Gov. J. Millard Tawes brought greetings from the state of Maryland while Jerome Kennedy spoke for Baltimore's Mayor J. Harold Grady.

DR. DONZEL C. WILDEY, executive secretary of the Maryland Council of Churches, represented religious organizations while Samuel Daniels, grand master of the Masons and Dr. Parlette Moore, president of Coppin State Teachers College represented educational institutions.

John H. Murphy, III, president of the AFRO, also gave greetings.

Dr. Jesse Jul McNeil, director of publications, National Baptist Convention, and pastor of Tabernacle Baptist Church Detroit Mich., was guest speaker.

In his talk entitled, "Journey into Freedom," Dr. McNeil compared the journey of the Israelites of 40 years though the wilderness to our present fight for freedom.

HE EMPHASIZED four qualities needed on this journey: a liberated mind, self perceptance, a civilized heart and an empowered spirit.

Others on the program were the Revs. James A. Moore, Lorenzo Graves, Dennis Barrow, T. B. Davis, Leroy Bowman.

Music was by the Macedonia church choir, the First Baptist Church, Annapolis.

Clean-up drive held Thursday in Harlem Pk.

A parade, sponsored by the Harlem Park Neighborhood Council to mark the official launching of a beautification and clean-up campaign in the Harlem Park Urban Renewal Area, was held Thursday.

The group formed at the renewal office, 801 Arlington Ave., proceed south on Arlington to Edmondson Ave., west on Edmondson to Mount St., north on Mount to Lanvale St., east on Lanvale back to Arlington.

The Harlem Park Neighborhood Council, composed of residents and property owners in the area, views the campaign as part of a sustained year - round effort to keep Harlem Park clean and beautiful.

In this way, the council feels, the efforts of the people will be coordinated with the official efforts of the renewal agency and will both hasten total rehabilitation and give it permanence.

The campaign, itself, is the responsibility of the Council's Home and Neighborhood Conservation Committee and assigned to a subcommittee on beautification.

Bus not allowed to stop for sick

By SAMUEL HOSKINS

JACKSON, Miss. — "They committed no crime, their position will be: "Jail, no bail."

This was how Miss Diane Nash, one of the coordinators of the "freedom ride" assult upon segregated bus travel in the deep South, summed up the position of 27 persons arrested here Wednesday afternoon.

The arrests climaxed two bus trips from Montgomery, Ala., to Jackson. Twelve of those taken into custody were on the first bus, the remaining 16 on bus No. 2.

The "freedom riders" on the first bus, which carried 17 reporters and photographers, were placed in a waiting police patrol wagon exactly four minutes after they arrived at the Trailways Terminal at 1:54 p.m.

The passengers on the second bus were arrested just as quickly when they arrived two hours later.

• • •

ALL WERE enroute to New Orleans for the purpose of testing interstate travel laws which prohibit racial segregation. They were charged with breach of the peace, disobeying a police officer and inciting to riot.

The riot charge later was dropped. Tentatively, a hearing is set for Friday. Bail is $500.

The "freedom riders," who came on the first bus, left Montgomery at 7:46 a.m.

Taxi cabs and private automobiles, which transported them from the "makeup point," 333 S. Jackson St., were escorted to the terminal by six jeep-loads of Alabama National Guardsmen.

Military policemen manned six check points along the route to the terminal. They also directed traffic.

• • •

AT THE terminal was a contingent of 1,000 Guardsmen, with fixed bayonets. They lined both sides of the street of the entire block in front of the terminal.

Inside the loading area and the terminal were 250 Guardsmen, numerous city policemen, detectives and Federal agents.

The "freedom riders" entered the "white" waiting room, bought tickets, checked baggage and swarmed to a counter where they were served along with a number of persons who came to see them off.

Approximately 100 reporters and photographers also jammed the waiting room.

Among those present who were not passengers were the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who called for a massive assault upon all forms of racial segregation; Edward King, administrative director of the Students Non - Violence Coordinating Committee, Miss Nash, and Leonard W. Holt Norfolk (Va.) attorney.

• • •

THREE NON - "FREEDOM RIDER" passengers who bought tickets refused to board the bus after learning the "freedom riders" were to be passengers.

After the bus was loaded, Maj. Gen. Henry V. Graham came aboard and explained the precautions taken to "prevent trouble."

He said that while the probability of trouble was remote, the "trip is a hazardous one."

As the bus was pulling out, the Rev. Mr. King shook the hands of some of the passengers through the windows. "This is a dramatic moment," he said. "Good luck."

• • •

THE BUS was the center of a caravan of 22 Highway Patrol and National Guard cars. In each vehicle were three Guardsmen and five State Highway Patrolmen. General Graham rode in one of the vehicles.

Crisis crossing overhead were two planes of the State National Air Patrol.

The caravan made three stops before reaching the Mississippi State line at 11:40 a.m.

General Graham announced that the first stop was a stretch period. The second was when one of the the "Freedom Riders" a.m. Anderson of Nashville, became ill of a "pain in the stomach" and was taken for a ride to the woods by General Graham.

The third stop of 35 minutes, five miles from the Mississippi line, was not explained at the time. Later it learned that it was due to a report that a man in a waiting crowd had a dynamite bomb. The report was false.

While the caravan waited, however, Mississippi National Guard Helicopter hovered overhead for several minutes and then landed near the highway.

During each stop the bus was ringed by Guardsmen who stood alert with fixed bayonets. Guards also were placed at both ends of all bridges along the highway.

• • •

AT THE STATE line, 200 Mississippi Guardsmen took charge. They were armed with submachine guns, M-1 rifles and shotguns.

Five Guardsmen, under the command of Lt. Col. Gillespie V. Montgomery, also a state Senator, boarded the bus.

In front and behind the bus was a caravan of 25 Guard and official cars. The overall operation was under the command of Lt. Col. Tom Minniece of Meridian. At times, the bus traveled over 75 miles an hour.

After the bus passed Meridian without stopping, C. T. Case, a numerous city policeman, detectives and Federal agents.

The "freedom riders" entered the "white" waiting room, bought tickets, checked baggage and swarmed to a counter where they were served along with a number of persons who came to see them off.

Approximately 100 reporters and photographers also jammed the waiting room.
