Easy-to-read booklet tells it like it is on housing

PART ONE

By AL RUTLEDGE

The Housing Code of Baltimore City requires that a landlord provide and maintain facilities for plumbing (sinks, toilets, sewage disposal); heating protection against rodents and vermin.

Furthermore, he is not relieved of his responsibilities when tenants vandalize or neglect the property.

That information, which has always been available to every citizen of this city, has been issued in an easy-to-read pamphlet by the Ad Hoc Committee for Tenant-Landlord Relations and can be purchased for just 25 cents.

The committee made up of representatives of several civic organizations issued the pamphlet for the simple reason that slumlords force poor and mostly black people to live in substandard conditions.

These slumlords receive exorbitant rents for shabby properties and for the most part the persons renting the property are ignorant as to what measures they can take to fight back.

The pamphlet outlines in simple and easy to understand terms exactly what can be done to combat specific problems.

It begins by familiarizing the reader with the Housing Code and what it requires of landlords. Every tenant should know that the landlord is responsible for maintaining adequate closets, kitchen, bath and sleeping space (based on the number of occupants in the dwelling).

In addition to being responsible for the upkeep of the interior and exterior of the structure he must maintain facilities for proper heating temperatures and ventilation.

One of the chief problems of multiple dwelling occupants (three or more families) is maintaining proper storage recepticles for ashes, trash and garbage because few of them are aware that it is the responsibility of the landlord to purchase the strong sturdy cans which dogs and cats can't get into and overturn.

The pamphlet also points out that it is the duty of the tenant to see to it that his apartment is not overcrowded (10 or 12 persons in three rooms). It outlines just what the tenants responsibilitie are.

They include his not destroying or defacing or damaging the property; he is also obligated to exterminate rodents and insects "if they are found only in his part of the dwelling and not in other units."

The depositing of garbage, trash and ashes into the proper receptacles is the responsibility of the tenant, and the tenant is also required to give the landlord "reasonable time for the purpose of making repairs."

In the wake of the release of this pamphlet the AFRO spoke to several occupants of homes located in the area between Franklin and Baltimore Sts. and Fremont Ave. and Greene St. (names of occupants have been withheld by request where indicated).

Robert Lacy Owens, the father of eiht and a Lexington Market employee xington Market employee viewed the pamphlet and was immediately struck by the fact that his landlord "always told us that falling plaster and busted waterpipes were our responsibility; why is it that this says the law makes it his job?"

Mr. Owens went on to point out that he "never knew that when kids broke out windows or busted up the steps playing games that he (the landlord) was supposed to fix it."

Mr. Owens pointed out that "during the last 20 years that he and his family had lived here" (in the area described) he "or his parents always paid for repairs because the landlord said he didn't have anything to do with it."

Mr. Owens is one of dozens living in areas throughout the city where landlords feel secure in the tenant's lack of knowledge as to what their responsibilities are by law.

A welfare mother of five says "I'm going to move soon because WIN has enabled me to train for a good job but I've been here (on Biddle St.) since my first child was born and believe me no matter what happened, broken windows, peeling wallpaper, frozen and busted pipes, I've had to skimp and scrape and try to get the money to repair the damage.

In its section on what is done about housing code violations the reader is alerted to the importance of knowing what the Department of Housing and Community Development does and that the Housing Code requires that tenants "make violations known to the authorities."

The DHCD is responsible for detecting and inspecting complaints. However, with only 155 inspectors to police 83,000 housing units the difficulty is severe and tenants are asked to seek the aid of agencie, citizens' groups, neighborhood organizations, in reporting and following through on violations.

DHCD duties are described as being those which include inspection and complaints, the distributing of notices, the follow up, the process of seeing to it that the notice is complied with; and the final step of preparing to take a home owner to court.

Listed are the agencies established in the city government to aid tenants with housing problems:

KENTUCKY STRAIGHT BOURBON WHISKEY, 86 PROOF. THE OLD TAYLOR DISTILLERY CO., FRANKFORT & LOUISVILLE, KY.

