Does Governor Tawes Have A Double Standard?

Governor Millard Tawes is getting bad advice from his publicity department.

His statement, that as governor he is legally enjoined from interferring with the Elkton Court's handling of the 3 hunger strikers, is not germane.

After all, three respectable citizens of Philadelphia were jailed on the charge of disturbing the peace.

Their misdemeanor was to ask for food service in a public restaurant, and when denied such service, refused to leave the premises.

When jailed, they refused to eat.

Elkton authorities declared such people must be crazy and sent them to Crownsville to have their heads examined.

• • •

AFTER 14 days fasting, Crownsville doctors said the Elkton Three are mentally and physically sound.

Every sensible person who has interviewed the Elkton Three respects them as decent and orderly citizens of the U.S. who are motivated by conscience to assert their dignity, equality and non-violent protest against Maryland's segregation practices.

The oldest of our common laws is one which requires inns to serve all travellers.

In the restrictive covenant cases the Supreme Court held that the state courts could not enforce deeds restricting sale and occupancy of real property to white persons only.

• • •

IN THE Elkton case, the State, through its courts and police are, we think, contrary to the 14th Amendment, attempting to enforce private segregation practices of innkeepers.

The U.S. Supreme Court is being asked to pass on this issue.

Now to get back to the governor.

We point out that he is the head of this State, as John Kennedy is President of the United States.

When President Kennedy heard of the indignities practiced by Georgia authorities upon Martin Luther King, he wired a resolution of regret to Mrs. King and the King family.

That wire did not interfere with judicial processes, but it established the President's sympathy with humble people whose consciences move them to protest injustice.

• • •

RICHARD NIXON, the Republican candidate for the presidency, sent no wire to Dr. King and he lost the election.

Governor Tawes has sent his regrets to foreign countries whose ambassadors were refused service in Maryland restaurants.

Are foreigners, even ambassadors, more human than American citizens?

Does the governor want it understood that there is to be one treatment for foreigners and another for Americans?

'Penny Wise And Pound Foolish'

The Board of Estimates recently advanced a plan to save $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 a year by eliminating the city kindergartens.

Reaction to the proposal came swifty Dr. George B. Brain, superintendent of Baltimore public schools, said he was "surprised and distressed" at the proposal.

Dr. Brain, who called the proposal "penny wise and pound foolish", explained that the elimination of kindergartens would cause many children to fail in the first grade.

He pointed out that all the major cities of America have kindergarten programs and the experience over the years indicates kindergartens are educationally sound. Dr. Brain said Baltimore "would be taking a step backward, if it abolishes the kindergartens."

Another dissenting voice was that of Mrs. Robert E. Hampson, president of the Baltimore Parent - Teacher Association, who said: "The elimination of the kindergarten at this time would be very short - sighted economy.

"It would cost more to teach the children to read, write, do arithmetic, and so forth, in later years. I feel very strongly that this is a matter for the professional staff of the Department of Education to handle."

A professional educator, Mrs. Mabel Booker, principal of Beale Elliott Elementary School, said, "Kindergartens take up where the home leaves off in teaching the children the basic fundamentals of life."

She vigorously defended the kindergarten program as being most important to socially and culturally deprived children.

Amidst a growing storm of protest, Mayor J. Harold Grady and Philip H. Goodman, president of City Council, rejected the proposal which will probably remove it from further consideration by the board.

This was a wise move.

At a time when we are in a life and death struggle to maintain our position among the world's leaders, it would be suicidal to undermine our educational system.

We can sympathize with the Board of Estimates in its efforts to reduce steadily rising costs and to present a balanced budget, but the elimination of kindergartens would cost more, in the long run, than it would save.

Miami's Lillie Jackson

Father Theodore Gibson, who speaks here Sunday afternoon at the NAACP membership meeting, is something special.

He is the rector of an 800 - member Episcopal Church in Miami, Fla.

He is the president of the Miami Branch NAACP.

