Pope appoints first African as archbishop

VATICAN CITY—Pope John XXIII has named Bishop Bernardin Gantin Archbishop of Cotonou, Dahomey, making him the first native African to be so honored.

The 37-year-old prelate was consecrated a bishop in Rome three years ago by His Eminence Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, dean of the Sacred College of Cardinals. His promotion to be head of a metropolitan province comes only two decades after the consecration of the first native African to the episcopate.

Archbishop Gantin succeeds French-born Archbishop Louis Parisot, 74, who resigned from his See. Archbishop Gantin had served as auxiliary bishop to Archbishop Parisot since becoming titular bishop of Tipasa in Mauretania in Feb., 1957.

THE NEW Archbishop has been a priest for only nine years.

Born in Toffo, in the Cotonou archdiocese, on May 8, 1922, he studied for the priesthood at the local seminary and did graduate work in theology and canon law in Rome following his ordination in 1951.

His See city of Cotonou is a major port of French West Africa between Nigeria and Togoland, on the underside of the west African bulge. The 1958 statistics for the Cotonou archdiocese show a total of 25 diocesan and 47 religious priests serving a Catholic population of 103,000. Total population is 826,000.

Troop 573 tells why members like Scouting

What does Boy Scouting offer a boy?

Three members of Troop 573, Gregory Jasmin, 9, a Cub Scout; Billy Wright, 13, a Boy Scout, and Charles Wright, 15, an Explorer, gave these accounts this week as Boy Scouting in America celebrated its 50th anniversary.

Gregory joined the Cubs because "all the rest of the Cubs were having fun, so I joined so I could make things and go on trips.

"You have a lot of fun in the Cubs."

• • •

NOW A TENDERFOOT, but working hard on his second class badge, Billy Wright told us:

"In the past year, we have had a three - day campore at Camp Soldier's Delight and was the first colored troop to be invited to the Pikesville Armory last March.

• • •

EXPLORER WRIGHT, who was a Cub Scout, rejoined the Scouting Movement because he felt it was the best way to meet boys his age who were doing worthwhile things.

Mr. Wright, who hopes to be a school teacher, said: "Scouting helps you to develop leadership, and it also teaches you to be a good fellow."

Way do working men devote valuable time to this development?

Leroy Hayes Jr., 1120 McKean Ave., who is employed at the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., has three sons 3, 4, and 5 (all too young for Scouting), however, he takes our boys to serve as Scoutmaster to Troop 573.

• • •

"BOYS NEED leadership and if a man associates himself with boys, he'll never grow old," Mrs. Hayes said.

Mr. Hayes is also a member of the National Guard.

Assistant Scoutmaster, Holland Powell, 1915 W. Lafayette Ave., who is employed at Bethlehem Steel Company, said that he joined because he has "always felt that a boy needs a second father."

Mr. Powell said: "Boy Scouting teaches a boy citizenship and loyalty."

Many adults take part in the Boy Scout Program, and many devote their time to Troop 573.

Chairmaster for the group is Charles Brooks. Assistant Parker is his assistant.

• • •

DENMOTHERS INCLUDE Mesdames Mattie Owens, Irma E. Cole, Nellie Wright, Carrie Canty, Mildred Brooks, Jessie Lee Brown and Virginia Blount.

Institutional representative is John W. Davis.

The Rev. W. L. Pitt is pastor of the First Mt. Calvary Church.

New concept in all-day school to be discussed

Dr. Adele Franklin, director and founder of the program of the All - Day Neighborhood Schools of the Board of Education of New York City, will speak on "The All-Day School," at the Department of Education's Second Year Community Study Workshop for teachers, Tuesday, Feb. 23, at 3:30 p.m. at the Woodbourne Junior High School Auditorium, Woodbroune Ave. and the Alameda.

Dr. Harry Bard, Dean of the Baltimore Junior College, will preside.

Dr. Franklin will discuss the All - Day Neighborhood Schools in New York City which carry on a carefully planned all-day program, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., to take care of the needs of children who live in poor housing areas lacking adequate recreational facilities; who may have working parents, or come from broken homes.

At present there are nine such public elementary schools in the Metropolitan New York City area.

The program utilizes education, recreation and social work, adding seven teachers and a psychiatric social worker to the existing school staff. During the regular school day, the classroom teachers have the assistance of the additional staff to enrich the curriculum for all children and give special attention to children with particular needs.

From 3 to 4 o'clock, the group teachers work with small groups of children in a specialized recreation program designed to help these children find interests for themselves and participate in group activities. Parents are also drawn into cooperating in a school-community program.

Cherry Hill has varied activities

Also, Arthur Lee Harris, Evelyn Stokes, Jerry Green, Calvin Winston, Charles Strawder, Leonard Benjamin, Larry Simms, Russell Weems, William Fisher, George Gross and others.

The center is staffed by five full-time workers, two specialists, a piano accompanist and volunteers.

George T. Faulkner is senior center director.

MEET THE SUPERINTENDENT — Principal and PTA members at Eastern High School are shown with Dr. George B. Brain, new superintendent of schools. From left: Mr. and Mrs. Leo C. Woods, Dr. Brain, and Mrs. Helen C. Taylor, principal. Mr. Woods is a specialist in elementary physical education. The Woods' daughter, Lenore, is a student in the accelerated course at Eastern. Dr. Brain was guest speaker at the PTA meeting Monday night.

Coaching staff, players readily adopt Banks, new Morgan mentor

"I feel at home already," Earl Banks, newly appointed head coach of football, said this week on the job at Morgan to finger-tip reporters. "I feel as if I could be a coach here."

Banks, who was a coach at Morgan for the last two years, said he seemed thoroughly indoctrinated when he was AFRO football writer, back on the job during Eddie Hurt's coaching days.

"Everyone has been very nice to me," he said. "I feel at home. I feel as if I could be a coach here." Banks, who was formerly assistant head coach of football, and dropped in on me from time to time during the years, said he felt he could be a coach here, because he knew the school, the people, the students and the problems.

"I'm not a stranger here. I don't know everyone yet," Banks said, "but I know several people. I think I know the problems of the students and dropped in on me from time to time during the years. I could be a coach here because I know the school, the people, the students and the problems. I'm not a stranger here. I don't know everyone yet,
