PSYCHOLOGIST—Samuel A. Hicks, is a research psychologist in the Human Engineering Laboratory, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. Here, he checks and compares data on the recent tests conducted by the laboratory on extended confinement of troops in tanks and armored personnel carriers to test their fighting efficiency.

Samuel Hicks helps Army with a problem

The Army today is faced to maintain the maximum with the problem of an all-out fighting efficiency after being war in the future. In this war it may be necessary for soldiers confined in tanks and armored personnel carriers when under the threat of an atomic attack or when in areas of radiation fallout.

There is, therefore, an urgent requirement today, to determine the type of combat equipment needed for the fighting man of tomorrow.

Samuel A. Hicks, 2310 Rosin St., a 28-year-old research psychologist in the Human Engineering Laboratory at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., plays an important part in designing and improving the Army's combat equipment of the future.

THE ARMY ORDNANCE Corps, in developing combat vehicles, must determine the limits of human tolerance to temperature, noise, carbon monoxide, claustrophobia, and the blast effect of atomic weapons.

The Army must determine how long these members of the future can be expected to endure under these conditions, yet maintain combat efficiency and be able to fight when and where needed.

Military and civilian scientists of the Human Engineering Laboratory, working under the direction of Mr. Hicks, have been conducting tests of this nature at the Proving Ground, using experienced soldiers of the crack 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment from Fort George G. Meade, Md.

Four different tests have been utilized to determine the physiological limitations and capabilities of soldiers operating in tanks and armored personnel carriers.

They are the "rifle fire test" to determine accuracy and response time, "obstructed run test" to determine gross motor coordination of the body, "gross motor coordination and arm coordination and the small walk test" to check equilibrium.

RESULTS OF THESE tests conducted by Mr. Hicks will not only aid the Army to design combat vehicles, but will also help to determine the type of soldier and type of training necessary for the fighting man of tomorrow.

Mr. Hicks, 2310 Rosin St., a 28-year-old research psychologist in the Human Engineering Laboratory at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., plays an important part in designing and improving the Army's combat equipment of the future.

He is married to the former Miss Helena Sorrell of Baltimore and they have a daughter, Lynne, 15 months old.

Dunbar art teacher on busman's holiday

"I feel that it's the ambition of every artist to paint something of merit. Not in a monetary sense, but a lasting contribution to art."

This is the opinion of this week's Baltimore Man at play.

He was discussing art, the subject that has become both his profession and hobby.

Mr. Griffin is a Columbia University graduate. He took his masters degree in fine arts and art education in 1951.

THE NATIVE Baltimorean says his interest in art dates back to his high school days.

It was at Douglass High School that he won a six-year art scholarship to Philadelphia College of Art.

However, his training was interrupted when he answered the call of Uncle Sam.

And for the next four years, he served as a Special Service corporal.

His duties consisted of drawing murals for service clubs in the Fourth Service Command.

Recalling his service career, the abstractionist said:

"During my four-year hitch I did nothing but draw. I was stationed in such far-away and fascinating places as Alabama, Georgia, and Mississippi."

UPON HIS release he resumed his pursuit of art. This led to a five-year stint as a commercial artist in New York. It was during this time that he acquired one of his most lucrative assignments. He did art work for publicity shots of the Hollywood production, "Duel in The Sun."

In 1952, Mr. Griffin returned to his hometown and met, wooed and married the former Miss Charlene Mills.

Asked how a piece of his work was chosen to be put on Exhibit, at the Art Museum, display at the Maryland Artist Feb. 28 to March, 20, he replied:

"I entered the piece, 'Andujar,' for consideration of the judges and it was accepted."

His works are also to be found in private collections in both Washington and Baltimore.

He has also exhibited in Washington. His creation, "Siljana," was shown in the Corcoran Gallery there.

The art program of his tenth grade students consists mainly of interior, exterior designing, appliances, and community planning.

When his visitor wondered aloud if he ever tires of art, Mr. Griffin made this point:

"There are so many untouched areas in art—ceramics, water colors, silk screen, etc., etc.—it presents the big search. And I like to experiment. It is filled with fascinating relaxation."

He is also a jazz fan and amateur drummer.

He feels that art and jazz go together. "They are two motivating factors that drive each other," he says.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Syrus (Margaret) Griffin, 316 N. Calhoun St., speaking as an authority, had this to say about art:

"It's unfortunate that a great source of art is practically extinct. Although modern French abstractionists got their inspiration from African art, Africa no longer is considered as a source of art.

"While missionaries are allegedly cleansing the souls and minds of Africans, their art was being sneaked out of the back door."

Mr. Griffin is convinced that art is a source of inexpensive and lasting enjoyment.

Metropolitan Methodist has served community since 1825

"To all who struggle and desire victory, to all who mourn and long for comfort; to all who hunger after righteousness; to whosoever will—this church opens wide its doors and bid you welcome in the name of Christ Jesus our Lord."

These are the words which appear on the front of "The Advocate," the weekly bulletin of Metropolitan Methodist Church at the corner of Lanvale St. and Carrollton Ave.

Although they aren't the same, these words quite possibly express the feeling of Truman Pratt, a former slave, who assembled with a group of people for regular prayer meetings on a farm in Baltimore known as "Scrabbletown" during 1825.

This was the beginning of Metropolitan Methodist Church.

It was not long before Pratt and his followers moved to Union St., only later to end up using his home on Biddle St. near Ross—which is now Druid Hill Ave.) for the meetings.

A giant step in the development of the group came when the Rev. Jacob Gruber of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church became a counselor and instructor to the group.

The Rev. Mr. Gruber moved the meeting place to Chestnut Alley (now Bradley St.) near Pine St.

With the growth of the group, a new meeting place was needed.

With funds solicited from members, land was purchased and the group began to dig the foundation for the new church at Orchard St. and Elder Alley.

Men worked from day to night, aided by the women holding lights to help quicken the pace for the erection of the new building.

Finally, a forty foot square building was erected and dedicated in 1832 under the pastorate of the Rev. Mr. Gruber.

MR. PRATT was named one of the three trustees of the church which was then called Orchard Street Methodist Episcopal Church and was located on the corner of Orchard St. and Elder Alley.

However, in 1850, membership had grown so that an additional building had to be constructed.

There was also a tremendous growth in the Church School which attracted many dedicated and efficient teachers to the one-story building located at the back of the church.

The growth reached such proportions that the building was converted into two stories, the two lounges, six classrooms, a board room, an auditorium with a stage, a conference room and a library.

The Rev. Richard Bell became the first appointed pastor in 1864, upon the organization of the Washington Conference.

Since the organizing of the Washington Conference, 22 pastors have been assigned to the church.

IT WAS not long after the first pastor came that another building was needed to accommodate the worshippers and it was built.

Membership was spreading throughout the city, and it was under the pastorate of the Rev. Henry A. Carroll, from 1869-71, that the church was renamed Metropolitan.

In 1927 steps were taken to get a new building for the congregation that was bursting at its seams.

Under the leadership of the Rev. Ernest S. Williams, Metropolitan's present building was acquired—for $110,000.

The property included the church, with a chapel, numerous service and activity rooms and a parsonage of grey stone.

During the depression years the church weathered the lean years under the leadership of the Rev. C. Y. Trigg, the former district superintendent, who made many personal sacrifices.

A $40,000 mortgage was paid off in 1942, under the systematic organization of the Rev. Fairfax F. King who served from 1942-47.

The late Rev. Elv L. Lofton carried the mantle of the church on his shoulders from 1947-1950 and was followed by the Rev. Kelly L. Jackson, who served the church for six years.

The Rev. Mr. Williams, a native of South Carolina, received his B.A. from Clafin College in 1939, and in 1942 he received his B.D. from Howard University.

He came to Baltimore's Christ Christian Church in 1949, where he stayed until 1956.

His wife, the former Miss Ruth Carr, who is also a native of Orangeburg, S.C., received her degree from Claflin College in 1949.

She has also studied at Howard University and Morgan State College.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Williams have four children, Frank Jr., 13; Beryl, 11; Cheryl, 7; and Mark, 14 months.

The family resides at 1119 W. Lanvale St.

IN HIS sermon last Sunday, the Rev. Mr. Williams gave this message in regard to Brotherhood Week:

"To run against law is to beckon for trouble; and this is the major conflict today.

"We may choose the road, but the destination is already there.

"Those who set themselves up as rulers, or gods are beckoning for trouble.

"Jesus prayed not for separateness, but that man, may live as one, as we move towards the coming of His kingdom.

"Mankind must not choose another way; this is one world despite the iron curtain or the oceans and other things which separate men.

"This is one world; one God has made and so ordained it."

This is the belief of Metropolitan which it also expresses on its church bulletin "The Advocate."

"Enter this church therefore, not as a stranger, but as the guest of God.

"Come then in his presence with joy in your heart and thanks on your lips, offering Him your love and service."

"Beseech His blessing on those who minister and worship here, and may that blessing rest forevermore."

Metropolitan, truly serving the metropolitan of Baltimore, holds a membership in the NAACP, sponsors a Boy Scout troop, and numerous other church groups, and takes an active part in the affairs of the community.

Sunday attendance usually runs over 600.

Metropolitan Methodist Church has come a long way from Truman Pratt first held small prayer meetings in 1825.

Zell Academy offers top cosmetology course

There is much more to beauty culture than just making a curl and Baltimore is one of the first cities in the country where beauty culture teachers may study all the details.

The Zell Cosmetology-Teachers Academy, the only school of its kind, opened for students here on Jan. 1 and is located at 706-708 Madison Ave.

Hubert Angelo Brooks, 706 Madison Ave., in beauty culture business for 31 years, is director of the school.

Mr. Brooks is nationally known for his work in the field of beauty culture and is a member of the board of directors of the National Beauty Culturists' League, a nation-wide organization with more than 50,000 members.

THE SCHOOL is owned and operated by the Angelo Beauty Culture Schools, Inc., which also has the Angelo Beauty Culture School, 423 N. Gay St., here in Baltimore.

Mrs. Brooks is also associated with the school and is a senior teacher on the faculty. She is a native of Chicago and has been in the field of beauty culture for eight years.

The academy meets the requirements of the State Board of Education and the State Board of Hairdressers and Beauty Culturists.

Mr. Brooks was urged to establish the school after he discovered a great need for persons to teach the art of beauty culture.

HE SERVES as dean of the Institute of Cosmetology each year prior to and during the national organization's annual convention.

Mr. Brooks states: "I found that qualified teachers are needed in the field of cosmetology all over the country.

"There was no school to train these teachers—no school that I know of — so I dreamed of opening a school not only for that reason but also for other reasons.

"I also discovered that there is great need to raise the standards. I concluded that one way to do it is to have qualified teachers.

THE ZELL ACADEMY is therefore unique in the United States, a new school for which there is great demand.

To alert teachers to the fact that beauty culture is "more than making a curl," the Zell Academy has the most modern equipment and is established in newly remodled and redecorated buildings.

The school occupies three floors in one building and two floors in an adjoining building.

In addition, there is a library complete with volumes on beauty culture and related subjects, and a modern office for office practice.

The broad course of study includes such subjects as cosmeteriology, hygiene, physiology, anatomy, modern hair styling, cosmetic chemistry, lesson planning, curriculum building, salesmanship, business ethics and many other related subjects.

New classes are formed each January, April, July and October.

STUDENTS MUST be high school graduates; however, the school is open to beginners who wish to take day or night classes and part-time study.

Mr. Brooks holds licenses in eight states and at one time studied at Tuskegee Institute under the famed Dr. George Washington Carver.

He also studied at Wayne University in Detroit, Mich., and operated beauty shops in many areas of the country.

To keep abreast of the latest developments in the field of beauty culture, Mr. Brooks regularly attends such schools as the New Jersey Academy of Beauty Culturists and the National Cosmetology Association School workshops, and the Sunlight Beauty Schools, Miami, Fla.

The school is open the year around and persons may inquire at the Madison Ave. office or Write Zell Cosmetology Teachers Academy, 706-708 Madison Ave., Baltimore 1, Md.

Music clinic will help problem children

The first Pilot Music Therapy Experimental and Demonstration Home-School Clinic will be open on Thursday, March 3, in the new chapel music studio suite of the John Wesley Methodist Church, North Ave. and Bloomingdale Rds.

The clinic is designed to help children who have low I.Q. and those who are mentally retarded or emotionally disturbed through the use of music.

Directing the school will be James A. Young, who has scored a number of notable successes with his theory of using music to help problem children.

Registration for the clinic will be held at the church on February 25, from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Persons desiring to register children may do so at this time.

The clinic has the backing of the Maryland Society for Retarded Children. Classes will be kept small in order that the maximum benefit may be derived by the children.

