Frank S. Randolph who handled the investigation, the first co-ed was molested a week prior to the rape case which occurred last Thursday evening.

SHE WAS approached one afternoon as she was leaving the college grille in Martin E. Gray Hall by a man who pulled a pistol and tried to force her into his car.

Distracting his attention by nodding to other students who were close by, the frightened girl fled in panic.

The second victim on Friday was not so fortunate.

SHORTLY AFTER 7 p.m., she was leaving the grille to return to her dormitory in Hartshorn Hall, when a man stepped out of the shadows, flashed a pistol and nudged her into his waiting automobile.

Frightened but remaining calm, the girl noticed as they drove off the car was a '51 Oldsmobile, that the clock was broken and that something near the gear shift kept falling off.

The car headed downtown. The girl worked up nerve enough to talk to the driver who kept the gun handy.

SHE ASKED him where they were going. He said he hadn't made up his mind. She asked him to put the gun away, that she would go along peaceably because she didn't want to get hurt.

Trying to sway him from his purpose and to store information which might lead to his arrest later, the girl talked as much as possible and noted the man's description and mannerisms.

Not to be dissuaded, however, he finally stopped the car in the Church Hill section near the Fairfield Court Homes where the attack took place.

BUT HIS victim's disarming eagerness to talk gave the man so much false assurance that on the return trip, he dared to stop at a Thirsty diner where he talked with a man he said was his brother.

The girl showered this social visit by pointing out that she had to be back on campus by 9:30.

Again headed toward the university, the girl was struck by a bright idea. Maybe he would fall for it, since she had gained his confidence.

SHE ASKED her abductor why he felt it necessary to take a girl at the point of a gun. Why couldn't he make a date with a girl and take her out like a gentleman.

The man liked the idea. He asked her would she consent to go out with him again. She said yes. He asked when. She suggested that they meet the same time and place the following night.

He agreed, and let her out on the campus.

Making her report to police, the victim was able to give a full description of the man and his car.

Police were surprised and impressed with the daring and good sense she had shown in suggesting the rendezvous and they decided to keep the date themselves. She was not permitted to participate because of the possible danger involved.

DEAN WENDELL P. RUSSELL cooperated with the police in setting the trap.

He was parked unobtrusively nearby when the car brashly appeared on the campus, Friday evening.

Before the driver realized what had happened, Officer Johnson pulled open the car door and flashed his badge. The driver stepped on the gas, dragging the policeman some 25 feet across the field.

But Officer Hebbs was in hot pursuit in the police car, and forced the other car to a stop.

THE FLUSTERED man at first maintained that he had come on campus to look for a friend, and that he drove off at the officers' approach because the thought that someone was trying to hold him up.

Police said that the weapon they found in the car was a cap pistol doctored to look like a real gun.

During later questioning, police said, the youth contended that the girl wept off with him willingly, but he denied that any intimacy had taken place.

On Tuesday morning, Rainey's bail was increased to $5,000 pending a police court hearing Friday morning.

service - to - all policy was effected.

The picketing and boycotting began last February when 34 students were arrested on trespass charges while seeking dining service at the department stores.

Harmonious settlement of the eating facilities issue did not include any decision about the charges still pending against the students. Fined $20 each, their cases were due for airing soon in the Virginia Court of Appeals.

AS CHAIRMAN of the financial committee, Dr. Picott had suggested at the RCAC meeting last Wednesday that a public recognition be given to the students who initiated the campaign.

These honorees would include Union ministerial students Frank Pinkston and Charles Sherrod who led upwards of 100 students in the sit - in demonstrations at the Broad Street stores.

RCAC Chairman Walker approved the appreciation dinner idea and appointed a committee headed by Mrs. Lavinia Banks to work on the follow - up.

THE RCAC was organized at a mass meeting which attracted 5,000 indignant citizens following the arrest of the 34 students at Thalhimer's.

The RCAC constitution limits its activities to the campaign for desegregation of eating facilities at stores in the Broad Street shopping district.

