Municipal Courts

Judge Aaron disposed of these case at Western on Monday:

William H. Buckner Jr., a 49-year-old stevedore of the 2700 block Harlem Ave. was held on $5,000 bail for action of the grand jury on charges of assaulting and robbing an 80-year-old man of his wallet and automobile. Police said William B. Betz of the 200 block S. Highland Ave. reported that he was struck and thrown from his car at Albert St. and Rayner Ave. Sunday night after he had asked a man for directions to Highlandtown. The injured man's car and wallet was recovered near the Western District station approximately 10 minutes after the loss had been reported. The driver identified as Buckner was taken into custody.

Robert L. Cole of the 400 block Alhambra Ave. was granted a postponement until Friday on charges of straking a patrolman with his automobile on August 11. Bail for Mr. Cole, who is also charged with larceny of an electric drill and a saw belonging to Howard Craig, was continued at $5,000.

Bernard (Jungle Jim) Jackson, 72, of the 900 block Pennington Ave. was fined $10 and costs for junking without a permit.

Freddie Parker, 18, of the 700 block Bartlett Ave. and David J. Moore, 18, of the 600 block N. Gilmor St. pleaded guilty and were fined $100 and costs each for the attempted larceny of an automobile belonging to Ransom Williams of the 1500 block Riggs Ave.

Hammarskjold's Death Senseless and Ironic

By CHUCK STONE

It is possible for the whole of humanity to personally feel the loss of a devoted and close friend, this emotion washed over the world this week.

The senseless and ironic death of Dag Hammarskjold so tragically huge in its consequences, left the family of nations dumbfounded, bewildered, and actually afraid.

At critical junctures like this in history, mankind seeks to cling precariously to the belief that "no man is indispensable."

Dag Hammarskjold was.

Without his steadying hand at the helm, the United Nations must agonizingly seek a new personality, a new modus operandi.

It is the measure of Mr. Hammarskjold's greatness that no nation, no leader, now knows where the U.N. is headed. Dag Hammarskjold almost single-handedly had sculptured the U.N. into a growing effective instrument for world peace.

• • •

BURDENED with a Charter which failed to precisely spell out his duties (Article 99 merely asserts that "the secretary general may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security"), Mr. Hammarskjold successfully met a body-wearying succession of crises, using his cool, sometime infuriatingly impersonal judgment.

Despite an abrupt personality, more the result of shyness than diffidence, Dag Hammarskjold loved humanity, the United Nations, and his work. He was always charming, eternally polite (remember Khruschev's insulting accusations against him which he gently, but firmly rejected)?

I didn't always agree with his decisions, though I always respected the manner in which he pursued their conclusions.

• • •

THE most ironic aspect of his death is that he died as the result of a policy in the Congo for which he bore major responsibility.

• • • •

The deceased Patrice Lumumba had called in the U.N. troops on July 10 last year to help him keep a ragged peace and preserve the autonomy of the infant Congo nation.

The next day, July 11, Moise Tshombe, Belgian's private Uncle Tom, led the mine-rich Katanga Province into secession.

Dag Hammarskjold

• • • •

AT this point, Tshombe's revolt should have been crushed by U.N. troops.

But Dag Hammarskjold never made this next step. A thorough, but slow-moving human being, he insisted on forcing the U.N. to give him the instructions. Diplomats agree today that he had both the power and the mandate to prevent Katanga's secession.

This would have unquestionably meant the consolidation of the then pro-Soviet Lumumba's regime and the first real representative toe-hold in Africa by the Communists.

Are we any better off, is the world any more secure today because Mr. Hammarskjold chased a pro-Western policy to his death?

Had he never elected to meet with Tshombe in the first place, thereby cloaking this white man's puppet with respectability, Katanga could not have lasted in arrogant independence.

And Dag Hammarskjold would be alive today.

The senselessness of Hammarskjold's death is its failure to solve; its absence of finality.

When the Belgian mercenaries conspired to kill Hammarskjold, what did they expect — that the world would bow in obsequious deference to their idiotic attempts at balkanization?

They merely postponed colonialism's funeral and Tshombe will be remembered in history as one of the last of the "Red Hot Uncle Toms."

Our evening together

I can only feel about Dag Hammarskjold's death the way I felt when Franklin Roosevelt died, like a child frightened by the death of his parents, wondering who's going to take care of me now?

There's a piece of this man's personality that I was privileged to share one evening and I'll never forget it.

During the few times I saw him last year while working on special projects at the U.N., he occasionally alluded to that "harried evening in Gaza."

