MTA president

Dear AFRO:

We would like to thank the Baltimore AFRO-AMERICAN for its most excellent coverage of our 1959 Christmas Seal Sale for the control of tuberculosis.

We are grateful to your entire staff for its continuing spirit of public service.

Although final returns have not been determined as yet, we hope to give you some good news about the total very soon.

FRANK J. FISCHER,
President, MTA

Dear AFRO:

The photo of Dr. Bernard Harris and me which was taken at the Christmas meeting of the Baltimore Chapter of the Frontiers Club of America is deeply appreciated.

I think your photographer took some excellent pictures at that meeting, and the coverage you gave the meeting is sincerely appreciated.

Barrett School story

Dear AFRO:

We wish to thank you sincerely for the article recently carried in your newspaper concerning our school.

We were so happy about the interest of community organizations on behalf of the children that we thought we should send this information on to you so that organizations will know through the press that the children have had the Merriest Christmas ever.

Thank you very much for your cooperation.

Let Federal funds follow Constitution

Up in Harford County Dr. Brennie E. Hackley Jr., a government chemist and his wife arranged to buy a house but the transaction failed because they are colored.

However, the builders of the 700-house project depend upon the Edgewood, Md. Chemical Center, where Dr. Hackley is employed, for Federal water and sewage.

The builders claim the benefit of Federal money, but appear unwilling to abide by the Federal Constitution which forbids racial discrimination.

The Hackleys asked the courts to compel the Builders to go through with a contract of sale or give up Federal water and sewage.

"The case seems simple to us. The U.S. Constitution forbids what the builders are doing. Expenditure of Federal funds should follow the Constitution.

In fact, Congress is utterly without power to appropriate funds except as the Constitution directs."

What kind of democracy could lawfully declare itself against race discrimination, and then spend the taxpayers' money to sustain housing for white only?

War between the You Know What

President Eisenhower issued a proclamation the other day asking a moment of silence in honor of the last surviving veteran of the "War Between the States."

Of course, the President meant the "Civil War."

The State of Maryland issued an official document listing the names of all men (8,617 colored and 50,816 white troops, who fought in the "Civil War," 1861-1865).

Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States called it a "War with the United States."

In the Emancipation Proclamation, Abraham Lincoln referred to the "Slave States" which were in "Rebellion" against the United States.

Soldiers called themselves Yanks (North or Rebels (South).

Books of that day termed the War "The Secession" and the "Great Rebellion."

After 100 years, it isn't pleasant for Southerners to recognize their forefathers as staging a rebellion against the United States to preserve slavery.

So, considerable soft soap and deception is being practiced, which has now inoculated the White House.

A "Civil War" and a "Rebellion" have become a "War Between the States."

The colored boys who died at Fort Pillow, Fort Wagner and the 20 colored heroes who won the distinguished service medal in the Battle of Chapins Farms, Va. would certainly be puzzled by the words of President Eisenhower.

The thousands, who fell at the Battle of Gettysburg and in the battles of the Wilderness, who marched with Sherman to the sea and chased Lee from the Potomac River to Appomattox, thought they knew what war they were fighting in.

But President Eisenhower has other ideas, and if his ideas are followed to their logical conclusions, we may expect the to rename the Revolutionary War as "The War between England and the Colonies."

That would get rid of another horrid word "Revolution."

Wrong time

When President Eisenhower left Madrid, Spain, last month, radio stations didn't mention it.

They were too busy reading names of persons who won the national 16 million dollar lottery.

If he had come to Baltimore the day the Colts played the Giants, he would have been at a disadvantage there, too.

Baltimore in Liberia

When President William V. S. Tubman took the Presidential oath of office for a third term in Monrovia, Liberia, this week, at least four Baltimoreans were present.

Dr. and Mrs. Willard W. Allen — he is Sovereign Grand Commander of Scottish Rite Masons in the Southern USA Jurisdiction, as well as Grand Master of Maryland Masons.

Dr. and Mrs. Martin D. Jenkins — he is president of Morgan State College.

Morgan awarded its highest degree to President Tubman when he visited this country and Sovereign Grand Commander Allen honored him with the 33rd and highest degree in Masonry.

Liberia, oldest republic in West Africa, has made great strides under cigar-chewing President Tubman.

First, because of his boundless energy, his wise and honest leadership, and

Second, because he comes upon the scene at a time of African resurgence when rivalry between the United States and Russia gives African nations wider room for bargaining.

