Two doctors agree on a divorce 'prescription'

Testifying that their careers are to blame for the failure of their marriage, Dr. Raymond L. Standard of this city divorced Dr. Anna L. Standard of Milwaukee, Wis. here Monday.

The 34-year-old physician, father of a 10-year-old daughter and a six-year-old son, says that his wife has refused to live in Baltimore.

"She has built up her own practice in Milwaukee and does not feel that she wants to change," he said.

• • •

THE DIVORCE was granted on grounds voluntary separation, after he told the court that he and Dr. Standard have agreed to go their individual ways.

Under an agreement he will provide $125 per month for support of the children.

The records show that he is also to provide permanent alimony for his wife, but the amount was not disclosed.

The mother will have custody of the children.

DR. RAYMOND STANDARD is on the staff of Provident Hospital.

The couple was married in Rockville, Md. on February 13, 1949. According to the husband they have not actually lived together since 1953, when he completed a residency at Freedmen's and was offered the post at Provident.

She, he said, did not want to live in Baltimore, though he wanted her to come here.

• • •

WITNESS FOR Dr. Raymond Standard was Lawrence F. Briscoe of 2508 Stanton Road, SE, Washington, a teacher in that city.

He was represented by David T. Mason, attorney.

Dr. Anna T. Standard, who did not contest the suit, was represented by Benjamin H. Foreman.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Standard finished Howard University Medical School in June 1952.

Judge dismisses Whittier Ave. suit

A Circuit Court jurist dismissed an injunction Wednesday filed by Mr. and Mrs. Joceophus Sullivan, 2000 Whittier Ave., and the NAACP, who asked the court to restrain a storage company from building a garage entrance in front of the Whittier Ave. home.

Judge Anselm Sodaro, sitting in Circuit Court, dismissed the injunction on the grounds that the plaintiffs "anticipated" what might happen if the entrance was built on Whittier Ave., and that he could not rule in their favor because no problem had arisen as yet.

Mrs. Jaunita J. Mitchell and Archie D. Williams, who argued for the plaintiffs, said the garage entrance in that block would decrease the value of their property and be hazardous to their children.

In his ruling, the jurist said the plaintiffs would only show where the garage entrance might be a nuisance later on, but could show no proof and the court cannot rule in anticipation.

Defendants named in the suit were the Northwest Garage and Storage Company, which intends to use the garage to store vending trucks, the Kirby and McGuire Inc., a contracting firm which will build the entrances and the Mayor and City Council.

One portion of the lot in question is zoned Second commercial, and one portion is zoned Residential, and plaintiffs named the Mayor and City Council as defendants after the Zoning Board held a meeting approving the zoning limitations of the lot.

Plaintiffs declared the Board set the zones "arbitrarily."

On this point, the jurist ruled that the Zoning Board is not obligated to follow the desires of the public in setting up zoning limitations.

Plaintiffs had asked the Court to restrict the defendants to putting both entrances on the Elgin Ave. side inthe commercial zone.

Neighbors and the NAACP protested when they learned the storage company planned to use the lot on the corner of Elgin and Whittier Aves. for their food vending trucks andintended to build an entrance to the first floor of the planned building on Elgin Ave., and entrance to the second floor on Whittier.

Ark. fine in NAACP case barred

WASHINGTON

Conviction of Mrs. Daisy Bates, president of the Arkansas State NAACP, was tossed out Monday by a unanimous opinion of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Mrs. Bates, key figure in the Little Rock school integration dispute, and Mrs. Bertie Williams, president of the North Little Rock NAACP branch, had been fined $25 each for refusing to surrender membership lists as required by city ordinances.

The ordinances were designed by Arkansas' Attorney General Bruce Bennett, in an announced design to put the NAACP out of business. More than 20 Arkansas cities, with his encouragement, hastily enacted similar laws.

The nation's highest tribunal Monday held that they are unconstitutional, ruling that the NAACP could not be required to furnish either membership lists or lists of persons who support it financially.

