casualties of the ruthless drive to end the work boycott.

One weeping nurse phoned out an appeal for bandages. "There is blood everywhere," she declared.

THRONGS OF strikers attacked other natives who had gone to their jobs, and one native policeman was hacked to death after he had emptied his pistol into a crowd.

Two white policemen also were reported severely beaten.

On Thursday, police and troops, operating behind a tight security cordon, invaded Nyanga to ferret out leaders of the sky-at-home movement.

Although the South African Government said that the invading force was for the "protection of law-abiding natives," (those willing to return to work) a house-to-house search was conducted for the holdouts.

JOHANNESBURG. — Although many white South Africans, weary of the past two weeks of racial strife and bloodshed, have urged moderation of the Government's harsh repressive policies, Justice Minister F. C. Erasmus said Wendesday that police again will be ordered to compel natives to show passes. The requirement for the carrying of passes touched off the demonstration at Sharpeville three weeks ago which ended with police and troops firing with machine guns from armored cars upon the unarmed natives. Seventy-six were killed and more than 150 wounded.

POLITICAL, CHURCH and business leaders who have urged a reappraisal of the Government's racial policies include D. E. Mitchell, leader of the opposition United Party, who said that his party would stay behind the Government for the duration of the present crisis, but added:

"But once the crisis is resolved, the Government should take steps to give natives and other non-white (Indians and mulattoes a feeling of security.

"The Government must also re-establish friendly and harmonious relationships with other countries. We should make a review of the Bantu (native) policies — review them in a completely new light."

ANOTHER CALL for revision of the strict and repressive native policies was voiced by Peter Monsenthal, a wealthy Port Elizabeth textile manufacturer and president of that city's Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Monsenthal said: "The time has come when organized business must speak up in this period of crisis. The Almighty, in His wisdom, has decided that South Africa was going to be a multi-racial country, and the sooner people realize this the better."

More than 1,300 religious leaders — Protestant, Catholic and Jewish — appealed for a nation-wide day of prayer and pentinence Sunday by all races to find the "right answer to the problems of our country at this time."

PRIME MINISTER Hendrik Verwoerd turned a deaf ear to these appeals, however, despite a growing economic crisis resulting from the strike - induced labor shortage and boycotts of South African goods by other nations.

Legislation outlawing the Pan African Congress, the organization which led the pass law protest, as well as the more moderate African National Congress, was passed by the House on Monday and slated for certain Senate passage later in the week.

Robert Mangaliso Sobukwe, president of the Pan African Congress, and 22 other PAC leaders were arrested and charged with inciting natives to defy the pass-carrying law.

On trial, Thursday, Mr. Sobukwe told the court that non-white Africans "have no moral obligation to obey" South African laws which are made by a white government.

DURBAN — An estimated 20 per cent of the labor force remained away from work on Monday.

One native was killed and a number injured when police charged a group of 3,000 demonstrators. The group was dispersed and formed a second time.

WELKOM, Orange Free State — Seventeen natives were injured when police charged a group of 60 persons who refused to disperse when ordered to do so.

Welkom is in the heart of the gold mining district.

SWAZILAND — Dr. Ambrose Reeve, the Anglican bishop of Johannesburg and a bitter opponent of the Verwoerd Government's apartheid policies, has taken refuge in this British protectorate.

The 60-year-old Bishop disappeared last Saturday from Johannesburg when it appeared that there was a strong possibility of his arrest.

"If I am to be silenced in South Africa," he told friends, "Then I shall speak elsewhere."

He expressed willingness to return to South Africa if given assurances that he would be permitted to "continue my work and duties unmolested."

'Arrogant South Africa may create need for UN force . . .'

LONDON, A South African archbishop has predicted that "the white man's unbearable arrogance" will precipitate revolts in South Africa that may require the landing of a United Nations police force.

Archbishop Denis Hurley, O.M.I., of Durban, called the apartheid laws an "intolerable burden," and said he saw at the moment "no human hope of mollifying the sharp edges of the clash between white domination and black aspiration."

Archbishop Hurley, writing in a British weekly, the Catholic Herald, said that a few South African natives can "formulate their political aspirations."

"BUT THE great mass," he said, "sees only dimly through the haze of frustration and humiliation only the stark facts of the white man's unbearable arrogance and the intolerable burden of his apartheid yoke."

"Do not talk to these African houses in the teeming townships near the big cities," the prelate continued.

"These Africans are underpaid and underfed. Even if they were not, all the pay and all the food in the world would not assuage their elemental hunger for human recognition.

"SOUTH AFRICA'S future seems to promise a chain reaction of eruptions — nothing carefully planned or expertly executed, only the sudden violent consequences of inflammatory contacts between the whip-lash of police action and the raw resentment of Africa.

"Within a few years the United Nations may be landing an international police force in South Africa."

Archbishop Hurley, who became Durban's first Catholic archbishop nine years ago at the age of 36, said the South Africans of Dutch extraction — the Afrikaners — were the "citadel" of white supremacy.

HE DESCRIBED their white nationalism as "hard steel, tempered in the flame of war, the despair of defeat, the exaltation of national resurgence, the passion of race and language and religion."

"It will yield only to a crushing, annihilating force. That force is rising in the black masses that surround and outnumber South Africa's 3 million whites," the prelate said.

There are about 10 million non-whites in South Africa.

The Archbishop said that the African National Congress party, one of the Africans' political groups, is broad and tolerant but has "that smell of Marxism."

He said the other main native group, the Pan African Congress, rejects all Marxist associations and preaches non-violence but could become fanatically racist.

—How it feels

the arrival of the new Cardinals and other Church dignitaries. They didn't cheer, but there was a special stir and lift of excitement when the Bishop of Rutabo entered — to leave a Cardinal. Rome newspapers were full of his pictures. No other Cardinal attracted half as much attention as the man from Tanganyika!