For the first time, foreign nations which want Africa's gold, iron, uranium, diamonds and cocoa must pay Africans a reasonable price for them.

Christianity in the YM

As we begin this new year it is sad to note that one of Washington's institutions that we feel should be different, of all groups, continues to do business in the old ways. In the rush of holiday happiness only slight attention was given to the policy-makers' vote of the Metropolitan Washington YMCA, rejecting a plea to change its segregated membership policy. Thus the downtown (Central Branch) YMCA continues its odious policy of part-segregated, part-integrated, making a mockery of the world organization's basic principle of Christianity.

As Dr. Edward C. Mazique suggested in his letter urging an open door policy with respect to the swimming pool and other facilities now closed to colored YMCA members, it is difficult to understand "How a follower of Christ can reconcile in the mind of a child the ideals of a religion of Christianity and the existing discriminations of some churches or a Christian YMCA."

The fight to desegregate the Central Branch YMCA had its beginning 13 years ago — Dec. 7, 1947, and 16 years before that date the 43rd International Convention of the YMCA urged "All Associations to take definite steps toward the goal of making possible full participation in Association programs without discrimination."

The Metropolitan-Washington YMCA has taken several steps in that direction, forming a Metropolitan Interracial Committee and unlocking the doors for a few mass participation activities. But it is still a holdout with respect to a full open door policy of honest-to-goodness Christianity and equal treatment for all members.

'Trespasses'

The word "trespass" means a transgression, a breach of the law or duty, an offense, a sin, a wrong or a fault.

It is a right big word for little people learning the Lords prayer for the first time.

Moreover, we have heard some strange explanations of the word "trespass" when we press the very young for a definition.

Some translations of the Bible use the words "sins" and "debts" instead of "trespasses," but the word "debts" carries the implication of money.

For that reason, AFRO readers may like a new translation of the Lord's Prayer, which is becoming popular among young people. Here it is:

Our Father, who art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our mistakes, as we forgive others, who make mistakes.

And keep us not be led into temptation but deliver us from evil.

THE AFRO'S CREDO

A newspaper succeeds because its management believes in itself, in God and in the present generation. It must always ask itself—

Whether it has kept the faith with the common people.

Whether it has no other goal except to see that their liberties are preserved and their future assured.

Whether it is fighting to get rid of slums, to provide jobs for every body.

Whether it stays out of politics except to expose corruption and condemn injustices, race prejudice or compromise.

Sightseeing

By JAMES D. WILLIAMS

Personally, I like music, even though I can barely tell one note from another and couldn't carry a tune across a crowded or uncrowded room, as the case might be, if my life depended on the carrying of the same across a crowded or uncrowded room.

While I was a somewhat reluctant member of the Air Force the personnel section gave a test for prospective candidates for radio training.

The principal requirements were that you be reasonably intelligent and able to distinguish one sound from another sound.

Having nothing better to do I took the test and the upshot was that if certain narrow minded people had had their way, I would have been transferred to service of Germany or Japan.

* * *

AFTER THE results had been tabulated the personnel officer summoned me to his office for a little tete-tete.

"Son," he said all friendly like, "son, it's impossible."

"What's impossible," asked wide-eyed me, figuring that I had made such an impressive score. he was going to give me a commission right on the spot.

"For anyone to make a score like this," he said, "you couldn't help violating paper under my nose.

I caught a glimpse of the score. It was a round zero minus ten, which I understand was considered a failing mark.

The only purpose in repeating this sad story is to prove that even though I may be slightly tone deaf, I still love music.

However, this love has been getting quite a banging around recently as I have discovered to get authentic sound reproduction.

* * *

A FRIEND invited me to drop in during the holidays to hear his new stereophonic outfit and I accepted the invitation secure in the knowledge that he would play some "sounds" or maybe even some Basie.

"Sit down," he said as he ushered me into his living room which was dominated by a contraption that looked as if he had borrowed it from one of those pictures featuring a mad scientist who has made a machine for turning people into monkeys, or monkeys into people, though I think the monkeys would get the worse of such a deal.

He began twisting dials, lights started blinking and off in the distance something started to hum. Five minutes later he was still twisting dials, lights were still blinking and the hum was still humming.

"Let's go out the back way of the road, Dad," I said, somewhat impatiently.

He muttered something about setting the "woofer and the tweeter" in his setup and it took him over five for this to be accomplished.