He was convicted and jailed in Florida for refusing to surrender his NAACP membership rolls to state authorities who wanted them for unlawful purposes. His case is on appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Episcopalians are generally conservatives. They are not usually so vocal and persistent as to defy civil authorities on the question of human rights.

There is a new crop of young Episcopal churchmen coming up.

Witness 10 Episcopal clergymen jailed in Jackson while trying to desegregate a bus station.

Witness Father Gibson who has led the NAACP movement in Miami to integrate schools, busses, swimming pools, parks, golf courses and restaurants.

He's Miami's Dr. Lillie M. Jackson.

Baltimore should give Father Gibson a warm welcome Sunday.

Gentleman Joe Perry

Some 54,000 Baltimoreans who watched the Colts-Los Angeles Rams game last Sunday afternoon, roared welcome to Joe Perry, one of the newer members of the home team.

By nightfall, his name was on the tongues of thousands more throughout the city.

Because he is 34, Perry is considered "old" by athletic standards, particularly so in such a rugged environment as professional football produces. For that reason, the news of his acquisition by the Colts last winter, was accepted here with reservations.

But these disappeared in the balmy air over Memorial Stadium as the "old man" who had been cast off by the San Francisco 49ers, donned the hero's mantle and provided the spark that ignited a victorious rally.

Naturally, the AFRO as an integral part of the Baltimore scene, and a firm supporter of the Colts, is happy to have Perry around. But the ability to play football is not Joe's only asset. Another is his sportsmanship on the field; still another is his character off it.

In 34 years of living and 15 years of playing, Perry has built a reputation that not once has been tainted by questionable conduct or besmirched by a hint of scandal.

Our hand, then, is not only extended to a fine athlete who figures to help the team, but to a true gentleman who does credit to the game as well.

Jamaica Remembered

The island of Jamaica seems to have voted itself out of the West Indian Federation (this week 230,825 to 200,728.

The Manley government thus reserves the right to seek its own independence and let the 8 other islands go their own way.

Maybe these islands deserved this rebuff.

The other 8 islands ganged up on Jamaica, largest and richest of the Federation, and selected Trinidad for the Federation capital city and Sir Grantly Adams for the Federation's prime minister.

With that kind of start, the 8 small islands could look forward to squeezing big Jamaica out of other advantages.

This week's vote changes all that.

What Our Readers Say

Comments On Convention

Dear AFRO,

I was shocked when I read in the AFRO the false accusation made against Dr. Martin Luther King, eminent civil rights leader, by the Rev. Joseph H. Jackson, president of the National Baptist Convention.

In effect, he accused Dr. King of masterminding the tragedy at Kansas City.

The Kansas City mess is the baby of Joseph H. Jackson.

Dr. King has done more to hasten racial equality in our time than all the speeches Dr. Jackson has made or will make during his entire career.

Dr. Jackson is a gradualist of the old school, despite his denial of that fact in his annual message to the assembled delegates in Kansas City.

It is tragic to have a leader with a philosophy that has been rejected to head the world's largest church of colored people when we have available so many educated, dedicated ministers.

The laity of the more than five million Baptists can force Dr. Jackson out by refusing to support the convention financially.

WALTER A. BAKER

Mountain or Hill

Dear AFRO:

In reference to the letters published in Tuesday's AFRO (Sept. 19) criticizing the National Baptist Convention, I would like to say first of all, I don't think the AFRO as a leading colored newspaper should have published the picture and the leading headline big and bold with the news about the convention.

We all know the Baptist ministers are playing a leading role in bringing about equal job opportunities and rights for citizens of color and so is the AFRO newspaper.

So I think the AFRO should have printed a small news article, probably on the back page and tried to keep it as quiet as possible. Not only that but other articles that would reflect badly on our race.

We, as a race have enough against us without our own race doing things that would also reflect against us.

Of course I think the convention was awful, but accidents will happen and let us not make mountains out of mole hills, especially about such important leaders as the Baptist ministers.

MRS. E. L. BRYAN

Disgusted Baptist

Dear AFRO:

I have been a Baptist for 27 years and until recently I was a proud Baptist.

As a result of that fracas at the National Baptist Convention in Kansas City, now I am ashamed to call myself a Baptist.

I am almost inclined to agree with the letter writer who called some of our ministers "self appointed loudmouth ignoramuses."

The way I feel now I do not know when or if I will ever return to the Baptist Church.

'Walk In My Shoes'

Regardless of any critical appraisal of Tuesday night's TV presentation of "Walk in My Shoes," the Bell and Howell Co. deserves an accolade for its courage in sponsoring the show.

"Walk in My Shoes" was a documentary film on contemporary colored Americans, depicting their problems and their aspirations.

The film attempted to explode the myth of colored persons being satisfied with their inferior status in this country.

In so doing, it undoubtedly aroused the ire of many southerners, and some northerners, who are opposed to the rising demands for complete integration.

Such a program was bound to be controversial, and to the average TV sponsor, controversy is a thing to be avoided like the dreaded black plaque.

Controversy, they explain, antagonizes possible customers, and this is bad for business.

To protect their investment, the sponsors turn to inane comedies, and trite western and detective stories distinguished from each other only in the amount of violence they manage to cram into the alloted time.

The result has been to reduce television to a dreary level of mediocrity that does little more than kill the time of the viewers.

It is therefore worthy of note when a sponsor has the courage to present a program that he knows is not going to be well received in all sections of the country.

Readers are invited to submit letters for publication. All letter must be signed but signature will be omitted if requested. Letters should be no more than 300 words in length. Address them "Our Readers Say," AFRO-AMERICAN, 628 N. Eutaw St., Baltimore 1, Md.

Liked Matthews' Article

Dear AFRO:

Ralph Matthews interesting and forceful article in Friday's edition, although presented in a humorous vein, certainly brought to light one point in particular which is indeed serious and calls for careful consideration.

In substance, Mr. Matthews seems to evaluate the Germans as the same old crowd gaining military strength in the background perhaps for the present, but all efforts quietly focusing toward that goal unnoticed they hope.

Your correspondent is farsighted in that he can note that Russia and the U.S. will eventually come to grips over the German issue and when this happens if either or both survive, they will be in such a weakened condition that Germany can strike and overcome both of them and thus proceed to conquer the universe.... their greatest ambition.

Therefore, in addition to Russia, we must watch Germany closely. Egotistic, self sufficient and demanding they always felt that they are superior in skill and intellect and hence the rest of the world should be submissive to them.

History reveals them as consistantly trying to take over other countries and in the last half century despite two disastrous defeats the feeling somehow still haunts them as possible conquerors of the world.

Whether under the rule and leadership of the Kaiser Hitler or those of today any adjectives used to describe them must include: unreliable, shrewd, cunniving, deceitful, inhuman, repugnant, proud, brutal, despicable, repulsive, greedy, aggressive, agitating, haughty, defiant, bloodthirsty, evasive, despotic.

All previous defeats are temporary, mere stepping stones, the feeling lurking that somehow they must succeed and thus take over the entire world.

With an envious eye I believe they think China, Russia and the western world and every other nation will succumb to their might, become their prey and recognize them as masters and owners of the universe.

Mr. Matthews deserves our thanks and I hope we are to be favored with more articles from his pen.

Towson To Catonsville In Just 20 Minutes

By ROBERT W. MATTHEWS

Was out Charles St. the other day, near Penn Station, and paused at the viaduct to watch progress being made on the Jones Falls Expressway.

You'd be amazed at how much has been done. The cement roadways are poured already.

This brought to mind the expressways in other cities. Began to wonder whether Baltimore's system will operate on a similar basis.

• • • • •

IN LOS ANGELES, they are called Freeways, and the city is really crisscrossed with them.

Posted speed limits are 65 miles an hour, but this seems to be just a joke.

