EEOC annual report lists gains; 41 complaints aired

"In summary and conclusion, the keys are skill and determination — determination to knock on any door, and the skill to open it.

"For in the last analysis, even a law that is vigorously applied cannot help someone who is not able or willing to help himself."

This is the conclusion of the 1960 annual report of Baltimore's Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, made public Wednesday.

The report calls attention to these recommendations which were adopted during the past year:

1. Amendment of the law to supply EEOC with subpoena and court enforcement powers.

2. The Board of Estimates' directive that a non-discrimination clause be inserted in all city public work contracts.

3. A directive from the Mayor to city agencies calling attention to the ordinance establishing EEOC, and urging their cooperation.

4. Some action by the Mayor to require labor organizations representing municipal employees to change their policies of restricting membership to white city employees.

ON THE point of the subpoena and court enforcement powers granted EEOC last year, through a City Council ordinance, introduced by Walter T. Dixon (4th D.), the report stated:

"The grant of powers has made the conciliation of complaints more fruitful and, by and large, employers have been cooperative.

"None seem to harbor any resentment at the grant of THE Commis.; swat king size poseys—and, in no case, has the Commission had to resort to their use in order to acquire information, or to settle a valid complaint — problems the Commission faced under the old law."

The report noted that 41 complaints, all by non-white citizens, were filed with EEOC during the past year.

Of these, 17 were filed against private employers, 12 had to do with a refusal to hire; three with refusal to promote, and two with dismissal.

Ten of the complaints, the report revealed, were filed against a variety of respondents including labor organizations, employment agencies and state agencies.

All of the complaints for which probable cause was found were conciliated, according to the report, with the exception of the Fire Fighters' Association, where there is a complaint involving membership exclusion, and the city's Police Department, where there are complaints involving promotional opportunities.

THE REPORT revealed that the Gas and Electric Co. now has nine colored employees in departments previously closed to them, as a result of an AFRO story which reported there were no colored meter readers employed by this company.

There was noted in the report that "the clamor for equal job rights is not very loud, nor is it registered in the right places by properly qualified people."

The low volume of complaints to EEOC was explained in the report by these factors:

1. A shortage of jobs.

2. Colored workers tend to look for jobs and train for possession to employ members of sitions in areas and with firms their race.

3. A lack of confidence in EEOC, and a lack of understanding of how it operates.

4. Reluctance to file complaints for fear of jeopardizing jobs.

5. Many colored citizens, as a result of environment and inferior schools, are "in no position to compete on equal terms with whites."

6. The absence of community leadership.

The report was the work of Philip A. Camponeschi, former executive secretary, who resigned the first of the month to accept a position with the President's Civil Rights Commission in Washington.

EEOC board members wrangled over the report Wednesday for an hour and a half, changing a word here, a phrase there — and in some instances deleting entire paragraphs.

In a close look at city agencies, the report noted that colored employees are found almost entirely in those departments where there is contact with the public.

interpreted by its officers does not allow discrimination because of race, color or creed.

2. CMEA will accept all applications for membership and process them without regard to race, color or creed.

Wednesday, Dr. Otenasek revealed that a communication from CMEA's attorney stated that the organization has gotten recently a new set of officials.

IN LIEU of Dr Otenasek's expected resignation, the communication stated the new CMEA officials had planned to take these matters up with the new EEOC board chairman.

Announced also at the EEOC meeting Wednesday, was a communication from the Fire Board, relative to complaints of discriminatory treatment of some colored firefighters at some stations.

The communication stated that Fire Board investigators had found no basis for the complaints, but had issued a directive that the facilities of the stations would be used by civilian practices.
