julian Bond; Rep. Ben Blackburn (R. Ga.); Roy Harris, an Augusta lawyer and one-time kingmaker in Georgia politics.

In essence an historian, Watters has the novelist's eyes, ears and discernment. He senses and conveys the drama and the ambiguity of the times.

Computer explained on Channel 67

THE ULTIMATE MACHINE is the computer, and Channel 67 on Sunday, December 6, at 8:30 p.m., examines how it works, its endless possibilities for use in labor-saving, and the dangers of its getting out of hand.

The computer's ancestry is traced to the music box. In the Limonaire, a 19th century mechanical information is coded as holes in a punched card which moves across streams of flowing air.

A musical sound as heard each time air passes through a hole and enters the organ. A computer operates in a similar fashion but combines the punched card with flowing currents of electricity.

Computers are revolutionizing many aspects of our lives in automating industry, teaching children in the classroom, composing music and solving architectural problems; and "computer simulation" is used to study abstract properties of objects and laws of physics.

There is, however, a growing concern that the plethora of information about individuals, groups and organizations stored in its memory banks could be used to curb privacy and freedom of action.

The program is repeated Saturday, December 12, at 4:30 p.m.

Schaefer testimonial comes as no surprise

The announcement Tuesday of the pending Testimonial Reception to honor William Donald Schaefer, president of the City Council, surprised nobody in downtown political circles.

Mr. Schaefer, formerly a 5th District councilman, is going to make a bid for the mayor's post in the comlig municipal elections.

He has made his intentions known in this respect for months.

The $50 per person affair planned for him Jan. 25 at the Civic Center comes by his supporters to raise campaign funds.

Significantly, it follows somewhat by pattern and design the one held Thursday evening at the same place for George L. Russell Jr., city solicitor.

Mr. Russell's supporters, who number in the thousands of both races, hope that he will be Baltimore's first black mayor by this time next year.

* * *

Another such testimonial reception can be expected in due time on behalf of Robert Embry, head of the city's Housing and Community Development Agency.

Mr. Embry, a former 3rd District councilman, has been talking strongly in terms of his candidacy for mayor for weeks.

There are others sure to be heard from in this respect, after the Christmas Holidays.

Hyman A. Pressman, city comptroller, can be counted on to put out serious feelers.

* * *

All of these, of course, are on the early Democratic side of the picture, and are likely to stand whether Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro 3rd runs for reelection, though his close associates say he will not.

On the Republican side of the coin at this early date, the picture is considerably more fuzzy.

There are rumors, but just that. One such holds that Peter Parker, defeated in the past general election by Parren J. Mitchell for the 7th District Congress seat might run.

It is early yet, but more testimonials can be expected. — MAX JOHNSON