In essence, what the clinic strives to do is to regeh the children through musical therapy so as to improve their capabilities and ability to adjust and create a sense of belonging.

UN Club installs officers, hears talk on India

The United Nations Club held a coffee hour to install Mrs. Eva Cooke as president and Mrs. Naomi Fuller, as treasurer. Mrs. Cooke takes the place of Mrs. Natalie Woodson who is now in practice teaching. Mrs. Fuller replaces Mrs. Valerie Jones.

Dr. Samuel T. Chambers, club sponsor, gave a talk on India. The country's policy of neutralism was discussed.

Recent frontier incidents involving the Peoples Republic of China have strained previously cordial ties, nevertheless India continues in the United Nations to support the assigning of China's seat in the Security Council to Communist China, Dr. Chambers noted.

MAKE ME AN OFFER!!!

For this lovely home in a quiet residential neighborhood near Druid Hill Park. I think this beautiful property would appeal to most everybody, but especially to the father interested in a one-family home, at the same time offering "growing room" for his children. Read the description below and see if you don't agree.

This is a 2½ story corner property complete with a 20' concrete porch. There are 4 rooms each on the 1st. and 2nd. floors together with a bath on the 2nd. floor. PLUS 2 GOOD SIZED ROOMS IN THE 3rd. FLOOR ATTIC. All the walls have been newly painted and the floors recently sanded. Did we mention the living room has an attractive brick fireplace?

The 2 car concrete garage is just perfect for your "growing pains" because the day may come when the family will be able to afford that second car. A chain link fence around the yard assures that Mother can do the household chores free from fear for the safety of her little ones.

I will even consider a "trade" for that house you're outgrown. Now that you've read this, I repeat, MAKE ME AN OFFER.

"The capacity of these tanks are known and after the unloading is completed, figures from the truck meter should agree with those of the tank. If, after this check discrepancies are found, necessary mechanical adjustments are made.

"When the bureau is satisfied with the accuracy of the truck's meter, a seal, carrying a lead slug with the initials "BS" (Bureau of Standards) is put on.

"It is a violation for these seals to be broken without the knowledge and consent of the bureau."

ASKED IF inspectors ever find indications that the seals have been tampered with, Mr. Leithauser answered in the negative.

Explaining how it is possible to achieve wholesale cheating as disclosed by the recent New York scandal, the inspector said:

"It is done by use of tricks known as 'riding tickets' and 'trapping air in hose.'"

He described "riding tickets" as keeping the same ticket in the meter from stop to stop.

"Trapping air" is the practice of forcing air through the hose with oil, rather than releasing it through the air vent attached to nozzle for that purpose.

MR. LEITHAUSER warned: "To be sure that you are not victimized by unfair practices when receiving oil delivery, go to the truck and check these three things.

"1. Seal is intact.

"2. Meter is on zero

"3. No ticket in meter before your tank is inserted.

"If you have reason to believe that you are being cheated, call PL 2-2000, Extension 796.

"It's important to call immediately. In such case, the suspect truck must be ordered to the city yard and checked out before it makes another delivery.

"Otherwise, it will be necessary for inspectors to check the householders's tank before and immediately after the next delivery. Then if discrepancies are found, somebody must answer."

COMPANY OFFICIALS also have their methods of assuring the consumer that they are concerned with his protection.

According to C. M. Sharp Jr., vice president and general manager of Hoffberger oil, they have their own terminal.

It is here that their trucks are checked daily. The checking system is much like that used by the city. He reported that there rarely receive occasional complaints.

Upon investigation, if it is found that the driver is intentionally dishonest, he is immediately dismissed.

"We cannot be problem by use of our meter - checking system and auditors. However, the best defense for the consumer is to deal with a reliable firm."

At Shell and other major firms the story was much the same.

But to avoid becoming a victim of the air-oil swindle requires your personal vigilance.

John Roye, dies

Funeral services were held for John M. (Bass) Roye) Jr., 1206 Mt. Royal Ave., on Monday, from Mt. Hebron Baptist Church, with the Rev. James H. Matthews officiating, and the Rev. N. Lewis assisting.

Mr. Roye had a heat attack on Feb. 18, and was taken to the Maryland General Hospital where he died the same day.

Mr. Roye was director of the Male Chorus, and a member of the Mt. Hebron Gospel Singers.