And, what about me — the sole colored reporter on hand?

Well, the room for the ceremony was crowded when I arrived, but for the same reason that Cardinal Rugamowa attracted attention, the laymen and even fellow journalists made way for me. Their action seemed to say that they knew I had special reason to be right down front — which is just where I placed myself.

And, brother, was I photographed! The ceremony was late getting under way, and for a time there you might have thought I was getting a 'Red Hat!'

They really turned the cameras on me. One French journalist and one Italian asked what paper I represented, and I let them have "AFRO-AMERICAN" in a nice loud voice.

I HAD my camera but no flash attachment. But by waiting for the floodlights from the newsreel boys, I was able to get a shot or two. However, when I had no such light, I had to sit and wait.

Then came a surprise, which was in something I'd never seen done before — and I heard Cardinal Rugamowa and a few others gasp when it happened.

An Italian photographer with a Strobe flash pulled out the plug from his camera and offered to plug it into mine, so that I could shoot with my camera and use his flash. It wasn't sure it would work, but we tried it.

We held our cameras side by side, and he raised his flash. I sighted on the Cardinals and clicked. The light flashed brightly and I had my picture. For me, it was the miracle of blood transfusion — with the flash from the Italian giving a dim but brightness to my camera. For several pictures that I took, the Italian and I were like Siamese twins.

SIGNIFICANTLY, OUR cooperation seemed to please everybody who saw it. The Churchmen smiled and showed their appreciation of one man, an Italian, helping another, a colored American, on an everyday level.

Cardinal Rugambwa, I am sure, realizes that he is on the spot. He is a man who will be watched for a long time to come. Even the Holy See, which has taken a most commendable step in elevating him, will keep him under close scrutiny.

The Pope has even gone on record (in a statement last week while visiting the poorer sections of Rome) as referring to Cardinal Rugambwa as a "prudent" man. This can only mean that they don't expect him to take the bit in his teeth now that he is a Prince of the Church.

The first black man in our time who can possibly become Pope cannot be completely isolated from the public, but he is being guarded as much as possible. True, I saw him and talked briefly with him. But I was asked what questions I wanted to put to him.

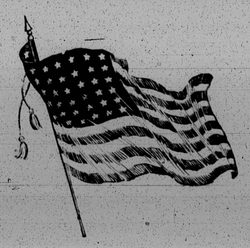
And when we talked, he knew and I knew that he couldn't say anything but the most innocent things!

MY GUESS is that he will be allowed to return to Tanganyika after some weeks, after a series of talks at the Propaganda Fide — the missionary division. Then I think he will be brought back to the Vatican to work in the missionary field. He is missionary trained.

It doesn't seem likely that a Cardinal will be left in such a small field as Tanganyika. Cardinal Rugambwa has a doctorate in canon law. He is well trained for a top post at the Vatican, and I think he will get one.

After all he must have been selected for a special reason. There are, as I have said, remarked, other colored Bishops who might have been elevated. But the Pope chose him.

Why? It seems reasonable to assume that he was picked for a special and clearly defined reason. And the choice of Rutabo seems to shall for a man of his caliber.



Heed Their Rising Voices

"The growing movement of peaceful mass demonstrations by Negroes is something new in the South, something understandable . . .

Let Congress heed their rising voices, for they will be heard."

—New York Times editorial Saturday, March 19, 1960

Thousands of Southern Negro students are engaged in widespread non-violent demonstrations in positive affirmation of the right to live in human dignity as guaranteed by the U. S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

In their efforts to uphold these guarantees, they are being met by an unprecedented wave of terror by those who would deny and negate that document which the whole world looks upon as setting the pattern for modern freedom.

In Orangeburg, Montgomery, Tallahassee, Atlanta, Nashville, Savannah, Greensboro, Memphis, Richmond, Charlotte, Baton Rouge, Marshall and a host of other cities, young American teenagers, in the face of tear gas, fire hoses, armored cars — the entire weight of official State apparatus and police power — have boldly stepped forth as Champions of Democracy.

Their courage and amazing restraint have inspired millions and given a new dignity to the cause of freedom. Small Wonder that the Southern Violators of the Constitution are determined to destroy the one man who, more than any other, symbolized the new spirit now sweeping the South — the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., world-famous leader of the Montgomery Bus Protest.

For it is his doctrine of non-violence which has inspired and guided the students in their widening wave of sitins; and it is this same Dr. King who founded and is president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference — the organization which is spearheading the surging right-to-vote movement.

Again and again the Southern violators have answered Dr. King's peaceful protests with intimidation and violence. They have bombed his home almost killing his wife and child. They have assaulted his person. They have arrested him seven times — for "speeding," "loitering" and similar "offenses." And now they have charged him with "perjury" — a felony under which they could imprison him for ten years.

Obviously, their real purpose is to remove him physically as the leader to whom the students and millions of others — look for guidance and support. Their strategy is to behead this affirmative movement, and thus to demoralize Negro Americans and weaken their will to struggle.

The defense of Martin Luther King, spiritual leader of the student sit-in movement, clearly, therefore, is an integral part of the total struggle for freedom in the South. Decent-minded Americans cannot help but applaud the creative daring of the students and the quiet heroism of Dr. King. But the America whose good name hangs in the balance before a watchful world, is our America as well as theirs . . .

We must heed their rising voices — yes — but we must add our own.

We must extend ourselves above and beyond moral support and render the material help so urgently needed by those who are taking the risks, facing jail, and even death in a glorious re-affirmation of our Constitution and its Bill of Rights.

We the undersigned urge you to support this combined appeal for the defense of the embattled students, Martin Luther King, and the struggle for the right to vote.