Back in August 1956, I was working in the Gaza strip. The Suez Canal crisis was about to explode and a U.N. plane was sent into Gaza to fly me to Beirut, Lebanon.

On the plane was Dag Hammarskjold.

We chatted about the Egyptian-Israel conflict and he invited me to have dinner with him that evening.

Also joining us was a Greek (whom I can only remember as Connie) who was director of the U.N. refugee program in Lebanon, and his sister. Because the sister did not speak English, Mr. Hammarskjold gallantly suggested we converse in French.

I can almost recall the exact words I wrote to my mother that night in the hotel: "This must take the record for some kind of international togetherness — a Swede, two Greeks, an American colored man all speaking French at dinner in the Arab country of Lebanon."

Just before we parted, I kidded Mr. Hammarskjold about the guns on both the Gaza and Israel sides which had been trained on our plane before we took off in Gaza. "We could have gotten killed out there," I said.

"Mr. Stone, the cause of peace ironically can sometimes demand one's life," he said.

It did and Dag Hammarskjold died, working to the last for a world which has yet to demonstrate it deserved the dedication and love of this wonderful man.

Frigidaire opens new, modern offices for D. C.-Baltimore area

The Baltimore - Washington Branch of the Frigidaire Sales Corporation will occupy a new, modern headquarters building at 6710 Moravia Road, Baltimore, on Monday, Oct. 2 according to J. A. Mitzelfelt, the Branch Manager.

Mr. Mitzelfelt pointed out the new building, which will serve as sales, service and distribution headquarters for Frigidaire appliances throughout the District of Columbia and a six-state area, is a modern brick and steel structure with approximately 20,000 square feet of floor space.

He said that approximately 10,000 square feet of floor area will be given over to offices, product display and a modern home economics kitchen. The remaining 10,000 square feet will be occupied by an efficiently-planned service parts warehousing facility, complete with truck loading docks.

One of the new building's features is the product display area which can be converted into a large meeting room for dealer, sales and service activities.

The new headquarters building, which was erected by P. Frederick Obrecht and Sons, of Baltimore, is located in Moravia Industrial Park with easy accessibility to Pulaski Highway, North-East Expressway and other main traffic arteries.

Also, there is a paved parking facility which will accommodate 100 passenger automobiles, Mr. Mitzelfelt said.

"Our move into the new headquarters building in Moravia Industrial Park reflects the importance Frigidaire attaches to the expanding Baltimore - Washington market," Mr. Mitzelfelt declared. "This new facility will make it possible for Frigidaire to better serve its many retail dealers and their customers throughout the entire territory."

In addition to the immediate Baltimore area and the District of Columbia, the Branch territory covers most of Maryland and Delaware, the eastern half of Virginia, and segments of southern Pennsylvania, West Virginia and North Carolina.

Frigidaire's Baltimore - Washington Branch, which formerly occupied quarters at 2315 Cecil Avenue, Baltimore, handles all sales, service and distribution of the company's major household appliance including refrigerators, food freezers, room air conditioners, electric ranges, washers, electric and gas dryers, dishwashers and food waste disposers along with broad lines of built - in products.

G. W. Queen, mortician, buried here Thursday

Funeral services were held Thursday at 12 noon at Emmanuel Christian Community Church for George Washington Queen, 64, 2334 W. Lafayette Ave., who died Saturday at his home. Burial is in the Baltimore National Cemetery.

Mr. Queen was a local mortician for more than 40 years. At the time of his death he was associated with the Arlington S. Phillips Funeral Home.

BORN SEPT. 21, 1897 in Easton, Md., Mr. Queen is the son of the late James Alexander Queen Jr. and Lydia Tittie Johnson Queen. He received his early education in Easton and came to Baltimore at an early age.

At first he was associated with Trinity AME Church and then joined Emmanuel Church during the pastorage of the late Rev. Wilbur H. Waters.

At Emmanuel, he was a member of the Stansbury Chorus, the Men's Advisory Council, and was vice-president of the Business People's Council. He was also president of the Schroeder Charity Club and member of the board of directors of the Funeral Directors and Embalmers Association.

He was a veteran of both World War I and II.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Thelma Queen; a sister, Mrs. Maude Howard, New York; two nieces, Mrs. Thelma Turner, Baltimore; Mrs. Vivian Washington, New York; a nephew, John Queen Jr., Baltimore.

Municipal Courts

The following cases were heard by Judge Howard L. Aaron at Western Wednesday:
