Mrs. Bessie Jackson dies in taxi cab

By M. PHILLIPS

MRS. JACKSON was bound for an Overlea job where she nursed a patient and remained until Sunday evening. It was her custom to use the bus part of the way and go the rest of the distance by cab.

She was well known as a nurse and was able to bring order out of chaos in any household once she entered and took over.

A large woman with pleasant manner, she was particularly skilled in handling infants and young children who resented her size and her firm but friendly manner by never calling her anything but "Miss Jackson."

Her favorite form of caring for new mothers just out of the hospital.

She was a devoted member of Payne AME Church where she held membership over 30 years and belonged to the Nurses Corps.

She was also a member of Great Southern Temple of Elks and secretary of Group No. 1 of the Mt. Olive Beneficial Society. Rarely did she miss a meeting of this group.

Va. Children's Health

How to prevent home accidents

By DR. ROSELYN EPPS

Accidents are the leading cause of death in all ages of childhood — for the first year an estimated 12,000 children under 12 years who die each year from accidents. 50,000 children are crippled and about 2 million incapacitated for some time.

The majority of accidents occur in the home.

It is important to realize that children at certain ages are more prone to a particular type of accident. When this is realized, certain precautions can be taken which will prevent most of the serious accidents.

• • •

DURING THE second year, scalding, burns and falls are common when children are beginning to walk about the house. Keep pot handles turned away from the stove.

Don't allow electrical cords to hang where they can be pulled by an exploring toddler.

Always test the bath water before placing the child in the tub. Keep all stairways guarded and avoid high chairs on narrow legs.

• • •

THE CURIOUS active two year old, is particularly liable to poisonous ingestions, to have cuts and bruises from falls, and if there is an opportunity to fall into water and drown. All medicines and poisonous substances should be kept in places far out of the reach of the child. One should never put harmful substances in familiar containers such as soft drink bottles or jelly jars.

The three year old is most likely to be a victim of falls, burns or motor vehicle injuries. Children learn safety habits from their parents.

Don't allow them to play on the curbs, and in the street. Show them the proper way to cross streets.

• • •

OLDER CHILDREN are most likely to have accidents caused by drownings, bicycles and automobiles.

At the proper time, parents should teach their children to ride bicycles safely, swim and skillfully drive automobiles.

As the child becomes older, he will be increasingly aware of his own safety. Teach him safety rules early and set an example by observing them yourself.

AL DUCKETT'S Harlem, USA

UNITED STATES — Traveling in the party of Mahalia Jackson, this incomparable gospel singer, we are en route to 12 European countries on a trip which will last through June.

The Louisiana-born exponent of the spiritual has emerged as a woman of world fame and fortune and sung for three U.S. Presidents. I will now have a special audience with His Holiness Pope John, sing a command performance for the King and Queen of Denmark and spend two weeks in Israel.

There is a great deal of excitement aboard. Almost everyone sharing the journey on this luxurious floating palace seems to be a Mahalia Jackson fan — and there are some real VIPs among them.

THERE ARE Karl E. Anderson, assistant secretary of the International Tobacco Company, His Excellency Truong Cang, former Foreign Minister of Cambodia and member of the High Council of State of the Kingdom of Cambodia, Sir William and Lady Crocker of England, and Meyer Davis, Musical Director of United States Lines, who operates three hundred orchestras and handles every top-drawer social event in the U.S. and many abroad.

Our next door neighbor is impressario GEORGE WEIN, the man who created and operated the latest Newport Jazz Festivals and who, himself, plays a wicked piano.

Wein, who has issued his famed Storyville nitery in Boston, is managing a Tenionous Monk European concert tour.

At his invitation, we paid a call on one of the most famous of our fellow passengers, JACKIE GLEASON. Jackie dispensed one of the stuffiest fourboys we have ever seen poured down his throat by a bartender.

This sensitive funny man is just as entertaining in person as he is before the television cameras. He is also that rare reporter who delights a man who says exactly what is on his mind — and shrugs his shoulders in different when asked whether his statement goes on or off the record.

Jackie will spend three and a half months in France, working on an absorbing film in which he will star and which he is also co-producing. It's the story of a deaf mute, a janitor, who is ignored by everyone and who goes through hells of horror because of the treatment of his fellows in the final scenes — the deaf mute trapped in a collapsed building, goes insane. Unlike most of the tragi-comedies which have been made, this one will have the ingredient of terror. Gleason, who wrote the script and will score the music, is sure to do a tender, stark job in the role he glows as he talks about it.

Here are some of Gleason's opinions on varied subjects:

SULLIVAN AND PAAR: "I think people will now stop asking what Jack Paar is like. The whole thing is very simple. If a grocer is selling a loaf of bread for 75 cents and the man across the street offers it for 15, naturally the guy selling the seventy-five cent bread is going to be angry. I think performers are idiots to make appearances for less money than they're worth."

TELEVISION: "It's an infant industry and, all considered, is doing very well. I don't believe movies did as well in their first 15 years and what they did, they did with planned malice. They could change cameras and coach actors. TV started off live and spontaneous. It's only in the last five and a half years that tape and film have been utilized. I think television has made giant strides."

RACE BIAS IN TV: "It doesn't make sense. I don't stand for it on my own show. We use anyone with talent. You remember when we had this beautiful colored girl, Lula Guerrera, on our show. She was the first colored model to be exposed nationally like that. I understand some of our Southern friends blacked out their stations. It's a rough situation."

NAT COLE: "We're very close friends. When I got in to Detroit recently, Nat had a closed set a spot there. As you know, the musicians unions always provide me with a Dixieland band when I arrive somewhere. Somehow, I didn't want any band. I called the local and raised hell and when they sent the boys over I sent the band to Nat's hotel room at 8 in the morning to wake him up. Nat got out of bed, opened the door, cried "Good Heavens" slammed the door and crawled back into bed."

DUKE ELLINGTON: "I rate him the greatest. I'm anxious to work with him on an opera we've discussed thousands of times."

COUNT BASIE: "Bill and I listen to records together a lot. Basie swings. His boys play better than mine but we're louder."

JACKIE ROBINSON: "A real fine guy. I get kicks out of referring to his company as 'Chock Full O' Booze' on our TV show and you should see the coffee they send me. I've got a supply of it. Chock in my bag now because the coffee in Europe is awful."

SUGAR RAY ROBINSON: "He has a great deal of dignity. He's the Sinatra provoking kind of guy. You know, he comes in like gangbusters. Sugar appeared on the Steve Allen show and sang Man, it was bad. I told him — Sugar — I know you're going to be mad at me but I plead with you, don't run everything. Don't sing. He was mad and he told me he got lots of mail and calls. I said "Yeah, Sugar, but don't ever sing anything like that for fear people will say, 'Sugar ain't Sugar.' Sugar has lost some of dignity in a Negro boundoggle. But he has it so high Nat Cole — a friend of mine. I think they've both broken a lot of ice with this."

DICK GREGORY: "It's great to see a colored comedian getting the big breaks. I've known quite a few great colored comics who were accepted by white audiences. Timmie Rogers is a favorite of mine and Pigmeat cracks me up."

FRANK SINATRA: "A good guy. Lots of folks who are down on him find it aggravating that he is so spontaneous and usually right in his opinions." ON BOUR: "How about another one?"