The airlines limousines travelling the 20 miles between downtown Los Angeles and the International airport make the trek in about 19 minutes, at speeds up to 83 miles an hour.

• • • • •

IN DETROIT, the systems are called Throughways or Expressways. Speed limits here are posted at 65 — and rigidly observed.

A good friend laughingly told me of an incident which happened to him on the Throughways. He was driving along placidly at about 40 miles an hour when he observed a motorcycle policeman tailing him.

To make absolutely sure he wouldn't incur the wrath of the officer, he slowed down a bit, driving as carefully as he could.

The policeman trailed him for about a mile, then pulled him over to the curb — and gave him a ticket for going too slowly.

Seems there is a minimum speed limit of 45 miles an hour on the Throughways.

• • • • •

IF BALTIMORE'S expressways system operates on a similar basis when it is finally completed, you'll be able to travel from Towson to Catonsville in about 20 minutes.

AFRO Credo

A newspaper succeeds because its management believes in itself, in God and in the present generation. It must always ask itself—

Whether it has kept the faith with the common people;

Whether it has no other goal except to see that their liberties are preserved and their future secured;

Whether it is fighting to get rid of slums, to provide jobs for everybody;

Whether it stays out of politics except to expose corruption and political hypocrisy, false prophecies or compromises.

One Way To Get In A Mental Hospital

By JAMES D. WILLIAMS

If perchance I should ever travel again over Route 40, I have promised mineself that I will be armed with suitably impressive looking document bearing the following statement of facts, or a reasonable facsimile.

"This is to certify that the bearer, to my professional knowledge, is not a paranoiac, psychopathic or schizophrenic, nor does he suffer from dandruff; acne or fallen arches.

"In other words, he's sane.

"Dr. Sigmund Freud"

• • •

MY REASON for carrying such a note is simply a matter of self-preservation.

Along the open highway, I might get a craving for a cup of coffee, and as a consequence stop at a roadside restaurant.

If I go into the wrong restaurant seeking service, I'll probably get thrown into jail.

I wouldn't mind going to jail so much, as some of the nicest people I know have gone to jail for committing such a major crime.

However, as soon as they get me in jail, they'll probably move me to a mental hospital, a move that would upset me no end, no end.

That's when I would pull out my certificate of sanity, wave it in my jailer's face, and tell him, in no uncertain terms:

"I got proof that I've got all my buttons and you can't send me to the nut house, so there."

Of course with my luck, I'll probably end up with a jailer who can't read.

• • •

IN MOST states they don't send sane people to mental hospitals, but here in the highly civilized state of Maryland, anything is liable to happen.

This interesting observation is based on the events of the past week which saw three prisoners, who had been arrested for seeking a cup of coffee, sent to Crownsville State Hospital.

In some sections of Maryland, particularly along Route 40, white folks seem to think that when colored folks don't act like they (the white folks) think they should act, then the colored folks are crazy.

Acting like white folks think colored folks should act, does not, at least in Maryland, include staging a fast in protest over an unjust arrest.

This explains why the trio was sent to Crownsville . . . The good white folks just couldn't understand how they could be so stubborn.

• • •

THE MAN who dreamed up the marvelous idea of sending the trio to Crownsville, the Cecil County state's attorney J. Albert Roney Jr., deserves some type of medal for the bonehead play of the week.

Not only did he succeed in once again making Maryland the laughing stock of the nation, he also irritated the officials at Crownsville.

As quickly as possible, the prisoners were given a mental examination, and to nobody's surprise, they were found to be completely sane.

• • •

I'VE HEARD of people being put in jail, being beaten, and being lynched, but so help me George, this is the first time I've ever heard of anyone going to the nut house for asking for a cup of coffee.

Maryland, which has given a number of firsts to the nation, such as the Star Spangled Banner and Gerry Moore, can now take pleasure in inventing a new technique that can be used by the hard-pressed defenders of the status quo.

"When you catch a sit - downer, don't throw him in jail, call the head shrinkers."

Carried to its logical extension, this technique can result in a boom in the building of mental hospitals.

