Advance Savings and Loan proves that "it can be done"

The Advance Savings and Loan Association was founded by public - spirited citizens who knew that a strong financial institution could assist in providing better housing conditions and more employment for the members of the colored community of Baltimore.

They decided to make certain that Fortune magazine would not be able to repeat the statement that it made in 1956 that colored people here had but two real businesses —a newspaper and a sausage factory.

"Further challenged substantial businesses in these cities when it said that we would develop many views of the large colored population and the high average income of the population if we had financial institutions to support the firms.

* * *

DR. W. O. BRYSON JR., head of the Department of Economics and Business at Morgan State College, has served as president and chairman of the Board of the Institution since January, 1959.

During this time, the number of accounts has increased from 572 to 1848, the amount of money in shareholders' accounts from $36,593 to $206,000, the assets from $36,593 to $623,000, and the surplus from $148 to $8,000.

The president, who receives no compensation, manages the Association in the interest of the shareholders and makes recommendations to the Executive Committee in regard to government security purchases.

Daniel W. Spaulding, executive vice - president serves as chairman of the Committee on Loans and Investments. He considers all loan applications, makes inspections of properties and makes recommendations to the executive committee upon each application for a mortgage loan, improvement loan, and in regard to buying a ground rent that the Association receives.

The fact that the institution has no mortgage loans in default is a tribute to his skill in this area.

NAACP to probe bias

By EDWARD PEEKS

WASHINGTON

The D.C. NAACP will investigate charges of racial discrimination in the U.S. Employment Service for the District (USESD).

"I'm going to seek a conference with Mr. Hetzel for a look into the matter," the AFRO was told this week by the Rev. E. Franklin Jackson, NAACP president, referring to Fred J. Hetzel, USESD director.

The Rev. Mr. Jackson said the organization will probe the question as a result of a story last week in this paper based on complaints by a group of USESD employees.

* * *

THEY CHARGED that the employment service is "one of the most discriminatory agencies in Washington" with respect to hiring and promotion, also job referrals.

Mr. Hetzel denied the charges, saying office and personnel records would refute complaints of unfairness and discrimination.

"We refer qualified applicants to jobs, but if employers don't take them, then that's something else again," he told the AFRO on Wednesday.

Some employers refuse to accept colored workers, including waitresses and clerks, he said.

"We use persuasion and do what we can to see that qualified applicants are hired, regardless of race or creed," he stated.

* * *

HE FURTHER denied that the agency cooperates with private employers who ask for white workers only.

Complainants charged that more than 250 jobs stood gegging on USESD job orders, which could be filled by local qualified applicants.

In addition to 200 vacancies, the list includes 50 telephone operator trainees, also eight hostesses for hotel and restaurant service, plus a number of clerks and stenographers for government.

These jobs and others were "put in clearance," meaning that they are being circulated in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and North Carolina.

* * *

"IF YOU know any qualified applicants, send them to us and we'll direct them to the right people," Mr. Hetzel said.

He explained that open-ings for telephone operator-trainees require that the applicant pass a clerical examination given by the agency. Successful applicants are referred to the Chesapeake Company.

MR. HETZEL repeated his contention that USESD has a larger percentage of colored personnel in the upper grades than any other agency in Washington.

There are 25 whites in USESD in grade 11, and above as compared with five colored, not 35 whites as reported in previous story, he said.

Complainants charged that within the agency Mr. Hetzel had released over the years to promotion non-whites who were in the positions to another, though a large percentage of them have college training as compared with a small percentage of whites.

They said the promotion policy and other problems were taken five months ago to officials in the Department of Labor by Local 12, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.