• • •

THE OPINION was written by Associate Justice Potter Stewart. Speaking for the court, he said:

"We conclude that the municipalities have failed to demonstrate a controlling justification for the deterrence of free association which disclosure of the membership lists would cause.

"The petitioners cannot be punished for refusing to produce information which the City and Potter Stewart filed a concurring opinion, asserting:

"We concur in the judgement because we think the Court has shown that the order at bar here applies violates freedom of speech and assembly guaranteed by the first Amendment."

• • •

MRS. BATES, when first tried in the Little Rock Municipal Court in October, 1957 drew a $500 fine. Mrs. Williams, tried a month later, in the North Little Rock Municipal Court, was fined $25.

Both convictions were appealed to the Pulaski Circuit Court, where they were again convicted and given equal fines of $25 each. The Arkansas Supreme Court, in a split decision, upheld these convictions.

The United State Supreme Court in reversing the Arkansas court, relied on the decision handed down last year in reversing a $100,000 fine levied against the NAACP for "contempt of court."

Few things warm hearts quicker than a small happy child. Sometimes spoiled, often "smart" — yet that soft, sweetness smiles through to arrest the heartstrings.
But in 1960, two and a half million youngsters are forced to attend separate and unequal schools. Such segregation wrecks ambition, cheats the mind and warps the spirit. It mocks God and debases man.

AN INTEREST in the student body of EHS is only one of three shows Edmondson's new teachers have in common. Each of them has commented favorably on the high standards of behavior and scholarship that have been established at EHS.

Most experienced of the trio is Maurice Holder of the mathematics department who is beginning his seventh year of teaching.

The second member of the group is William Betton of the industrial arts department.

The other member of the trio is Gerald Van Reenen who joined the English department. He comes to Edmondson from Concord College in West Virginia.

Jury returns Ledbettor verdict

Although he consistently denied being party to the murder and robbery of an elderly blind, John F. Ledbetter Jr., 19, was convicted Wednesday of first degree murder by a jury in Criminal Court which recommended the youth to be sentenced without capital punishment.

Sentence for this defendant was withheld by Judge Joseph R. Byrnes pending his motion for a new trial.

Two other youths, Richard L. Gross, 19, 1200 block W. Lexington St., and Jerry Dennis, 18, 2500 block W. Pratt St., were found guilty by a jury in the latter part of 1959, and will appear for sentence after the fourth youth, Eddie L. Taylor, 19, 1200 block Argyle Ave., has been tried.

Gross and Dennis were each found guilty of first degree murder without capital punishment and face possible life sentences.

Assistant State's attorney James Murphy contended that Ledbetter took part in the assault of Mr. North a retired radio repairman, who was found dead at Baltimore and Smallwood Sts., Aug. 7.

Defense attorney Joseph Rosenthal, contended that Ledbetter was with the three other defendants but did not participate in the attack on Mr. North, nor did he know the others planned to attack the 66-year-old man.

A minor friction developed at the off . set of the trial between the assistant State's attorney and Mr. Rosenthal when Mr. Murphy began his opening statement to the mixed jury.

"Ladies and gentlemen," Mr. Murphy began, "The city of Baltimore is rapidly being turned into a jungle . . ," and Mr. Rosenthal objected on the grounds that this was an improper, inflammatory statement to make to a jury."

After Judge Byrnes agreed with Mr. Rosenthal, Mr. Murphy continued, "Then, I'll tell you what the case is about and you can decide for yourself what the City of Baltimore is turning into."

—Strangler

The victims were all strangled and their bodies found in the area around Greenmount Cemetery.

In statements which Lipscomb reportedly gave police, he has said that he had been drinking in each instance and in a moment of excitement grabbed each victim about the throat.

Lipscomb was finally apprehended four days after the last murder, when policemen, specially detailed to hunt for the Strangler, heard a woman scream and a short time later found Lipscomb with a pair of panties in his pocket and no reliable explanation of how they came into his possession.

MARCH 19

Proceeds will be used to help Provident Hospital purchase much needed laboratory and x-ray equipment.