AMONG THOSE who made history last week by holding the first major demonstration against the U.S. Civil Service Commission in the nation's capital were (from left) John White Jr., official of the National Alliance of Postal Employees; Mrs. Juanita Jackson Mitchell, Baltimore attorney who presented grievances of government employees who want the Equal Employment Opportunity program moved from under racially segregated Civil Service Commission and Wardell F. Clark, a Coast Guard GS-4 fiscal accounts clerk who filed a complaint on employment conditions on Nov. 28, 1968. Nearly 50 persons staged the demonstration which lasted three hours in severe cold weather.

Mental health appeal for $1 canteen cards

The Baltimore Mental Health Association is appealing to the entire community for donations to buy $1 canteen cards for several thousand patients in six state mental hospitals.

As part of its annual drive to provide gifts for many patients who might otherwise be forgotten at Christmastime, the Association tries to give those who have ground privileges a $1 canteen card which can be used for small purchases in the hospital exchange.

Dollar bills or checks may be sent to the Baltimore Mental Health Association, 323 East 25th Street, Baltimore, Maryland 12118.

Canteen cards will be distributed at Crownsville, Henryton, Clifton T. Perkins, Rosewood, Springfield and Spring Grove.

Some 7,000 patients in these hospitals will also receive gift packages, which have been assembled from many items contributed by individuals, service clubs, schools and church groups. This year, trainees from the Baltimore Association for Retarded Children Dundalk Activities Center are packaging the gifts at Baltimore Mental Health headquarters.

The Baltimore Mental Health Association serves both Baltimore City and County. It is a member of the Commerce and Industry Combined Health Appeal, also known as CICHA.

By the way...

by Joe Black

We can't hide from the fact that brotherhood these days is not being "crowned from sea to shining sea." A better word might be "flattened." And that word "brotherhood" is going to continue to have less and less meaning unless all of us stop "tsk, tsk, tsking" and start doing something tangible and constructive.

I'm referring to the great hordes of black and white citizens who daily battle our national problems by uttering such profound statements as: "My God, what is this country coming to?" Or..."This country will be better off once we get rid of those irresponsible, long-haired kooks and black militants."

No doubt this is a serious and perplexing time for all Americans, black and white. But it's not going to get better until we all start getting involved. Begin by re-appraising your own feelings and prejudices about people and things. Stop hating people simply because they're black, white, yellow or red. Look at them as individuals with the same rights to opportunity and happiness as you have.

With the polarization of the races rapidly approaching the dangerous stage, the philosophy of "I got mine, you get yours," must go. If it doesn't, nothing else that happens will matter.

Symphony, Douglass choir join in 'Messiah'

History was made at Douglass High School last week when the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra and the Douglass Choir got together for an open rehearsal of Handel's "Messiah."

This was the first time that the Symphony had ever performed Handel's masterpiece with a secondary school choir. Both groups perform the "Messiah" annually as part of their Christmas repertoires but they have never done it together.

The Symphony had come to Douglass for its regular Youth Concert. The Cultural Activity Program of the Music Department of Baltimore City Schools sponsors several during the school year at area schools.

After the regular concert was over, members of the Symphony remained to rehearse the "Messiah" with the Douglass Choir who will be performing it this Sunday, December 13 in the school auditorium at 4 p.m.

"This is one of the exceptional choirs in this city," Mrs. Margaret D. "Armstrong, Cultural Activities-Music Division supervisor, noted.

"We thought that these young people would benefit from the experience of having the full backing of a Symphony orchestra. This was an experiment and we're grateful to the orchestra for being willing to change its format."

The Music Department at Douglass jumped at the chance when the opportunity was offered, according to Thomas DeLaine, department head:

"The Supervisor of Music (Dr. Don Regier) called and asked how we would like to have an open rehearsal with the Symphony. It had long been a desire of ours."