While the major stores have been won over, no policy change had been announced at press time at Grant's Drug Store, the Hot Shoppes and the White Tower Restaurants.

These serve colored customers on a take - out basis.

This situation points out that the RCAC, as an organization, has not yet completed its assignment.

It was also noted that for the RCAC to extend its interest to other segregation issues as city recreation and employment, the RCAC constitution must be revised.

These points will be discussed at an RCAC meeting this week, the subject being "Where Do We Go From Here?"

The student - led campaign, which got overwhelming financial, picket and boycott support from the generous citizenry, is largely responsible for a record of 11 public service facilities in Richmond which now serve all customers equally, as the Byrd Airport restaurant has done for a long time.

THEY ARE listed as follows:

multi - million dollar tax-supported BURHA.

In the wake of the advisory committee's refusal to support the clause, Richard Steiner, director of BURHA, went to the City Solicitor's office for a ruling on the power of the clause.

Before the subcommittee voted this week, it had been informed that it is the opinion of the city law department that BURHA would not be compelled to sign a contract with a non - preference bidder should no developer given preference status prove competent to handle a renewal job.

ON WEDNESDAY, the NAACP's national office, in a statement signed by Mrs. Constance Baker Motley, assistant legal redress counsel, called the proposed policy "unconstitutional on its face."

The NAACP's statement also noted that the clause in BURHA has been using in the past "does not prevent the non - written actual discrimination by developers."

It also declares that BURHA realizes this "but permits it to continue on the ground of practicality."

The statement suggests "it would be better to have no language in the ordinance on discrimination than to permit such equivocal language to become a part of the municipal law."

• • •

VARIOUS STEPS now being taken were construed by some participants to mean that if no iron - clad provision for open occupancy is in the ordinance which goes to the City Council for action, a major court test will result, the AFRO was told.

Members of the citizens advisory committee include:

John H. Henderson, Milton B. Allen, the Rev. Edward G. Carroll, Dr. John T. Middaugh, Dr. Leon Klein, Hans Froelicher Jr., Edward G. Howard, Dr. Robert J. Hill, Reuben F. Jones and Mrs. Maude B. Smart.

"We appreciate the fine way everything was handled."

So writes a family we had the privilege of serving. Further expressed appreciation for the "considerate terms," given them. States a third family, "You went considerably beyond and above what could normally be expected. It made the road much easier."

Our kind lady expressed "thanks for the courtesy and friendly advice."

Expressions like these tell more than anything we might say. They indicate that we have been successful in our policy of providing the finest funeral for less.

To ease the motorists' problems today (Friday), Mr. Zorzi said 700 men of the Highway department and 100 pieces of equipment worked all night.

SPREADING CINCERS, salt and plowing when the fall became too heavy for salt, workers had main streets in good condition this morning, the commissioner reported.

The smooth operation was in great contrast to the wholesale confusion caused by previous storms. Thursday, 6 p.m. streets were deserted. A look down Eutaw St. from Druid Hill Ave. revealed a picture of a well lighted ghost town.

Other than periodic transit vehicles, there was no traffic nor pedestrians.

Last Thursday, it took three to four hours to reach the outlying areas of the city. Yesterday, Mr. Zorzi said most workers were home earlier than usual.

law and grandmother, will be buried.

ALL BUT the grandmother, Mrs. Annie Riley, 78, died Sunday night when fire gutted the couple's Old Mill Rd. home in Pasadena, between 11 and 11:30 p.m. Sunday. Mrs. Riley died in Philadelphia last week. Mr. and Mrs. Green were away from their home making funeral arrangements for her when the fire started.

Bernard Green, 32, brother of Mr. Green, and the children, whom he was keeping, were asleep when the fire broke out.

Only 12 - year - old Larry Wright escaped. Others perished when they were afraid to jump, despite frantic pleas from the lone survivor.

Along with Mr. Green, other children killed in the fire were:

Regina Wright, 10; Aaron Sylvester Green, 6; Jeraline Cynthia Green, 5; Yvette Ernestine Green, 4; Winifred Delores Green, 3; Marilyn Alison Green, 2; and Darnell Avery Green, 9 months.