* * *

"CLOSE YOUR eyes," he finally said, "and pretend you're in another world. This is real sound."

This I did and suddenly, I hear this train whistle and the clicking-clack of wheels and the walls start to shake and I jumped straight up out of the chair and yelled:

"Watch it, that dj— train is coming right through the house."

My friend calmed me down. "Relax, that's my train record in stereophonic sound."

"It sounded more like "The Wreck of the Old 99," I answered.

"Okay," says he, "now we'll play some real records."

So he brings out his so so called records. For a solid hour and a half I sit there and get two barrels of bird calls, auto racing, tom tom solos from a drummer deep in the heart of the Belgian Congo, real authentic Grade A Hawaiian war chants, the chirping of love stricken crickets, some nut singing in a Mississippi jail about going north to Birmingham, and the mating call of a wild moose.

"What's with the music?" I asked.

"Music," he comes back, "I wouldn't waste this sound system on music. I've got real sounds that make you think you're right on the scene."

* * *

MUTTERING SOMETHING about what some I wished he was on, I left and headed for a friendly spot where they had a juke box and real music, like "Mack the Knife" and "Katie Went A Skating Now She's Actin."

For my part, these "sound fiends" can have it. I'll take real music, even if it ain't stereophonic.

MRS. CROXTON MRS. LAW

Santa sent Mrs. George Jude (Vashti) a sapphire blue sheath frock. Mrs. Charles Weight (Elaine) found a new television set under her tree.

Steve Duncan, editor of the N.J. AFRO sent a diamond studded watch to our gal reporter, Sheila Shields.

Mrs. Lillie Johnson, loaded with gifts from her children and grandchildren and hubby, was proudest of the tree set on a revolving platform which played carols as it moved around. Her gifts include Virginia Kiah. Mr. J's gift to her—a necklace set.

Marse Callaway Jr., 40, was handsome in death.

He looked as he did 20 years ago when he was growing up and before he suffered a nervous condition.

Remember he was an honor student at Douglass High and graduated from the University of Wisconsin, then went on to the U. of Md. Law School.

A dozen beautiful floral pieces surrounded the casket and neighbors and friends filled the Holland Funeral Home chapel for the Tuesday morning rites.

Said the Rev. James L. Moore, pastor of Sharon Baptist Church where Marse taught Sunday school and grew up:

"The Callaway family was the first family I met when I came to Baltimore 13 years ago. I met Marse Sr., a man of dynamic personality and one of the greatest political leaders Baltimore has produced.

"I remember at his funeral, the then Governor McKeldin said he would not have been elected Governor had it not been for Marse Callaway Sr.

"And, I've come to know his devoted wife, one of the finest church women who has served a number of years on our senior choir and gospel ensemble, and the son of the finest musicians in our city today.

"I am sure Marse Jr. shared the ideals, the religious beliefs taught him by his mother in his early life. When I met him on the street, he was serene and happy in his world. He had a great mind and great humility. We do not understand the problems that come in life."

Among mourners at the funeral: The Rev. J. Lloyd Garrison, pastor of John Wesley Methodist Church, where Mrs. Calloway is church organist.

MRS. CARTER REV. JOHNSON

Oddities in the news: That Sunday morning accident at North and Druid Hill Ayes involving an auto operated by Dr. C. E. Carter and a hearse was unusual in that the passenger in the hearse was Mr. McKinley Reesby, wife of the physician.

The Reesbys and Campbells are friends.

While the Campbells were only shaken up, Mrs. Reesby is in her friends, suffering a fractured collar bone, and three broken ribs, three to be at Provident Hospital where she is confined at this writing.

Also in Provident Hospital with auto injuries: Mrs. Minnie Harvey, 24, longtime resident of Druid Hill Ave. (2224). She suffered fractured pelvis and is likely to be hospitalized for at least three weeks and confined to bed at home for three more.

Oddity in this crash: Mrs. Harvey was on the way to the Methodist meeting at Lovely Lane Church. Occupants of the auto were friends of Mrs. Harvey and they too were bound for the Methodist meeting at Lovely Lane Church.

"More Provident Hospital patients: Mrs. Ruth Mason Carter, Department of Employment Security, Mr. Bill Hall, has been confined to hospital since Monday.

The Rev. Charles E. Johnson, longtime Methodist minister (35 years), is in need of blood at Provident Hospital where he underwent an abdominal operation on Thursday.