Only trouble is that soon the mental hospitals would be so filled with sane people, they wouldn't have any place to put the real mental cases.

• • •

THIS SITUATION concerning segregation in Maryland is one in which the President is concerned, the State Department is concerned, our allies are concerned, and Dick Gregory is concerned.

About the only person who doesn't seem too concerned, is our dear governor.

Ever since the question of segregated restaurants came to the fore, Governor Tawes' only contribution had been his monumental silence, that would make the late President Calvin Coolidge look like a blabbermouth.

Rarely in the course of human events has one man said so little about such an important situation, affecting so many people.

A Woman Scorned Is To Be Reckoned With

By HERBERT MANGRUM

If there is any truth in the saying, "hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," I know of one man who is going to get it but good and here's why.

A buxom woman wearing toreador pants dropped in at Western the other day to obtain a warrant.

She explained that after she quit her job as a maid in Connecticut to come to Baltimore, her boyfriend had let her down.

The day they met face to face for the first time (They were pen pals), he is supposed to have taken her luggage and her money.

The lady claimed her pen pal said he didn't want her because "You're too ugly for me."

DID YOU CATCH the Play of the Week, "Wingless Victory" on TV Saturday night?

The stars, Eartha Kitt and Hugh (Wyatt Earp) O'Brien were so in love but they never did k-i-s-s.

They held hands and nuzzled but smoocking was off limits.

Things would have been better had they shaken hands.

Nevertheless, I enjoyed the play.

JUST ABOUT THE time the Colts were catching up with the Rams Sunday, I found a few quotes having to do with football.

One quote was attributed to Bob Zuppke who is alleged to have said: "Often an All-American is made by a long run, a weak defense, and a poet in the press box."

This quote is attributed to Lou Little:

"Football is a sensible game — but it is surrounded by crazy people."

Mrs. Cyrus Marshall Sr. (Elizabeth), postcards from Los Angeles, where she is visiting her son and his family. He's Dr. Granville Marshall, the dentist, who has quite a practice on the West Coast.

Word from Denver, Col., says that Dr. and Mrs. Joseph French (Marilyn), who used to be here at Hopkins, are settled there with their four children.

Dr. French, you know, is one of the few pediatric neurologists in the country. He is on the faculty at the University of Colorado.

Lester Norris Sr. and Mrs. Audrey Butler have a date soon with the preacher, sometime in November. They'll live at his Longwood St. home, which is being decorated.

Mr. Norris, is a widower and one of the town's most eligible bachelors, retired from the postal service two weeks ago after 34 years on the job.

Mrs. Butler is the widow of Dr. W. Berkley Butler. Lester Norris Jr., now a social worker in Los Angeles, will come from the Coast for the ceremony.

Convinced that Baltimoreans want to keep at the top of NAACP branches, I find fired with enthusiasm for the forthcoming membership drive, is Miss Gertrude A. Gorman.

Miss Gorman, as of now, is a resident of Baltimore. She comes here from New York, where she has been a national field secretary for ten years.

The NAACP drive opens Oct. 1. Miss Gorman, an affable, businesslike matron, says she believes the 15,000 goal can be doubled.

A native of Cleveland, Miss Gorman is a graduate of Western Reserve University (political philosophy), and of Columbia University, where she majored in political sociology.

Before joining the NAACP, she was an electrical engineer at Wright Field in Dayton, Ohio.

Another new face in our town is that of Mrs. Doris Reese. She is the new director of nurses at Provident Hospital.

Her husband, Paul, is the hospital's new assistant administrator.

The Reeses come to Baltimore from Wilmington, N.C., where he was administrator at the Community Hospital.

Last year, Mrs. Reese was enrolled at Boston University, where she earned her master's degree in nursing education and administration.

• • •

In her new post, Mrs. Reese succeeds Miss J. E. Jorgenson, now a nursing director at Sinai Hospital.

Mrs. Reese is also a graduate of Freedmen's Hospital (D.C.), School of Nursing and Loyola University in Chicago.