Despite the handicaps of limited stage space and having to get used to a new conductor, the groups performed well together. As she watched the rehearsal with a critical eye, Mrs. Lois Wright, choir director, remarked:

"I think it's a beautiful experience for a black youngster to be invited to do anything this enriching."

Eisenhower says crime not racial

By PAUL F. EVANS

"I emphasize that all evidence indicates that one race is no more criminogenic than another."

This was one of the many views on the subject of violence expressed by Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, former president of Johns Hopkins University, at the initial lecture of a three-week program, which will bring experts from many fields to the Hopkins campus to discuss the problems of violence in America.

The lecture — the fourth in an annual series honoring the former college head — began Tuesday afternoon in Shriver Hall on the Homewood campus.

Speaking to a large audience at a school population dominated by mostly white, upper - middle - class - students, Dr. Eisenhower said:

"Violent crime is heavily concentrated in the larger cities. There the rate of crime per unit of population is eight times the rural rate, six times the smaller town rate.

"The 26 cities with more than half a million residents each account for only one-sixth of our nation's population, but almost one-half of our total reported violent.

"If you live in a metropolitan area today your mathematical chances of becoming a victim of a homicide, a rape, an assault, or a robbery are one in 125 each year."

He noted, "If you live in the city of Baltimore, your mathematical chances of becoming a victim of one of these four violent crimes is one in 49 each year. So, during his lifetime, the odds are in favor of a Baltimore resident's becoming a victim of a violent crime.

The brother of the late President pointed out that violent crime in cities is overwhelmingly committed by male and youthful offenders.

Arrest rates among youngsters from 10 to 14 have increased as well as a 300 percent increase in assault between 1953 and 1967, and 200 percent in robbery during that same period.

The former chairman of the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence said that primarily those individuals at the lower end of the social and economic scale commit the violent crime in the cities.

"Violent crime in the cities stems disproportionately from the ghetto slums where most Negroes live. Where discrimination is added to low socio-economic status, in other words, violent crime rates are especially high." Eisenhower told the quiet attentive audience.

"To describe violent crime as primarily a ghetto phenomenon is to make a statement about social and cultural conditions, not about racial characteristics.

"Solid research conducted over a long period of years shows no correlation between race and crime. The correlation is between the total environmental and human conditions in which some people live and crime."

Suicide in Morgan Park

William Llewellyn Wilson Jr., 43, reportedly took his own life on Wednesday at 2413 Montebello Terr., in Morgan Park, where he had been living with relatives.

Son of the late and famous Douglass High School music teacher for whom he was named, Mr. Wilson was active in business circles until recently when he suffered a nervous breakdown.

He was the brother of Mrs. Charlotte Mason, the teacher and AFRO columnist ("On The Eastside"), who died this past October.

He had been living in Morgan Park at 2411 Montebello Terr., with a sister, Mrs. Eleanor Worrell and brother-in-law, William Mason.

Northeastern Police report that the sister called police on Wednesday afternoon to report her brother had gone next door and swallowed renuzit (cleaning fluid).

Mrs. Worrell reported he had been released from Spring Grover Hospital on Nov. 12. She said that evidently after drinking the fluid he himself called the ambulance which took him to Union Memorial Hospital since he was the only person in the house at the time.

He remained on the critical list at the hospital until he died 9 p.m. the same evening.

The Medical Examiner's office reported cause of death was still undetermined.

In addition to the sister, Mrs. Worrell who lives in N.Y., he is survived by sisters, Mrs. Maude Bostic, N.Y.; Mrs. Miriam Fields, Dayton, Ohio, and brother, Pezavia Wilson, N.Y.

HUMAN ORGANS

Customs officers have been instructed to expedite the entry of human organs imported for transplantation, Commissioner of Customs Myles J. Ambrose announced today. A program of organ exchange was developed recently by surgical centers in Canada and the United States.