Blood donors are urged to volunteer at the hospital, 24 in the morning or at night.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson retired from active ministry last year, after serving 10 years as pastor of John Wesley Church.

People are still talking about that pretty and delicious smorgasbord at the Chinese Society's holiday party.

It was prepared by Mrs. Hilda Green, who is the mother of one of our favorite secretaries — Mrs. O. Dyson.

Mrs. Green has worked with Jewish caterers for nearly 10 years, and is just now going out on her own. This was her first affair. She is proud of her work and loves to feed people. Proof of this is that the food tasted as good as it looked.

Happy wedding anniversary cards go Mr. and Mrs. Jacob A. Handy, 4245 Meade St., N.E., Washington. They mark their 60th anniversary on Jan. 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Handy are both 77. Five of their eight children are living.

They are Mrs. Tone Johnson and Jacob Jr., who live in D.C., Miss Maeie Handy, New York, Mrs. Gladys Stewart, Baltimore teacher, and George, a government officer.

Off The Beaten Path

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

Celebrating her birthday at midnight New Year's Eve for the past 35 years is Mrs. Edith Harris, 2823 Riggs Ave.

It's not too late to send her greetings.

Mrs. Harris is the sister of the late Noah D. Thompson, and also Mrs. Cornelia Mason (Philip) with whom she resides.

Harvey Johnson, 2332 McCulloh St., is showing remarkable improvement at Provident Hospital where he has been confined since Monday.

Get-well cards will reach him there.

According to his wife, Mrs. Theodosia Johnson, Mr. Johnson has plenty of "spunk" and just what it takes in courage to overcome his injuries.

An ardent lifelong worker at Union Baptist Church, Mr. Johnson is deacon and church treasurer.

For 10 years he has held great pride in decorating the church for Christmas and the holiday season.

As Mr. Johnson, Willie Chapman and John Herbon, unemployed, were taking the decorations down, Mr. Johnson fell 20 feet from the ladder to the floor.

He grabbed at an organ pipe which broke in half.

Mr. Johnson sustained a fractured left arm, and fractures of the spine and pelvis.

The Rev. Baxter L. Mathews arrived on the scene as the ambulance was pulling away from the curb, taking the faithful member to the hospital.

The pastor remained at the hospital throughout the day and night as Mr. Johnson was placed in casts.

MRS. JOHNSON remained calm when told of the accident although Mr. Chapman and Mr. Herbon were so stunned they stood in her doorway speechless, holding her husband's glasses, watch and coat in their hands.

Exceedingly devoted to their father, Mr. Johnson, are Mrs. Inez Reed, teacher at Elementary School No. 110; Mrs. Theodosia Stokes, Cherry Hill Housing employee; and Mrs. Lois Hendricks.

Mr. Johnson retired from the Post Office in 1956 after 45 years on the job. The Johnsons have four grandchildren.

NOW HEAR this: A size 14D football shoe, 14 inches long, worn by Daddy Lipscomb in the Championship game, is attracting crowds at a 206 W. Saratoga St. jewelry store.

Proprietor G. Norman Medinger, in business three 30 years, says business has increased as folks stop, stare, and come inside to comment.

How did he get the idea? Mr. Medinger says: "I like to do things like that. You have to be a little bit wacky to stay in business."

TH PARKER, Colts All-Pro offensive tackle, also wears a 14-D shoe.

P.S. It's the Big Daddy's right shoe that's on display as a work of art in the jewelry store, is raised up on a golden disc (platform to you).

Miss Kitty Dean, 2742 Baker St., dancer, cancelled all engagements this week as she took to her bed on Thursday, ill with virus.

OFFICER GEORGE GILBERT who is stationed at the Northwest Police Boys Club, is suffering a painful knee injury, an old one sustained during his army days. Walks with a cane.

MRS. FLORENCE RIGHT, 2307 McCulloh St., arrived in Brookline, Mass., for the Christmas holidays to visit Mrs. McFarlan Fitzgerald.

Mrs. Fitzgerald ran down the steps to greet her guest, fell and sprained her ankle.

Mrs. Fitzgerald, known to many Baltimoreans as "Bert" is related to the Fitzgeralds about town and Mrs. Sara E. Diggs, matron at Walbrook.

KEEPING UP WITH THE WORLD

This is the Age of PLASTICS. Nearly everything is constructed of plastic and the business is over 5 billion, 600 million pounds last year.

POODLE DOGS wearing raincoats, opera coats, and lounging robes boosted the pet business up to its greatest heights in 1959.

