How Baltimoreans fared in year's first snowfall

How did Baltimore fare during the four-inch blanket of snow that covered the town last weekend?

Remembering the havoc the last major snowfall brought to the city, the AFRO conducted a spot survey to find out.

The survey revealed that although activity in some areas was reduced as much as 75 per cent, on a whole, the city escaped major damaging effects.

Industry was spared widespread damage as the snowfall came in the midst of the usual weekend shut-down. (The snow started Saturday afternoon and continued until 1:30 p.m. Sunday.)

OTHER THAN scattered traffic tie-ups on Monday, workers were able to get to their jobs without major difficulty.

As to be expected, church attendance was hardest hit.

Poor driving conditions Sunday held both public and private transportation to a minimum. A check with churches revealed:

At Enon Baptist Church out of a normal attendance of 300 only 75 were at 11 a.m. services.

According to Augustus J. Holsey, treasurer, Sharp Street Methodist, fewer than one-fifth of the regular Sunday morning worshippers were present.

At Madison Avenue Presbyterian, according to Mrs. Marguerite Daniels, wife of the minister, only 30 out of a normal 200 could get out.

ATTENDANCE AT movie houses followed much the same pattern.

A check with several of the first run houses (Royal, Regent, Harford), brought the report that attendance was cut in half and in some cases even more.

Night clubs, also had a big reduction in Sunday patronage.

For example at a Walbrook area lounge, Milton Ruben, manager, reported business was off from 30 to 40 per cent. Roy Bates, manager of the uptown, gave a similar estimate.

Although a school spokesman in the research department was unable to determine the effect of the snow on student attendance, due to monthly reporting of such matters, they left there was no appreciable rise in absenteeism.

Major manufacturing firms, such as Westinghouse inhabite to give exact figures until weekly payroll is checked, noted no increase in absence.

According to receptionists on duty at the emergency desk at Provident Hospital over the weekend, other than two cases of persons being knocked down with sleighs, emergency room patient flow was normal.

One agency feeling the effects of the snow, although welcomed, was the police department.

According to Sergeant Harry Scott, desk sergeant at Western Police District, there were only 14 cases heard on Sunday.

Normal load for such day, he said, is 56.

MONEY TREE, decorated with $1 bills, was among gifts presented Mrs. Veola G. Coleman, right, during testimonial in her honor on Sunday at Union Baptist Church, where she has been an active member for 37 years. Mrs. Ruby W. Grooms, who presided, makes presentation here. Mrs. Coleman, 82, was cited for her 40 years of unselfish service to church and community. The affair was sponsored by the Missionary Society of Union Baptist of which Mrs. Coleman is president emeritus.

AFRO Honor Roll member, dies at 43

Funeral services were held yesterday (Thursday) for a 1957 member of the AFRO Honor Roll.

The deceased is Benjamin Goldberg, 43, who was named to the roll for "his devotion and service to the community beyond the call of duty."

Mr. Goldberg became suddenly ill on Monday and died at Sinai Hospital on Tuesday. Last rites were held at a funeral home in the 6000 block Reisterstown Rd.

TO MOST RESIDENTS of the Piedmont Ave. area, Mr. Goldberg was known as Ben, the owner of a grocery store on the corner Piedmont Ave. and Denison St.

Mr. Goldberg lived above the concern, 3400 Piedmont Ave. and was active in the affairs of his community.

The New Ashburton Improvement Association in recognition of all that he had done for the community, elected him president in 1957, and in the ensuing year, he was elected vice - president.

What made Mr. Goldberg

remain in a community which had undergone a great social change?

In 1957, when he succeeded Earl Koger as president of NAIA, Mr. Goldberg said neighbors were his friends.

"I am interested in the community as a whole; in terms of working, living and playing together, and I am interested in the welfare of our children."

A REGULAR FIGURE at the meetings, he often dipped into his own pocket to pay for gifts to help increase interest.

Been there were legislative matters to be handled, he gave freely of his time to appear before various city boards.

His interest in youth was shown through his relationship as assistant cub-master of the Beth-Tfiloh Congregation's pack number 111.

He was also on the committee of the Starr Methodist Church Boy Scout troop.

A native of Baltimore, he was a veteran of World War I, and a member of the Jewish War Veterans and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Charlotte Goldberg, he is survived by two sons, Steven B., 13, and Randy, 7.

Charles Sye

Funeral services will be held today (Friday), at 2 p.m., for Charles Sye, 49, local musician, at a funeral home in the 300 block N. Schroeder St.

Mr. Sye had been ill for a week.

GOOD NEIGHBOR of the week: Mrs. Cynthia Smith of Severn, Md. To be shut in and forgotten can be a very lonely and unhappy feeling. Such thoughts come to those who are enclosed in convalescent homes.

We relatives and friends can soon forget to get around to visit these persons.

Mrs. Smith and her husband gathered donations together for such a home, Plaza Manor, Glen Burnie. She stopped off to enlist the aid of Mrs. Maggie Nickson and the two visited the home, made up bags of goodies for the 60 guests there and with prayer and song brought a little sunlight on a gloomy day to many.

Orchids to the lady for her remember our duty to help kind thought. May we try to others.

MRS. RUTH SPENCER
Resigns from Board

WASHINGTON

"It saddens me to leave this area of community service while so many of our school problems remain unsolved and pupil needs remain unmet."

Thus spoke Mrs. Ruth B. Spencer in a statement on Wednesday announcing her resignation from the board of Education for health reasons.

She said that last week "a routine medical check-up revealed that I must re-enter the hospital immediately for surgery in connection with a new and more serious condition."

MRS. SPENCER recovered last spring after she was hospitalized with an ulcer. She was re-appointed to the board in June for a second three-year term.

Dr. Bard's title now president Balto. Jr. College

The designation of Dr. Harry Bard, head of the Baltimore Junior College, was changed from dean to president, during the meeting of Board of School Commissioners on Thursday.

Mrs. Leona S. Morris, assistant dean of student personnel at the college, was named dean of pupil personnel; and H. Charles Whitney, formerly assistant dean for instruction, was given the title of dean of instruction.