She holds membership in the American Nurses' Association, National League of Nursing, and the nurses' national honor society.

Mrs. Reese is a native of Plainfield, N.J. Her husband hails from Columbia, S.C. He is a graduate of Benedict College Northwestern University, and is a registered lab technician.

He succeeds Elliott Roberts, who has joined the Crownsville State Hospital staff.

The Reeses have a daughter, Karen, 13, a student at Bremer Memorial Institute in Sedalia, N.C.

Sinai is a dream

Speaking of Hospitals: Everything you've heard or read about the new Sinai Hospital is TRUE.

It is indeed a dream of a place.

One is struck by the beauty of the institution, and the concern employees show for the sick.

It starts at the front door. A month ago, we accompanied our favorite guy to Sinai.

The nurse who met us after we left the ambulance, was polite and concerned about our welfare.

The same concern was shown by the nurses, doctors and other personnel we met as we went through the admission process.

You know it helps when you're in distress when a kindly voice inquires 'May I help you? or Are you straight now?'

So much better than the curt 'You'll have to wait, a minute,' or 'what are you here for?' which you frequently get in some places.

Sinai has colorfully decorated rooms all air - conditioned and private lavatory and toilet facilities in every room.

Patients are permitted to select their meals from a menu. There are specially designed carts to keep hot meals hot, cold meals cold. Carts have toasters so your bread may be toasted on order.

This you'll like best about Sinai: It has a tradition of 'serving the entire community, regardless of race, color and creed or ability to pay.'

The brown faces you see occupying beds, and at work in numerous departments, indicates that Sinai is living up to its tradition.

For this, the Associated Jewish Charities deserve orchids.

• • •

More Sinai facts: The hospital can accommodate 483 patients, 91 babies.

Location is on a 50 - acre tract of land.

There are facilities to park 650 cars.

The hospital, at Greenspring and Belvedere Aves. is just 25 minutes from the heart of the city.

There are pneumatic tubes which facilitate transmission of messages, medical records etc., and elevators— 16 of them — all self - service.

But most important: People at Sinai are kind... kind ... kind They make a person in distress feel at home, and for this, they deserve special praise.

Devoted son's thanks

Mrs. Mary J. Sampson was 85 years old when she died on Aug. 29.

Her son in-the Rev. Daniel L. Rideout, administrative secretary to the Rt. Rev. Edgar A. Love, resident bishop of the Baltimore Area, Methodist Church.

In a letter to friends this week thanking them for their kind remembrances, Dr. Rideout recalls glorious moments with his mom.

• • •

He writes: "... she loved people — all people, and had a friendly word of greeting for all persons whom she saw pass her door, even in a metropolitan city.

"And perfect strangers might as well have been prepared for an introduction to her son, if he happened to be around, and a lecture on what a "wonderful child" he was.

"How we hope some day to make reasonable approach to the pedestal on which she placed us!

"Mom was humble, gentle, peaceable. She never quarreled with anyone in her life. She had boundless energy, but expended it all to bring joy and happiness to others.

"In the years of her failing health, she never experienced pain. She was "plumb tuckered out."

"I had a sister who died in Mom's arms in our parsonage home. I hoped I would be around when Mom breathed her last, that she might die in my arms.

• • •

"At 85, Mom was still keeping house, caring for the welfare of roomers in her home. It was not easy to see her lie helpless for two weeks, the desire to live apparently gone, not being fully aware of where she was.

"Though comfortable situated in her own home and bed, she was expecting her Brother (her son) to "take her home."

"The last 24 hours of her sojourn here on earth, she was in a coma.

The last 24 hours before that, the only words I heard her say were, My son, be a precious one indeed ." That memory will always Isn't that a lovely tribute!

Iotas given reports about nat'l meeting

Baltimore Iotas were given a resume of the August national convention at Pittsburgh when they assembled for their first fall meeting Saturday at the residence of Soror Evelyne Wilkey.