Another child, Rosaline Green, 8, escaped death because she was staying with Mr. and Mrs. Roland Johnson (Maggie of Wood St.) Mr. Magoby, aunt and uncle of Mrs. Green.

After funeral services on Friday the mass burial will follow in the church cemetery.

The children will be buried in a single grave and Mr. Green and Mrs. Riley will be buried side by side.

Thursday, a bulldozer was busy in the snow - covered cemetery, digging graves for the mass burial.

SITTING IN the home of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, with whom they have stayed since the tragedy, the couple talked to the AFRO at mid - day Thursday.

Both weeping constantly, they alternated in commenting on the tragedy.

Said Mrs. Green:

"Somehow, words just can not say how I feel. I guess I'll never be able to explain it," she halted as her body shook with grief.

"I will say this," she added.

"If you have children, love them. You can never know what it is to lose them.

"The knowledge that you will never see your children again is . . ." Her voice was again stifled by weeping.

Mr. Green, a Fort Made tractor operator before he was laid off, weeping like a child, added:

"Since I have been out of work so long, I wasn't able to keep up the children's insurance. It lapsed sometime ago.

"Along with the little money from compensation, I have only been able to find odd jobs now and then. We lost everything. Chances of getting started again are slim.

"The Red Cross is taking care of the burial expenses. That is a great help, otherwise, I don't know what I would do. We are really up against it now," he shook his head.

Looking ahead to the mass funerals, Mrs. Green sighed:

"Oh, Lord, how can I stand it? I don't know . . . I just don't know."

AFTER THE funerals "the likes of which we have never heard of," according to oldtime county residents, the young couple will move in with Mr. Green's brother and his wife of Cherry Lane, between Glen Burnie and twisted Cobble, Thursday, Brooklyn.

Mr. Green said county fire authorities said the fire which gutted their neat, formstone, asbestos shingle, duplex home was started by a faulty furnace.

The snarled, parched and twisted furnace which once sat on the first floor of the dwelling lay amidst the

When tragedy struck, the couple were visiting the Waddell Greens in Cherry Lane, making arrangements for the funeral of the grandmother.

When they returned, about 11:45 p.m. Sunday, they found the house wrapped in leaping flames which all but wiped out the 11 - member family.

Further commenting on the destructive blaze, Mrs. Greene said, softly:

"It is said that God doesn't put more on you than you can bear. So maybe with his help, I can bear it. But I DON'T KNOW. I've had my share of trouble in my time. I just don't know."

• • •

MR. AND MRS. Greene weren't able to salvage a stick of furniture, a stitch of clothing, shoes or anything. "We lost everything," they repeated.

Larry, the only survivor of the tragedy, is recovering from shock, smoke inhalation, cuts and bruises in the Anne Arundel County Hospital.

First one to awake when the fire struck, Larry broke out a window and jumped to safety.

He begged the other to follow, but they were afraid, he later reported.

The tragedy has left the community in shocked disbelief and bewilderment.

Calvin Johnson, gravedigger, who is supervising the grave preparations, said it is the worst thing he can remember in all his years.

FACULTY members, PTA, and the community of the Freetown School area are collecting funds to aid the mourning couple.

Mrs. Johnnie M. Mitchell, vice principal, and Mrs. Beatrice Gardner, teacher, visited the fire - gutted home, Thursday, while soliciting funds, flowers, and other needed items for the Greens.

Mrs. Mitchell said the community is shocked and saddened over the tragedy which claimed the lives of the youngsters, four of whom attended her school.

"They were such nice children," she said, "and the parents are such nice young people, it is a pity."

The school will organize and conduct a benefit for the family, Mrs. Mitchell told the AFRO.

The attractive mother and youthful - looking father sat silently for a long time, gazing out the window.

After staring at the snow-covered forests and fields, at nothing particular for a long while, they quietly paced the floor.

Mrs. Johnson said "Mrs. Green is unable to stay still since wholesale death virtually wiped out her family."
