Light House Keeping

When loving hands take up knitting for the first time, the sweetheart Christmas gift that results often gives cartoonist inspiration.

You've seen some. You know, the blushing suitor standing there, saying — "It's just my size." The cartoon usually shows the young man in a sweater with one sleeve short and one over the fingertips. Or it shows a poncho that looks like a bib.

Somehow, sometimes loving hands manage to produce lumpy socks or gloves with six fingers.

But in the name of love, contemporary women continue to make by hand original wearables for their swains. This year, it is reported, the homemade gift most favored is the tie.

Depending on the skill or lack of same, males dubbed for the receipt of such a gift this yule may expect a good or bad bow tie, a lumpy or smooth four-in-hand — the latter either four or five inches wide.

How we know this is the year of the homemade tie: a pattern company that's been in business for 100 years some weeks ago offered patterns for three ties. The company has had to put extra people to work in its plant in Manhattan, Kans., just to produce the tie patterns.

• • •

Betty Flannery, spokesman for the McCall Pattern Company, said the firm never has had such a response to one pattern.

The responses indicates that the newest rage with home sewers nationwide is making men's ties.

This is not the first time the firm has offered a pattern for a man's tie. The first one appeared in 1937, a great depression year. It didn't go anywhere.

• • •

Miss Flannery said that perhaps the reason homemade ties are going over in the year 1970 is this: Making a man's tie revives the true spirit of gift giving in a world where many old-fashioned values seem to have been lost.

"Whatever the reason," she said, "many thousand of home-sewers have decided simultaneously that this is the year of the tie."

The firm's research department has found that most makers of homemade ties do their stitching to the accompaniment of television. It is estimated from start to finish, the process takes 90 minutes — usually the span of the evening television movie.

• • •

The homemade tie implies special thought and care given to a special person. It is a personal gift. Never mind if it isn't perfect.

Possibilities for creative and original ideas are unlimited, of course. A woman can incorporate his favorite color, print or special interest motif into a tie.

Those who embroider are urged to stitch "I love you" on the inside tie loop. For women not so adept, "made exclusively for you" labels are available.

Some homemade ties will be too short; others, too long. A man may not like the color or pattern. But one thing's sure: He'll have to wear it.

If he can't return it to a store, he has no other choice, does he?

The "little woman" is beginning to look like the Lone Ranger these days, from the top of her cowboy hat to the tips of her boots — and now including her cartridge belt

The latest look in fashion fads in the making is the bullet belt that some of New York's chic set have taken to wearing, either slung low on the hips or over the shoulder and across the chest.

Not content with wearing the pants in the family, these ladies have added ammunition that may really "send" the more militant members of women's liberation, but will send the anti-gun mol right up the wall.

• • •

The bullet belts are worn minus the—bullets — at least so far — to black tie parties as well as with jump suits and sweater and pants costumes. It's too early to say whether cartridge belts will go over with a bang, but they seem to be catching on.

The first New York department store to advertise them was Alexander's, which stocked 36 of them after Francine Farkas, who is both Alexander's fashion director and the wife of its president, spied them in London. They sold out almost immediately.

Bloomingdales also stocked them and sold them out, as did several boutique-type outlets, with women customers reaching for their charge cards with the fastest draw in the East.

The most common price for the brass-on-leather version was $25, but a boutique version with silvered bullets was priced at $35.

For the women who like fads, but not at $25 a clip, Gimbel's-New York has its own American-made version priced at $7.50. It consists of a two-inch wide leather belt sporting silver-colored plastic bullets much like those found in junior cowboy gunbelts for children.

At least one other eastern play as fashion items — Philadelphia, where a housewife named Karen Ross spotted the belts, also city has the belts on display in London, and asked her husband if his electronic parts factory could turn out cartridge belts. It could and did.

Reaction to the belts ranged from "It's fun, it's freaky," to one department Philadelphia, where a store employe who said: "I'm against guns and I don't like it. What's next? Bows and arrows?"

Preservatives used in some cosmetics and other perishable products may cause severe, protracted allergies, a skin specialist has reported.

Dr. William Schorr of the Marshfield, Wis., clinic, presented his report recently to the convention of the American Academy of Dermatologists.

Schorr stressed that only a small minority of persons appeared affected by the preservatives.

• • •

But for these, he said, switching from one brand to another provided no relief because the same preservative was used.

Schorr said it was difficult to establish which chemical appeared responsible for the allergies, since the formulas of such products are secret.

"They don't come under the food and drugs act, they're protected by patents, although many firms have been willing to tell me confidentially whether or not a certain chemical was included in their products," Schorr said.

The dermatologist stressed such preservatives were causing no epidemic of allergies, but the small minority of patients affected often suffered severely and for a protracted length of time.

Sometimes, Schorr said, a doctor might prescribe an ointment for the condition, only to find that the medicine contained the same preservative that was causing the allergy.

He told of one woman patient who became allergic to preservatives in an ointment and later developed sensitivity to a rubber boot he had prescribed to protect a small ulcer on her leg.

Both contained the same preservative, he said.

Annual outlay for public waste collection and disposal services is over $1.5 billion financed by general taxes in most cases, but regularly regarded as a "free" service by many taxpayers. (Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare)

The Most Exciting Headache News In Years!

Doctors' Tests In Treating Nervous Tension Headaches Now Made Public

Non-Narcotic Tablet That Needs No Prescription Proves Just As Effective As The Expensive, Leading Pain-Relief Prescription Of Doctors.

If you're one of the many who get tense, nervous headaches, these latest tests by doctors should be of the greatest importance.

In recent medical tests doctors proved a famous tablet that needs no prescription gives the same complete headache relief as the expensive, leading prescription of doctors.

These doctors' tests proved, beyond a doubt, that Anacin is just as effective to relieve tension headaches, yet Anacin needs no prescription and is far more economical.

With Anacin, headache pain and its nervous tension vanish in minutes. Despite its strength, Anacin is not narcotic. You can take it without getting dizzy or an upset stomach.

Next time take powerful, fast-acting Anacin. Anacin Tablets give the same complete headache pain relief as the leading prescription product for which doctors wrote 21 million prescriptions last year.
