RACE AGAINST DEATH LOST—Despite heroic efforts of the Fire Department Rescue Squad to free him, David Cole, 20, was pronounced dead at 5:54 P.M. Tuesday evening.

THE DUKE OUT—1,000 fans of the fabulous Duke Ellington flocked to the Johns Hopkins University campus Monday night to hear the music master give a concert. When music time was over the Duke and several of his young fans went to the nearby Blue Jay Restaurant where the management doused the lights and closed up. The restaurant had been the scene earlier in the day of a demonstration over its racial segregation policy. To the right is Miss Ruth Fegley, executive director of Fellowship, Inc.

TRAPPED — Photo shows David Cole, 20, 1238 Edythe St., as he was trapped and crushed to death by roof of an abandoned shack. He, along with his brother, Joseph, and a friend, Melvin Smith, were gathering firewood to be used at home. After he was dug out by rescue workers, David was pronounced dead on arrival at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

IN HOSPITAL — William B. Dixon, well-known real estate man, who entered Hopkins Hospital on Wednesday evening after he suffered a heart attack at his McCulloh St. home. Mr. Dixon is the husband of Mrs. Irma Dixon, Democratic House of Delegates from the Fourth District.

DEMONSTRATION SCENE — This is the Blue Jay Restaurant in the 3100 block St. Paul St., near the Hopkins campus. A mixed group of students from the school attempted to eat there Monday and the management announced it was closing. On hand were 13 policemen. There was no disturbance.

SNOW FLURRIES—It didn't last long but while it did, this was the scene presented to Baltimoreans on Thursday. Snow started in the morning and kept up through the afternoon. Then along came a rain and away went the snow. The youngster is Kevin Smith, 718 Appleton St. The parking lot is outside the AFRO Building at Druid Hill and Eutaw Sts.

JAZZ SINGER—Margie Schaefer, featured vocalist at Maryland Jazz Society's Roz Ford Day, is shown as she wows audience. Playing for the cabaret is Mickey Fields Quartet. On sax is Mickey Fields with Harold White on drums and Phil Harris, bass. Not shown is Roosevelt Wardell, piano. Held in an Avenue night club last Sunday, the concert was the first affair of the organization which is dedicated to promoting the interests of modern jazz statewide. Ford was cited for his contributions to the cause.