BANK ROBBERS slumped to an all-time low as amateurs indulged the art of forgery almost exclusively by highly skilled safe crackers and gunmen.

The average bank robbing is now in the "people's crime" classification near the level of shoplifting as old ladies, civic leaders, chorus girls and moving-to-be are shown on the 1959 list.

The baby food industry topped all time sales records as they sold 275 million jars to mothers for infants and to people OVER 60 years of age in 1959.

MORE THAN 70 per cent of all shopping was done after 4:30 p.m. in 1959 showing that most citizens shop after dark.

FLASH

Night school students who begin registration on Jan. 25, 26, 27, 28, will be charged $2 for each course and the registration fee must be paid in full before admission to class.

And, it's good bye free night schools in Baltimore. The money goes to the City Treasurer.

Robert Ford, principal at Douglass High Evening School gave out this note to all students attending:

"The imposition of registration fees for credit courses was done to help alleviate the heavy financial burden under which our city struggles.

"To operate our credit course for 25 persons for 34 weeks costs the city about $500,000 in salaries, utilities, materials and equipment.

"You can readily see that the people in the course who pay $2 registration fee have paid no more than 1/10 of the cost of the course.

"To be able to obtain two high school credits in a semester at a cost of $4 in registration fees plus the cost of textbooks and notebooks is still a bargain that you can't match these days."

Mr. Ford also noted that a fee of $25 is charged for all non-resident students for each two night courses.

RECENTLY GATHERED FOR a meeting were these members of the board of directors of Westview Memorial Gardens, Inc., Baltimore's newest cemetery. Seated: Harold Stein; George E. Barry, Mrs. Irma G. Dixon, Mrs. Vivian Cook and R. Ashe. Standing: Dr. Bernard Harris Sr., Harry Dempsey, Joseph Kaufman, James Morton, Bernard Melnicove and R. Sindell.

Love fined $50 for assault

Arntond Lave, 48, 600 block N. Pulaski St., was fined $50 and costs in Criminal Court Tuesday for pushing a woman whom he said was his girl friend, into a bathtub full of water.

He was charged with assaulting Mrs. Mary Duvall, 2300 block Brookfield Ave., who told Judge Allen he came into her home, started an argument, while she was preparing a bath.

When she walked into the bath room, she said, Love followed her and pushed her into the tub of water.

Her daughter came to the defense with a butcher knife, she said.

Officer Nicholas Windzorye of Northwestern Police District, told the court Love was trying to get through the bathroom door which Mrs. Duvall had locked following the assault.

Steelworker's wife fights his try to end 19-year marriage

A mother of five children and wife of a Bethlehem Steel machinist filed papers in Circuit Court last week to contest divorce action instituted by her husband to end their 19 - year marriage.

She is Mrs. Evelyn Brooks, 130 N. Aisquith St., wh told the court that their eldest child a son, is 18 years of age and that they have two other sons, ages 17 and 14 and a daughter, age 5.

Mrs. Brooks also said that another child, age two months, was born in November.

Asking that her husband's efforts to divorce her be dismissed, Mrs. Brooks said she wants custody of the children, temporary and permanent support for them and alimony for herself.

THE BROOKSES marital difficulties came to the attention of the court on Dec. 28 when Richard Brooks, 1027 N. Monroe St. filed for divorce declaring that his wife constructively abandoned him on March 15, 1955.

Mr. Brooks said: "Without just cause, she repeatedly threatened to take my life and repeatedly 'mistreated me.' citation.

Mrs. Brooks denied that she had threatened her husband.

MRS. KATHERINE MAE JACKSON, 849 Ruxton Ave., asked the court to end her ten year marriage to Howard Washington Jackson, 2004 Homewood St.

She told the court that she and Mr. Jackson were married Jan. 8, 1950 but he deserted her on May 14, 1951 and expressed his intention "never to return to their common household."

Mrs. Jackson testified: "I were married on Nov. 28, 1953. She also asked for custody of the children, temporary and permanent support for the children, temporary and permanent alimony, court costs and attorney's fees.

MRS. DOROTHY CHAMBERS, 835 N. Gilmor St., filed papers seeking divorce from her husband, Willie Curtis Chambers, 2332 Madison Ave. Dec. 31.

She told the court that her husband deserted her and their four children, ages 8 and 3 years, without just cause.

She asks custody of the children, alimony, support for the children, court costs and attorney's fees.
