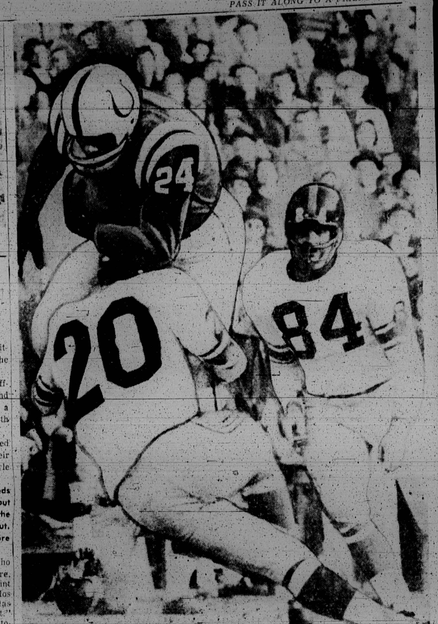
FROM NEWPORT NEWS, Va., to see the Colts and New York Giants give their all in the top game in pro football came Stanley Jones, 618 26th St., and Miss Irma Owens, 1150 28th St.

COLT FAN is Clifton Jones, 4412 Wrenwood Ave., who is decked out in all kinds of Colt paraphernalia.



A BUCKING COLT, Halfback Lenny Moore (24), comes to the end of a prancing run with a convincing assist from Jim Patton (20), Giants back. Harland Svare (84) rushes in to make sure the elusive Moore doesn't break away again. Lenny scored a TD and set up another.

Nobody guessed right score in $100 contest

The Baltimore Colts defeated the New York Giants, 31-16, and the outstanding players of the game were John Unitas on offense, and Big Daddy Lipscomb on defense.

As a result, the $100 prize offered by the AFRO last week goes begging. No entry in the contest picked the right score along with the two top players.

However, a $25 cash award goes to Mrs. Minnie Faison of 2227 Riggs Ave., for submitting a guess that was closest to the final outcome.

Mrs. Faison predicted a 42-32 victory by the Colts and chose Unitas and Lipscomb as the most likely to be outstanding in the game. Her margin of difference in the score was ten points. There was a 15-point margin in the actual competition at Memorial Stadium. She guessed the two players right to the nose.

JOE LABRUM, assistant to acting commissioner Austin Gunsel, rated the Sunday performance for the AFRO. It was his selection that entries in the $100 contest were supposed to match.

Labrum named Unitas and Lenny Moore as No. 1 and No. 2 on offense, and Lipscomb, Gino Marchetti and Johnny Sample as No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3 on defense.

Nearest to Mrs. Faison in the guessing game was Virginia Dorsey of 4738 Wrenwood Ave. Her prediction gave the Colts a 24-16 triumph, a difference of eight points, and Moore and Lipscomb as the players likely to give the best performance.

Mrs. Jean Knight of 2839 Remington Ave., missed the margin of difference by only one point, prophesying that Baltimore would hold a 16-point advantage at the end, 34-18. But Mrs. Knight's selection of Unitas was nullified by the choice of Milt Davis as best on defense.

The Colts were given a four-point bulge in the 25-24 guess submitted by Johnny Boyer of 2929 West North Ave. He was closer in the matter of player selection, naming Unitas who was top on offense, and Marchetti, rated second best on defense.

YOUTHFUL JAMES GUMMERS of 1106 Barclay St. had the Giants whipped by 24 points when he predicted a 48-24 score for the Colts. He forgave Unitas and Sample sharing the role of hero.

Alvin R. Blirk of 502 Hoffman St., also chose Unitas and Sample, but gave Baltimore a fierce, three-point edge with his 34-31 score.

Several contestants missed out entirely because of their unfamiliarity with the pro style of play.

One such picked the Steeds to win by 17 points, 34-17, but selected Jim Parker as the most likely defensive standout. Parker plays in the Baltimore offensive line.

There were some others who made no guess as to the score, only on the winner and point spread. One vitualized the Hoss to win by 13, and Unitas and Lipscomb "to stand out." The omission of a score automatically disqualified this entry.

In addition to the interest manifested in the cash prize, the contestants displayed a marked loyalty to the Colts. Among all the entries, there was but one which picked the Giants to win — and he by only three points.

TACKLE TROUBLE looms for the Giants' Chandler (24) as Baltimore Tackles Gene (76) Daddy Lipscomb and Artie Donovan close in with one purpose in mind. Bringing up rear but not far back to help is Wietecha (55).

COLT ROOTERS — Happy that the Colts swamped the Giants in Sunday's tilt at the Stadium were these fans. Evelyn Allen, 1815 N. Payson St., is the young lady in front. Next to her is her brother, Lavell Allen, 370 S. Broadway. Dayton, Ohio (in the rear are Mrs. Charlotte Hoffman of 1822 N. Dallas St. and Paul Grayson, 218 Union St., Springfield, Mass.

Stork leaves the Moores a daughter

Lenny Moore, star halfback of the Baltimore Colts, became a father for the second time Monday evening, a little more than 36 hours after he and his teammates had been crowned world football champions for the second time.

Mrs. Frances Moore, attractive wife of the stalwart Steed ball-carrier, gave birth to an 8-pound, 8-ounce girl at Johns Hopkins Hospital, at 7:09 p.m. Monday.

Mrs. Moore attended the game before entering the hospital.

The Moores intend to name the newcomer Carol. Lenny and his wife already are parents of a two-year-old son, Lenny Jr.

Asked how he felt about the new arrival, Lenny said: "You always feel fine as long as everyone thinks they boys are okay."

Felix Bullets' worry Sunday

Ray Felix, who used to be one of the only thing Baltimore basketball fans had much to cheer about during 1951 - 52 when he was rookie of the year, is now the Bullets' problem.

The six - foot - eleven former LIU center is now chief rebounding job for Allentown on the backboards. Jeannette declared recently, week in recalling the 123-109 loss to the Jets at Allentown.

"Sure, we were missing Spivey, but we still have some other pretty good boys who can rebound. But they couldn't handle Ray. He was tough and his rebounding helped set up a lot of baskets for the Jets. I guess he wants to get back in the NBA and show him his plane was sidetracked by fog, couldn't land at New York where he had connections for the trip to Allentown, wound up in Philadelphia instead. The giant pivot man rented a car, dashed off to Allentown, but arrived too late.

Spivey missed the clash at Allentown when his plane was sidetracked by fog, couldn't land at New York where he had connections for the trip to Allentown, wound up in Philadelphia instead. The giant pivot man rented a car, dashed off to Allentown, but arrived too late.

"FELIX DID a tremendous job for the Bullets. He forced Allen to shoot from the outside and he hit only 10 of 27 shots. Felix also had 19 points and 19 rebounds. Jim Paxson was our best man against Jim Pollard, who was hot from the outside. Paxson had 25 points and 10 rebounds. Gene Shue had 21 points and 10 assists. Jim Ross had 20 points and 10 rebounds. Jim Ross and Jim Paxson were our best men against Allen.
